Poetry.

SUMMER.

The pen of Summer, diamond-tipped,
  Has busy been day after day,
As one by one the hours have slipped
  Their beads upon Time's rosary.
A few more days will tell them all—
  Her last sweet song will soon be penned;
As Summer verges close to Fall,
  The book is verging toward The End.

Such beauteous songs of flowers and birds,
  Of leafy woods and babbling brooks,
As she has fashioned in quaint words,
  In this her choicest of all books!
Her choicest of all books, I say,
  Because no Summer gone before
Has been so prized day after day
  My heart was fain to live it o'er.

The truest poet Nature is;
  Hour after hour her skilful pen
Thrills up to that estatic bliss
  We never find in songs of men.
Bound in the sky's own gold and blue,
  Each song a song of perfectness—
Year after year a volume new
  Is issued from her busy press.

This slipping now the Summer's grasp,
  With rhyme and rhythm is so sweet,
It only needs the golden clasp
  Of Autumn-time to be complete.

Receipts, Wit, &c.

LEMON CAKE. One cup of butter, three cups of sugar, rubbed to a cream; stir into it the yolks of five well-beaten eggs, dissolve a teaspoonful of soda in a teacup of milk, then add the milk and the grated peel of one lemon, the whites of five eggs, sifting in as lightly as possible four teacupfuls of flour. This will make four long tins full.

ICE CREAM. One quart of new milk, one quart of cream, four eggs, three-fourths of a pound of sugar. Boil the milk and add eggs and sugar well beaten together. When cold add flavoring and freeze.

FOR RHEUMATISM. David Webster, of Floyd, furnishes the following receipt for rheumatism and says it is a perfect cure: "One-half pint of sweet oil and one ounce of saltpetre well mixed. Rub the affected parts well with it. The saltpetre should be well pulverized before mixing. Bottle well and shake before using.

☞ Silk, or anything which has silk in it should be washed in water almost cold. Hot water turns silk yellow. It may be washed in suds made of nice white soap; but no soap should be put upon it. Avoid the use of hot irons in smoothing silk. Either rub the article dry with a soft cloth, or put them between towels and press them with weights.

☞ "John P. Brady gave me a black walnut box of quite a size." Nothing remarkable about it, however, except that the sentence contains all the letters of the alphabet.

☞ When a woman goes visiting she wants shoes fully two sizes too small; but it's astounding what a deal of comfort the same woman can extract from a pair of slippers three sizes too large, in her own house.

☞ In struggling to make a dull-brained boy understand what conscience is, a teacher finally asked: "What makes you feel uncomfortable, after you have done wrong?" "Father's leather strap," feelingly replied the boy.

☞ They grow some rather tall women beyond the Mississippi. An accidental poet writes that he "kissed the clouds from her sweet, fair face." It seemed almost incredible that he could, just by standing upon her face, kiss the clouds, but truth and poetry are inseparable, and we are bound to believe.

☞ "See how I ride o'er the raging mane!" exclaimed the man who was thrown over his horse's head into a ditch on the other side of the fence.

☞ To make a fine eye water—stick an onion on it.

☞ "It iz the little bits ov things that fret and worry us,' says Josh Billings; 'we kan dodge an elephant, but we kan't a fly."

☞ It is always the big fellows that gets to the front in the crowd. Look at the strawberry box for instance; the little ones are always at the bottom.

☞ A newly married lady was telling another how nicely her husband could write. "Oh, you should see some of his love-letters." "Yes, I know," was the freezing reply; "I've got a bushel of 'em in my trunk." Tableau.

☞ An Irish gentleman having a small picture room, several persons desired to see it at the same time. "Faith, gentlemen," said he, 'if you all go in it will not hold you."

☞ Any man pays too much for his whistle when he has wet it fifteen or twenty times a day.

☞ A Connecticut man refused fourteen long years to let his wife speak to a neighbor, for fear some of them would be friendly enough to want to borrow a drawing of tea.

☞ Kind words cost nothing; they are easier to use than any other. They won't blister the tongue, or aggravate the children or servants. People who talk loud and threaten use weak weapons. Kindness, flavored with love, is the true principle for the home circle, or, indeed, elsewhere.

Miscellany.

RUTH'S FLIRTATION.

Before Ruth Pennington accepted Dr. Howard she had certainly flirted with Ralph Barlow, and he had some reason to be angry and indignant, but he should have been man enough to let the girl alone, and cease from absurd and unavailing reproaches. However, he was not; and day by day, hour by hour, she lived in dread of him, never knowing when she might meet his scowling face in the villiage street, or what sweet hour he might poison with those angry accusations, which were all the more bitter for being in a measure true.

However, Ruth's friends upheld her, for Harry Howard was a fine fellow, whose antecedents every one knew—his father the favorite physician of the place before him; his married sister, Mrs. Marchmont, the being who dazzled their eyes with bonnets and dresses absolutely just from Paris; while old Mrs. Howard was the Lady Bountiful of the place, dispensed flannels to the poor, hunted up starving negroes and children going to the dogs for want of education, and gave them bread and schooling, and headed contributions for superanuated clergymen and widows who had seen better days.

A really respected family were the Howards, and Ralph Barlow was just no one knew who—a fellow who seemed to have money enough, but who for all that was without any introduction whatever. Handsome, too; but not just the man that people wanted to see dangling after their girls, and when Ruth had that flirtation with him she led a terrible life at home.

No girl likes to be scolded and preached to and threatened by those who are her guardians, and doubtless this influenced Ruth no little; and now all was so smooth and easy; and like most grave men, Dr. Howard had more in him than appeared on the surface, and a fonder and more attentive lover than she had hoped. She loved him now, and her fleeting fancy for Ralph was a thing of the past. The wedding day was fixed, the wedding dress nearly done, and Ruth would have been perfectly happy but for Ralph's haunting. Knowing that she had once given him reason to think she liked him—indeed, knowing that she had, she could not use him as she would another, and complain of him to her father or brother; and the last time he had crossed her path, he had caught her by the arm and held her fast, and told her that she must either break with Dr. Howard or take the consequences.

"You shall never marry him, Ruth," he said, "never;" and this time Ruth who before had only wept and trembled, defied him.

"I'm not afraid of you, Ralph," said she, "I will have a protector soon, who will put an end to your threats and punish you for annoying me."

"Don't talk of him to me, girl," cried Ralph, and he caught her by the wrist and held her, so that for a moment she quite understood how powerless a woman is in the hands of a strong man; and they were alone far from any house, with thick trees on one side and a bubbling brook on the other.

But he dropped her hand again, and folded his arms and laughed.

"Little fool," said he.

"Great brute, to try to frighten me," she cried, and sped away. After that she would never go far alone.

Two days at least between the present and her wedding eve, when after dark, as she sat upon the porch waiting for her lover, and hoping that none of those calls that often carried the doctor miles away when he least desired it, would keep him from her that evening, a small boy ran up the garden path, and addressed her:

"You'r Ruth Pennington, ain't you?"

"Yes," she said "I am."

"Then said he "the doctor is outside in his carriage, and he says he want's you to ride with him, and he can't leave his horse. Won't you put on your hat and come, he says?"

"Tell him I'll be there in a moment," said Ruth, and ran into the room where her mother sat.

"I'm going out to ride with Harry, ma," said she, catching up a hat and shawl that lay on the lounge, stood before the mirror to put them on.

Nobody will see you to-night," said Mrs. Pennington. "What a night it is for a ride—dark as pitch."

"Not on the road, ma," said Ruth, and hurried off.

But it was dark—so dark that after the streak of light from the parlor lamp had ended, she could literally see nothing.

She found the latch of the garden gate by feeling for it, and stepped outside. There under the poplars, stood a dark object, a sort of silhouette of carriage, horse and driver, all in one piece. She approached it; a hand met hers and helped her in.

"Oh, how dark it is, I can't see you, Harry," she said.

Then the arm went around her waist and drew her close. It was no unwonted thing, and surely it was right for promised wife to yield to the embrace—and nestle her head on the broad shoulder.

"I suppose it will be lighter on the road," said she.

The answer was that unspellbound sound that people use for the affirmative when they do not want to speak—and the carriage dashed away furiously.

"Why do you drive so fast, Harry?" she asked as they whirled through the village, the window-lights flashing past them—as it seemed—each a blurred star, no more, "The horse is not running away dear?"

The arm tightened about her, but no word was spoken.

"Why don't you say something, Harry?" she said. "I'm frightened. Nothing has happened?"

"Nothing was answered in a sort of whisper.

"But I know something has" said she.

"You never behaved so before. I am trembling. See how I tremble. I am cold all over. Harry, please speak."

Still the carriage whirled on—still there was silence, and now the village was passed. They were alone on a lonely road, and faster and faster still they drove on. The thought if her betrothed lover had suddenly gone mad thrust itself like a stab into Ruth's heart. Oh if she could but see his face.

"Harry," she said falteringly; "Harry, won't you go back now? It is so dark. I'm so tired of driving, Harry."

Suddenly he bent toward her.

"Kiss me," said he.

She lifted up her lips, as she did so straining her eyes toward his face, the black clouds overhead suddenly parted, and from between them peeped the moon at her full; and Ruth saw by the white and ghastly light the face of Ralph Barlow.

It was he who sat beside her. She understood quite well how she had been tricked. She was miles from home and in his power. He had fulfilled his threat of vengeance.

"So you are surprised," said he, with a laugh. "Come, make up your mind to it. I was good enough for you once. You have kissed me before, lassie. All's fair in love and war, you know. I'll not make you a bad husband. I love you my dear, or I'd never have done this. So good bye to the doctor."

"Ralph Barlow, I hate you," cried Ruth. "I was fool enough to like you once, I hate you now. I'll say no. "I'll tell the minister you carried me off. What a fool you are to think a girl can be married without her consent. Take me back at once. I'm to marry Dr. Howard on Wednesday."

"Indeed," said Ralph. "Reflect a moment. You will then have been away with me two days. I scarcely think Dr. Howard will want a wife who has been away with another man two days. I think by that time you will be quite willing to say yes. Come, once you liked the notion. Those steady-going Yankee parents chose the doctor for you—that's all. We'll have a merry life together, plenty of money, jolly times. Come make up your mind to it.

"Harry will think I've played him false," said Ruth. "Harry will believe me such a wicked girl."

"Just so," said Ralph.

"And mother and father!" moaned Ruth. "Oh, Ralph, take me back home, and I'll pray for you every day of my life."

"I'd rather you would kiss me every day," said Ralph. "No, I'll never go back with you."

Then he drove on faster than before; and though Ruth uttered scream after scream, and strove in her despair to cast herself into the road, the cries spent themselves on empty air, and the strong arm around her waist made her struggles utterly useless.

At last she ceased to cry out, and sat perfectly quiet; but it was not as Ralph supposed, that she had yielded to fate. She was watching intently for the next house that they would pass, hoping that some one would hear the desperate screams that she would utter.

At last she saw it—a square white building, in the upper windows of which a light burned brightly, for there people watched by one who suffered. Beside the bed sat the husband holding the hand of the wife whom he had feared that he must lose, but who was now in safety. At the foot the physican ready to depart happy in the good work he had performed.

"Good-bye until to-morrow," he said, "I think you will sleep well to-night, dear lady."

"Good bye, Dr. Howard," said the gentleman, grasping his hand. I'm sorry you have such a long, lonely ride before you."

Then Dr. Howard ran down stairs and went out to his carriage. A stout Irishman stood holding the reins.

"God bless your honor," he said. "They tell me that you have saved the missus' life no less.

"With God's help I have done something," said the physician. "Well, others are as late as I upon the road, Pat."

"Yis, and—the Lord save us, what's that?"

For, as the man was about to answer, a woman leaned from the carriage that flew past and uttered a terrible cry of,

"Help—save me! Help!"

"It's a rale throuble, or jest some desloute craythur making a disturbance?" said Pat.

"It's is real terror," said the doctor.

"Come, Pat—into the wagon with me and after them.

"I'm not afraid," said Pat "but doccther, dear we might get into a tough scrimmage."

"Well you'd like that, Pat," said the doctor.

"But they say you're bride is waiting for you, docther dear," said Pat. "And 'tisn't a broken head or nose you'd like to take to a wedding."

The doctor gave one thought to Ruth; then, "For her sake, all women," said he, and they were flying after the other carriage. The chase was not long. Their horse was fresh, the other weary.

In fifteen minutes they were side by side.

"Who cried for help?" said the doctor.

A struggling form in the carriage stretched out its hand to him.

"Harry! Harry!" she cried.

"It is Ruth," shouted the doctor; and then he had clutched the reins, and the man in the other carriage arose to his feet.

"Let go your hold!" he shouted. "I am armed."

A pistol flashed in the moonlight, which shone still, though dimly.

"He will kill you, Harry!" cried Ruth.

"Yes, by heaven!" cried Ralph Barlow, "I will."

The Irishman, undaunted, had sprung to the horses' heads.

"I can't hold them much longer, yer honor," he cried. "They're mad—the both of them."

Then there was the sound of a pistol—a blaze, the smoke of gunpowder—and Ruth fainted away.

When she recovered, Dr. Howard held her in his arms, and the Irishman stood near, rubbing his head and looking utterly bewildered.

There was no sound of either of the horses. On the firing of the pistol both had run away, but by this time Dr. Howard was on the ground, and had clutched Ruth about the waist. They were thrown to the earth, and the bullet had grazed the doctor's cheek, and cut the ribbon of Ruth's hat in two, but otherwise they were unhurt.

The Irishman had been knocked senseless by a kick from one of the horses, and what had become of Ralph Barlow was not known.

A few hours afterwards he was found dead among the debris of his carriage, his dead horse beside him at the foot of a precipice, past which the road wound half a mile further on.

Poor Ruth, conscience stricken and shaken in every nerve, really felt as though it would be wrong to play the role of bride so soon; but the doctor stood firm and claimed her on the proper day; and her wild ride through the night and the terrible scene that followed it, seems almost a dream to her now when she recalls it. Only no daughter of Ruth Howard will ever flirt, if she can help it.

Flirtation, says Ruth, is nothing less than a crime.

For the Patriot.

The Prince Imperial.

Undoubtedly the death of the Prince Imperial is an event of the highest political importance. Although deplorable in itself, and deeply affecting, yet it must be regarded as saving France from many possible dangers. Since the days of the great Napoleon, the name of Bonaparte has been a magical one in France. Not even the crime of the "2d of December," nor all the misgovernment of the Third Napoleon, nor the final downfall at Sedan, could divest multitudes of French men of a burning feeling of loyalty and attachment to the name of Napoleon.

In the struggles for supremacy which followed the close of the Franco-German war, it was early seen that victory must finally lie either with the Bonapartists or the Republicans. The strength of the Orleanists, and the Bourbons, either separately, or after their fusion, was inconsiderable, when compared with the great majorities of the Bonapartists or the Republicans. The final establishment of the Septenuate in 1873, was a substantial triumph for Republicanism, and since that date its power and popularity have steadily grown. Republicanism tried by the best of all tests, that of actual experiment, has commended itself to the good sense of the Frenchmen, while it has awakened the sympathetic admiration of mankind.

Still, the existence of the Prince Imperial, representing as he did the hopes and aims and purposes of the Bonapartists, could not but be a standing menace to the peace and security of the young republic, and a source of numberless possible evils in the future. Thus while his death, as a domestic event, must fill all hearts with sorrow, his life having been pure and blameless, and its sudden close, unlooked for and tragic. As a political event we cannot fail to observe that it frees France from some of the gravest dangers which threatened her future.

Home.

Let your home be provided with such necessaries as piety, pickles, potatoes, pots and kettles, brushes, brooms, benevolence, bread, charity, cheese, crackers, faith, flour, affection, cider, sincerity, onions, integrity, vinegar, spice and wisdom. Have all these always on hand, and happiness will be with you. Don't drink anything intoxicating—eat moderately, go about your business after you eat your breakfast—lounge a little after dinner—chat after tea—and kiss after quarreling; and all the joy, the peace, and the blessings the earth can afford shall be yours, till the grave closes over you, and your spirits are borne to a brighter and happier world.

Good Advice for Boys.

A bit of advice to young men who are trying to get ahead in the world is as follows:

Never complain that your employers are selfish. Not that they are otherwise, but it will not help matters to growl about it. They are selfish. Their employers, when they were young, were no doubt selfish, and from them they learned the lesson. You, too, will learn it, and when you become employers you'll be selfish, too. It is from selfish motives that men engage in trade, and selfishness rules all their actions. Of course it would be better, and wiser, and all that, if they would not be selfish, but they are.

Now, what are you going to do about it? Why, make it better for their selfish interest to do better by you, and they will. Respect yourself, and they will respect you. Remember, you are at a disadvantage; that hundreds are ready to climb into your place if you do not fill it, and that those who employ you are fully aware of the fact and are ready to make the most of it they can. Remember that if you are getting $300 this year and want $500 next year, you've got to earn $500 this year. You've got to pay for promotion—often an exhorbitant price; and, as you have no other means to pay with, you have got to pay in work. Of course, it is unjust; of course it seems hard that your employer should keep and spend the money that you have justly earned; but, our word for it, it don't pay to growl about it.

Never be satisfied with having "earned your money." Earn more than your money, and then in a manly, straightforward, business-like way, ask for more pay. Ten chances to one, you'll get it. If you don't, look about, and as soon as you have found a better place, discharge your employer. The hard work that you have done, the record of it, and the reputation you have established for hard work will make the task of finding new employment a comparatively easy one. Your capacity for work is your only capital. Invest heavily and you are sure to win in the end.

The Whirligig of Fortune.

In a large retail dry goods house in this city are two persons who, a few years since, occupied very different positions. One, a man over fifty years of age, is a salesman on a salary of less than one thousand dollars a year; the other, a young man of six and twenty years of age, receives a salary upwards of twenty-five hundred dollars. Five years ago the salesman was a partner in a wholesale concern that went into insolvency and out of existence, each partner of which was left without a dollar for the support of his family. The young man had occupied a humble position in that concern, and one cold day he allowed his dinner to get scorched while warming it at the furnace in the basement. Soon the smell of burnt meat went up to the counting room, which so exasperated our salesman that he rushed down stairs, and seizing the offender by the collar, brought him up and ejected him from the store. Such severe treatment made the lad feel rather "cut up," as he was the principal support of his invalid mother. Not long afterward, however, he attracted the attention of his present employer, who engaged him at a fair salary, which he kept increasing until his present handsome position. Thus, from the changes and depressions of trade, the young man is up and the elder one is down. We doubt if there is a more striking instance of the vicissitudes of business life than the above.—Boston Commonwealth.

A SNAKE IN A MAN'S EYE. John J. Andrews, a merchant of Philadelphia, has been blind in the left eye for twenty years or more, and during the past two years he has at intervals suffered the most intense agony. Scores of doctors looked at and prescribed for the eye but without doing it any good, until recently an eminent surgeon of Philadelphia removed from the eye a live cysticercus, or embryo tape-worm. This is the first authenticated case of cysticercus, in the human eye that has ever occurred on the American continent, although there have been a hundred or more cases reported in Europe, particuluarly in Prussia. Mr. Andrews' case is, in every way, similar to the case of the 'snake' in a horse's eye, which was reported about a year ago, except that in the case of the horse the parasite in the eye was, the doctors said, a common long round worm, while that in the gentleman's eye was a larval tape-worm.

LEAVE IT OPEN. "Yes," observed the boy as he went down stairs, "this is a world of changes. It wasn't over three months ago that that ere lawyer gin me a blowin' up cos I didn't shut the door when I went out, and now he turns around and jaws cos I didn't leave it wide open. I don't know nuthin 'bout law, but seems to me these ere fellers who can't stick to one thing more'n three months at a time can't be of much 'count."

OLD LADY. "Ah, you bad boy, draggin' your little brother along like that. S'posin you was to kill him?"

BAD BOY. "Don't care. Got another in doors."

SATURDAY, JULY 5, 1879.

Short communications and items of new earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.

☞ Anonymous communications are not published.

IMPROVEMENTS. The lot on the corner of Hancock and Canal streets, will soon undergo a great change. Hon. Wm. A. Hodges, the owner of the estate, has bought a lot of land on Elm street, of Mrs. Gridley Totman, adjoining her residence, where he will remove the house. The large barn has been purchased by H. H. Faxon, Esq., who will remove it to his land, adjoining the bake house.

Mr. Hodges then intends erecting a handsome house, with modern improvements on the lot, for his own occupancy. We learn that Warren D. Higgins has the plans for the same.

PICNIC. The Sunday School, connected with Rev. Mr. Norton's Society, visited Downer Landing on Tuesday last, and had a very pleasant time. The day was invigorating and all returned thankful for the many hours they had been permitted to enjoy at this beautiful and healthy resort.

BAND CONCERT. The Belknap Brass Band, under the leardership of Mr. Henry C. Brown of Boston, entertained the citizens of West Quincy with some excellent music on Tuesday evening last. A large crowd of spectators were present and all were of the opinion that the members had improved wonderfully. They will soon give another concert.

PICNIC. The stone-cutters' picnic which occurs at Lovell's Grove, Quincy Point, on July 4th, promises to be a grand success. They will form into line on Franklin street, and then march to the Square, where the Weymouth Band will give a band concert. Excellent speakers will be present at the grove. All kinds of sports will be indulged in.

DEDICATED. The beautiful soldiers' monument which Messrs. Thomas & Owens of this town executed for West Bridgewater, is to be dedicated on Friday, the 4th inst. The oration on this occasion will be delivered by Gen. Horace Binney Sargent of Salem.

REGATTA. There will be a Union Regatta off Quincy Great Hill on the Fourth, coming at 10.30 A. M. If the weather is favorable a large gathering is expected. There will be three prizes in each class. A large number of yachts from other clubs are to be present.

KNIGHTS OF HONOR. At the regular meeting of Wollaston Lodge, No. 926, K. of H., held last Monday evening, the following gentlemen were elected officers for the ensuing term:

Geo. C. Whittemore, Dictator.
J. C. Bates, Vice Dictator.
J. H. Roberts, Assistant Dictator.
E. A. King, Reporter.
H. A. Randall, Financial Reporter.
H. C. Litchfield, Treasurer.
C. A. Sherman, Chaplain.
Samuel Brown, Guide.
Frank Howe, Guardian.
J. P. Edgerton, Sentinel.
W. J. Wellington, Past Dictator.

MILTON. The regular weekly glass ball shoot of the East Milton sporting club took place Saturday evening. Each man shot at 10 balls. The score: J. S. Pierce, 7; H. E. Sheldon, 6; G. Badger, 5; F. Badger, 5; T. Hollis, 4.

RESIGNATION. Amos S. White, Esq., of Weymouth, has resigned the position of Treasurer of the Weymouth and Braintree Savings Bank. Mr. White has filled this position for 34 years, and only his severe sickness necessitated and called for his resignation. The following changes have been made in the Board of Management:— James Humphrey, President of the Board of Trustees, has become one of the Trustees, and Eben Denton, one of the Trustee, has been appointed President; Charles T. Crane as Treasurer and Clerk in place of Mr. White. These appointments are calculated to give the greatest satisfaction to the public, and particularly to depositors.

SILVER LAKE GROVE. The Stoughton Musical Society will hold a reunion at Silver Lake Grove, on Tuesday next, July 8th. A train will leave this town at 8.20 A. M., and the fare will be eighty cents for the round trip.

There will be a concert by the singing members of the Society, assisted by an efficient orchestra, in the Pavilion, during the forenoon, consisting of familiar selections from the "Centennial Collection," (which please carry) interspersed with the following popular melodies:

"Star Spangled Banner," by Marcus A. Perkins of Braintree.

The "Marseilles Hymn," by J. Morton Packard of Stoughton.

"America."

The Committee most cordially invite the members, their friends and the various Sabbath-Schools, their teachers and their pastors within our borders, to join in rendering this reunion one of the most enjoyable the old society has ever held.

☞ Folger of Brockton got into financial difficulty by attempting to do printing for less then he could afford to do it, —cutting under the prices of those honest printers who believe in paying their honest bills. ☞ Rev. Mr. Perry has purchased a horse and carriage.

☞ Mr. John Hall has a number of horses sick at his stable with influenza.

☞ Mr. and Mrs. Geo. I. Jones are in town on a wedding tour from St. Louis.

☞ The farmers are having fine weather for haying.

☞ Mr. Bass, our veteran Post Master is still confined to the house.

☞ Dr. J. A. Morison and wife intend spending their 4th, at Keene N. H.

☞ Rev. J. D. Wells preaches at the First Church, next Sunday.

☞ The Selectmen have appointed a dozen special police to keep order on the Fourth.

☞ The members of the Granite Engine Company, play their engine on the morning of July 4th.

☞ The boys are impatiently waiting for the Fourth and have commenced the celebration with fire crackers.

☞ Joseph W. Lombard sells forty acres of salt grass at Squantum, at auction, on Saturday afternoon.

☞ Probate Court will be held at the Town House, in Quincy, on Wednesday morning next.

☞ The regular monthly meeting of the fire companies will be held on Monday evening next.

☞ Rev. Mr. Perry has a call to go to Scituate to marry a couple on Monday.

☞ There was a very large attendance at the auction on Tuesday. Horses and carriages were sold at good prices.

☞ The rumor, that the eating saloon in the old Post office building is to be closed, is not correct. Mr. McCrillis intends to continue it as formerly.

☞ Union engine No. 1 of East Braintree passed through this town on Tuesday, bound to Hunneman's for repairs.

☞ A son of Joseph Kendrick fell from a cherry tree on Wednesday last, and broke his arm near the wrist and was otherwise badly bruised.

☞ Mr. Warren D. Higgins has the plans for building a handsome house for Hon. W. A. Hodges, our enterprising baker.

☞ If you have lost a robe, advertise for it. No less than five have been found recently, as we learned from the advertisement, "lost," last week.

☞ Many of our citizens are intending to spend the Fourth at Silver Lake Grove, to-morrow. Rev. Henry Ward Beecher will deliver the oration.

☞ Mr. William Stiles, an old and respected citizen was buried on Sunday last. Paul Revere Post, of which he was a member, attended the funeral.

☞ The General Shields crew, members of the Quincy Boat Club, who were so successful in their races last year, will pull at the stone-cutter's picnic to-morrow.

☞ The tenth reunion of the Red Ribbon Reform Clubs of this State will be held in Faxon Hall in this place on Wednesday, July 23d. Several hundred delegates are expected and a good time is anticipated.

☞ During the thunder storm on Sunday last the blacksmith's shop of John Curley, on Granite street, near the railroad, was struck by lightning. It entered the roof on the westerly side of the building, and came out on the opposite side, doing but little damage.

☞ It is the intention of the selectmen to keep good order in this town on the preceding evening and on the morning of the Fourth. Arangements have been made to preserve quiet in the immediate neighborhood where there is sickness, if a report is made to the Chief of Police.

☞ "Capt. Wollaston," "Thomas Morton and a few of their old associates, dressed in ancient costumes are expected at the breakfast at Wollaston Heights tomorrow morning. A happy occasion it will be, and all our citizens should try and be present.

☞ While hoisting a large block of granite on Friday of last week at the quarry of Messrs. Churchill & Hitchcock, the stone at the bottom of the derrick gave way which caused the apparatus to fall into the quarry badly breaking the mast. Mr. P. F. Lacy immediately received orders to prepare a new mast to replace the one broken.

☞ The improvments on Granite street have made great changes in the appearance of places. Front yards have been sadly curtailed on some estates. Mr. Edwin Nightingale's front door is almost in the street, while the home of Mrs. Gilbert Blaisdell looks as if it stood on the brow of a steep hill. After the road is straightened and fenced it will be one of the prettiest in town.

Competitors for Silver Medals.

Twenty pupils from the Coddington, Adams, Washington, Willard and Wollaston schools competed for handsome silver medals, in the Town Hall, on Friday afternoon of last week. The prizes being offered respectively by Col. Parker, the Superintendent, for the best composition, and by John O. Holden, Esq., for excellence in reading. The judges were Prof. B. F. Tweed, one of the supervisors of the Boston schools; Dr. D. B. Hagar, principal of the Salem Normal School, and Dr. William Everett of Adams Academy, Quincy. A large number of our citizens were present and were much pleased with the exercises.

The following is a list of scholars who wrote compositions, and the names of the subjects they selected:

Important Events since 1779,	William Marsh.
Visit to a Circus,	James F. Harlow.
The West,	Abbie C. Chamberlin.
Dukes of Normandy,	James Patterson.
Founding a Nation,	Charles A. Miller

The Founders of R. I.,	Josie C. Meserve.
Hardships of the Indians,	Mabel E. Adams.
History of a Breakfast,	Lizzie Mason.
Trip to California,	William J. Dell.

"Visit to a Circus," by James F. Harlow," a graduate of the Washington school, was decided to be the best, and was awarded the prize medal. The others were excellent, and we should be pleased to publish any and all of them in our columns, if the authors will forward them to the PATRIOT office.

The following is a list of scholars who contested for the medal in reading, and the titles to the articles:

An Appeal for Liberty,	Joseph A. Dasha.
Death of Little Nell,	Minnie Nightingale.
An Order for a Picture,	Nellie M. Coolidge.
The Polish Boy,	Mabel E. Adams.
Launching of the Ship,	N. Cora Gragg.
The Widow of Nain,	Mary H. Cudworth
Battle of Ivry,	Lillie Polson.
The Two Flags,	Lulu I. Totman.
On the Shores of Tennessee,	M. Eva Driscoll.
Independence Bell,	Adeline Ellis.

The prize was awarded to Miss Lulu I. Totman, a graduate of the Adams school.

Graduates.

The following is a list of pupils who graduated last week from the Grammar schools in this town, and are now entitled to enter the High School at the next term if they desire. The large number that have been admitted of late must necessarily have reduced its standing, and probably many will not attend.

Serenade.

On Thursday evening of last week some twenty-five or more young men might have been seen wending their way towards South Quincy, armed with tin pans, fish horns, fire crackers, &c., and accompanied by a few members of the Artisan Quartette. The object in view was to serenade one of their friends, who had just entered the path of matrimony. On arriving at their destination the "band commenced to play," and such a "sweet" noise was seldom heard in that vicinity before; it awoke all the neighborhood, and the young couple felt bound to give the serenaders a treat and accordingly invited them in. After enjoying a good lunch they gave "mine host and hostess" three cheers and departed. GREENBACKER.

DISTRICT COURT. The following cases have been before the court this week:—

Charles E. Monson, of Boston, and James Clark of Mt. Desert in the State of Maine, were brought before the court on complaint of Andrew C. Wheelwright of Cohasset, for obtaining money under false pretences, by pretending to have been injured and disabled from the effects of an explosion of a steam bolier. For want of evidence, the defendants were discharged.

Trafley Oby, of Quincy, on complaint of Officer Furnald, for the larceny of a game cock, the property of one Daniel Sullivan, was arraigned and plead not guilty. It appeared in evidence that said bird was identified by Sullivan in consequence of having been cruelly mutilated and tortured by cutting the comb and gills of said fowl for the purposes of preparing him for fighting. After a patient hearing Judge Pratt discharged the defendant.

Henry F. Rooney, of Randolph, for drunkeness, was fined $3 and costs.

Michael Donavan, of Randolph, for being drunk, was fined $3 and costs.

Michael Fogerty, of Weymouth, for keeping a liquor nuisance. Several witnesses were called but being persons who said they did not drink, the defendant was discharged.

Thomas and Martin Geagan of Weymouth, for an assault on Thomas Doran. Case continued to Saturday. The defendents being unable to give bonds were committed to the Weymouth lockup.

A Suggestion.

No doubt many of your readers have, like myself, been more or less interested in the extracts of lectures by Rev. Mr. Perry, which you have from week to week reported through the columns of your paper.

In relation to the lectures themselves or to the healthfulness of the discussion they have provoked; I do not intend to write. The facts in the case however, have suggested a thought to me which I doubt not would meet with general approval, if not of universal satisfaction, could the idea be carried out.

In a few words it is this. Instead of reporting the utterance from the Universalist pulpit alone, an extract be given of a sermon delivered by either of the pastors of one of our churches, and on each Saturday the words of another clergyman, till the thoughts of each have appeared in print.

I believe this would be interesting to all of your readers and conducive of much good. I doubt not but that every clergyman in town would gladly enter into this arrangement, for his duty is that of reaching men with words of Christian duty, and each congregation is of necessity comparatively small, while the number he would reach in this manner would be very large. Printer's ink is a missionary of no small account, and if a pastor desires to do good, if he has ideas that would make other lives brighter and enrich other souls, there is not one but who would gladly write out a portion of his sermon once in five or six weeks for publication in the PATRIOT. I do not desire a controversy between the several pastors,— far from it, — but I think there are many like myself who believe in all forms of Christianity of life, be it lived under the influence of one denomination or another.

Lest it may be thought by some that I am a disbeliever in the theology of Rev. Mr. Perry, and therefore jealous of the prominence of Mr. Perry's ideas in the PATRIOT, I will state that I am a firm believer in Universalism, but with a strong conviction of the truth and value of all religious work of whatever name or nature.

I shall be glad to see the idea carried out, for it will reach many who never attend church, but who would gladly read the words delivered from the several pulpits, and the utterance cannot fail of doing good to all.

Very truly, W. H. N.

[We think the suggestion made by W. H. N. is an excellent one, and we should be very glad to publish a short synopsis, say about one-half a column each week, as he suggests, of the sermons preached at the different churches in this town. We extend a cordial invitation to each and all of the pastors to use our columns for that purpose.—EDS.]

Braintree.

On Sunday morning last, a house on Middle street, belonging to Mr. Neil McRay, between the hours of one and two o'clock was found to be on fire. It was during a heavy shower, and it is supposed it was struck by lightning. An alarm was given and the Butcher Boys were soon on the spot, but the flames had gained such headway that it was impossible to save the house. The occupants of the house were fortunate in saving the most of their household goods.

W. A. Kane has sold his interest in the grocery department of Kane & Waite, retaining the dry goods, which was his former business. Mr. Waite has associated with Messrs. Hayden & Dyke, formerly with P. D. Holbrook & Co.— The new firm have taken the store recently built on Pearl street, and hope their patrons will like the change.

The Methodist Society are to observe the Fourth by enjoying a basket picnic, in one of the pleasant groves at South Braintree. D.

Ode,

Composed for the celebration at Wollaston, July 4th, 1879.

Fling out our banner on the breezes again!
Wave the tricolor over hillside and plain!
Star-gemm'd its azure as the welkin of light,
Clear and unsullied are its crimson and white.
Refrain: God bless our banner! for aye may it be.
Emblem of fatherland, flag of the free.

Sing the old carols that our fathers have sung;
Anthems of freedom that are evermore young;
Star Spangled Banner! At its magical line,
Hearts will beat quicker, as in days of lang syne.
Refrain.

God of our fathers! In Thy presence we pray,
Thou art eternal, and we but for a day!
Grant to us freedom of the heart and the voice,
Peace in our hearts, that our land may rejoice!
Refrain.

Letter from Boston.

BOSTON, JUNE 27th, 1879.

Last week the Commencement and Alumni exercises of the Conservatory took place, lasting through the most of the week, and included two grand concerts in Music Hall, one by the graduates the other by the Alumni; a couple of business meetings of the Alumni Association, in which, besides other important matters, the long-talked of fund for the assistance of needy students was started; a valuable lecture on music by ex-president Hill of Harvard College; a grand reception and collation, when the whole great Music Hall building was brilliantly lighted, the Germania band played the entire evening, and everybody of the musical world was present; and last, but very far from least, an entertainment was given by the graduates of Prof. Kelley's School of Elocution, which, in its brilliant success, was a surprise even to those who know and admire the Professor's methods the best. Of a certainty, elocution is the coming art!

And now to leave music for a word on that ever-interesting subject, fashions.

The fan is as much a part of a woman's existence as a cane is of a man's, —and more, for there are men who disdain a cane, and prefer a gingham umbrella, but where is the woman who will leave her fan behind, carry she never so many sunshades along? Well, the latest thing in fans, as I learned by dropping in at A. Stowell & Co.'s lovely jewelry store, is the "Pinafore," ("of course," I hear you say—but go on reading, for they are pretty, very pretty, and serviceable as well,) the outer sticks being in the form of oars, and the silk painted with a "marine view." They are the fan of the season.

To glisten and glitter and gleam is decidedly the ambition of the season. Do you know, the paste diamonds of a century ago have returned to style with such a sudden bound that they are "all the rage" and nothing less. Shoe-buckles, belt-buckles, coronets and diadems, and pins for the hair, brooches, slides and pendants for the throat, clustering necklaces, and many other ornaments, all in the regular old, antique, solid silver setting.

The horse-shoe is the favorite design in the paste ornaments, as in every thing else this season. The richest as well as the most trifling things are in horse-shoe shape. Elegant mosaic ear-rings and bar-pin, on little shoes, with a gold whip run through them. Dainty conch-shell shoes, and exquisite ones set with turquoises; jet, shell, and ivory shoes; gold and silver shoes.

Besides paste shoe buckles and horse-shoe ornaments, you must wear all the ornaments of various kinds in your hair that you can possibly muster,—not all at a time, of course. In fact, there were never so many ornaments for the hair before, and they were never so fashionable, having superseded ribbons entirely. IDA.

Graduates' Picnic.

It has long been a matter of regret that the different classes leaving the High School seldom see much of each other after their course in school is finished. The extent of the town being quite large it is not often that they meet, except, it may be, those who live in the same neighborhood. In order to remedy this, in the case of one class, at least, the scholars who graduated last year invited their teachers to attend a picnic at Ponkapoag Pond on the day after graduation. The occasion was so enjoyable that it was agreed to have a similar one this year. The party therefore met at the Stone Church last Saturday morning and started for a drive to Ridge Hill Farm, at Wellesley. There the greater part of the day was spent in examining the many beauties and curiosities of the grounds, and towards evening the homeward trip was begun. The slight shower which came before home was reached, instead of dampening, served only to enliven the spirits of the excursionists, and the inhabitants of the towns through which they passed must have wondered (they could not see) what jolly party it was which could sing so party cheerily, shut up in a covered wagon.

Home was reached at last, and with many a "good bye till next time," the party separated.

BOSTON MUSEUM. The fourth in Boston will be celebrated in good old-fashioned style. One of the most enjoyable amusements of the day will be the Boston Museum's Children's Pinafore, which has been attracting large and enthusiastic audiences at this popular resort for eight weeks. Mr. Field announces two day preformances by this marvellous company, one at 10.30 in the forenoon, and the other at 2 in the afternoon thus affording a double opportunity to see the wonderful "Little Buttercup," the no less talented Admiral, Josephine, Captain, Dick Deadeye, and Boatswain. Several excursions have already been arranged for that day, and we would advise an early application for tickets, to avoid the rush which is sure to occur on "the glorious fourth."

July 4th, 1879.

UNDOUBTEDLY many of the inhabitants of Quincy, Wollaston and vicinity believe that Capt. Wollaston, who landed on the shores of our beautiful bay in 1625, died, while on his way to Virginia, after a few months sojourn on the hill since called Mount Wollaston.

To prove the entire falsity of the story they have only to accept his invitation to a

Breakfast-Table Reception,

at the BAPTIST CHAPEL on the morning of JULY 4th, from 6 to 9, when they will have the pleasure of meeting him face to face, attended by his faithful lieutenant, the noble Thomas Morton, and many of his followers, where they will dispense the hospitalities of Merry Mount, still wearing the costume of 250 years ago.

It is expected that they will be present in the evening at the same place, when the ladies provide an ENTERTAINMENT consisting of Readings, Instrumental Music and Singing.

THE PRESS EXCURSION.

The editors belonging to the Massachusetts Press Association returned on Tuesday last, after a pleasant excursion through the states of Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The party numbered between sixty and seventy, and a happier, jollier set seldom left on a trip of this kind. They started from the Fitchburg depot, in Boston, on the morning of the 24th ult., and traveled the first day the whole length of the old Bay State.

Splendid new cars had been furnished for the Association by Gen. Burt, and as they rolled out of the depot at 8 o'clock, they attracted considerable attention; but more so, in New York and Pennsylvania, as they passed over the route. Soon after leaving we were handed our tickets, with nineteen coupons attached, measuring in length two feet and eight inches. They proved none too long, as the conductors kept tearing away, and before the party arrived in Boston they had entirely disappeared.

The party arrived at Fitchburg at 9.45 A. M., Athol 11.05, and Hoosac Tunnel 1.15. Before reaching the Tunnel the lamps in the cars were lighted, and the engine dashed into the "big bore" under the mountain, dragging the cars after it. We stood on the rear platform and soon the cold dampness struck us, then came the darkness. Never we think have we seen it darker; and it appeared as if we should never reach the end. After a ride of about twelve minutes we emerged from the mountain and found ourselves in the beautiful town of North Adams. This place was quickly passed and we came to Gen. Burt's new railroad, which we took at Eagle Bridge, and continued on until we arrived at Mechanicville, N. Y., where our cars were coupled to a regular train on the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company road and carried to Saratoga, arriving at 4.15 after an eight hours' ride from Boston.

Although the party had been furnished with an excellent lunch, consisting of sandwiches, coffee, lemonade, cake and ice cream, at Greenfield, which they enjoyed for the next twenty miles, they were pleased when supper was announced at the United States Hotel,—one of the largest and grandest in the world. It was completed in 1874, and is [illegible] feet in length, and has 917 rooms for guests, besides large parlors, dining and drawing rooms.

The company had rode this day 208 miles from Boston, still they did not appear to be very tired. After supper some of the party could be found at nearly every spring in the city, and the streets and stores found many more.

June had been a cold, moist month, and the trees and vegetation of all kinds along the route were beautiful to behold. The farmers were busy planting and hoeing and only a few had commenced haying. Grass was short but looked green and vigorous. The corn and potato patches did not appear as forward as in Quincy.

The next morning the party left by a special train, by way of Schenectady, to Howe's Cave, a town situated forty-[illegible] miles southwest of Saratoga. The Association stopped at this place to visit a great cave near the depot. It is said to be the largest in this country except the Mammoth Cave in Kentucky. The ladies and gentlemen were soon furnished with suits adapted for the journey, at the Cave House, and many of the party started into this wonderful cavern in the earth. It was so dark and rugged some of the company did not seem to enjoy it much. The cave was discovered in 1842 by Lester Howe, and extends several miles into the mountain, the exact distance is not known. Most of the way it is high enough for any one to walk without hitting overhead, but part of the way visitors are obliged to crawl on their hands and knees; but it being wet at the time we were there none ventured through the small aperture leading to the "Rotunda." Along the bottom of this cave is a running brook, and after one proceeds about half a mile he finds a pond which covers the whole surface, which compels him to take a boat if he wishes to go farther. Many of the party crossed this pond,—many rods in distance,—and proceeded on their journey. Some places there were large chambers fifty to one hundred feet in height but not very broad. Some [illegible] we were obliged to climb over rocks, and most of the way it was very [illegible].

After emerging from the cave we dined at the Cave House, and then took the cars for Oneonta, a distance of forty-three miles. We arrived about 7 P. M., and the party divided,—some stopping at the Central and others at the Susquehannah House. In the evening the Association was entertained with sweet music, furnished gratuitously by a local band, which performed very creditably.

Mulching.

I was pleased to see in the PATRIOT of the 28th ult., an article on the benefit of mulching trees and vines, which I fully endorse. I have used it the past five years, and the good results can be seen at Vine Cottage. G. SPEAR.

For the Patriot.

A Few Words to F. A. C.

In my judgment the columns of a local paper are a good place for a "Religio-Scientific" controversy, for the simple reason that more people will read such discussion therein than in the Popular Science Monthly or any scientific work.

F. A. C. waxes sarcastic over my statement that science deals with the unknowable. Since he deals not at all in argument, a suspicion is raised that sarcasm is the only available weapon. I do not know what meaning he attaches to the word "knowable," nor am I able to know what will render any thing "knowable" to his mind. But I am curious to be informed under which head, the known or knowable, he will put those modifications of matter which have resulted in our earth. By scientists these things are considered inferrible, not demonstrable. If F. A. C. asserts that anything that is inferrible is knowable, I have nothing to say except that he had best look long before he leaps. I repeat my former statement that science deals with the unknowable because it deals with many things in the history of the globe and its inhabitants which can never be known.

When I said that no one interested in science understands my position, I had reference to that class in Quincy. I have met in other places those interested in science who did understand my position. This will furnish a sufficient reason for my surprise and amusement, and also undermine the ingenious structure F. A. C. built upon my statement. Let me put the statement of the object of my lectures and replies into a nut shell. I am attempting to reconcile religionists and scientists (small). I am doing this because in my judgment scientific and religious truth are not antagonistical.

Now a word as to Prof. Newcomb's utterances in regard to the manifestation of design in nature. I referred to it as an illustration, hence it is not material to the point at issue. But if my memory serves me rightly he says that not only himself but all scientists admit the existence of design in nature. I should like to give Prof. N.'s exact words, but am not able to get possession of a copy of the N. A. Review for June. F. A. C. says that in the thought of Prof. Newcomb, "abstract" is equivalent to a negative. How does he know that? Is that not such a very unusual use of the word? That may be a scientific, but I am sure it is not a religious use of the word.

In my opening lecture on Science and Religion I stated that science had changed its conclusions more often than religion, and drew two inferences: first, that science was more in error at first than religion; secondly, that since science had so frequently changed her conclusions, it was quite possible that she would continue to change them, hence now is not teaching the exact truth. My critics accept the statement of facts but dodge the conclusions. As those conclusions have not been touched, I repeat them.

In 1855, there appeared an interesting work entitled Six Days of Creation. At this time neither Darwin nor Haeckel had published their works on evolution. The Vestiges of Creation had just appeared. The work entitled Six Days of Creation accepted the theory of evolution, showed it agreed with both biblical and philosophical truth. The author of this book was Prof. Tayler Lewis of Union College. The position thus early taken by Prof. Lewis is practically the position of the great mass of the educated in our church. I recently asked at a meeting of clergymen what proportion of them were anti-evolutionists. The answer that all were friendly to the theory was given.

Some amateur scientists hate the Gospel and have been rejoiced at any opportunity to assail it. They are happy that science, as they suppose, gives them the weapons. They, however, frequently find the weapons have a boomerang tendency in the hands of such unskilful users. But after all nothing so provokes them as the declaration by a religious believer that he is an evolutionist.

Great Spring Blessing!

DR. BLISS' CATARRH BITTERS. This is the best Spring medicine you can take. It will remove that all-gone feeling you have, for it puts new vigor into the blood, thoroughly cleansing and purifying it, thus striking at the very root of the troubles to which so many are subject in the SPRING TIME, such as CATARRH, HUMORS, SORES, LIVER TROUBLES, &c., all of which come from IMPURE BLOOD, or inaction of the LIVER. Some of the Herbs in these bitters are Mandrake (for the Liver), Yellow Dock, Burdock, Prickly Ash (for the Blood), Rhubarb and Boneset (for the Stomach). Then we add something that works especially in the blood for CATARRH. Large bottles, over one hundred doses, 75 cts. GEO. C. GOODWIN & CO., Boston.

Poetry.

They are Coming.

Potato Bug came in his striped coat,
"Oh, how do you do!" haileth he;
"I'm terribly hungry"—wiping his chops—
"You've planted potatoes, I see."

Came waddling along the Coreidæ,
The triangular bugs. "By gosh!"
They cry, as they spy out the young, tender vines,
"We're glad to see you have squash."

The Geomtridæ climb the tree
In the form of an innocent thing,
And playing at circus they will all shortly be,
Each hanging adown from a string.

Curculio goes for the luscious plum,
And the grape has its foe also;
That hideous thing, the Tomato Worm,
Suburban gardeners know.

The Hessian Bug and the Borer tribe,
Long ere the summer is done,
And numberless forms of the Caterpillar,
Are coming every one.

Then bid them all welcome once again,
The entire pestilent crew;
We'll all no doubt have enough to eat,
And they'll have enough to eat, too.
—Boston Transcript.

Agricultural, &c.

Farm Work for July.

HAY. July is upon us with its long days and oppressive heat. In many portions of the country there is still much hay uncut. It is rapidly going to seed, exhausting the roots and becoming of poor quality as the woody fiber increases in quantity. Cultivate corn frequently until the tassels appear.

VEGETABLE GARDEN. Keep planting a succession of some vegetables such as will be wanted late in the season, as corn, beets, cabbages, lettuce. Keep cultivating every week at least once, to prevent the weeds from getting a start. There is no royal way to kill weeds; but the nearest way to it is that of very frequent cultivation. Break the flowers off from rhubarb to prevent it from seeding, as that weakens the plants. Tomatoes should be trimmed and some low trellis placed near to keep them off the ground.

SMALL FRUITS. Strawberries will be ploughed up after fruiting, unless another crop is expected. If they are to remain another year, give good cultivation. Some fine manure should be added and the runners kept cut off. Thin out and remove the old canes of raspberries and blackberries as soon as the fruit is ripe. Cut the tips of the new canes when about two feet or two and a half feet high, and cut the branches after they have grown a foot or more. Treat suckers as weeds, unless they are desired for planting.

Grape vines will need cultivation for a month yet. Some of the new wood should be pinched off, and some of the smallest branches cut off while young. It is a serious damage to any young vine or tree to bear a heavy crop.

MISCELLANEOUS. Keep everything growing in July; trees, shrubs and young cattle. Attend to trees which were set in spring. Flower beds will often do best if the land is well mulched with fine manure, or even manure a little coarse. Thin apples, especially where they seem small or too full. It will pay. Attend to the grafts, and cut away limbs which shade too thickly. Rub off young twigs which start where they are not wanted. A little pruning of fruit trees may be done at this time. Mow the lawn often, even a little piece of it just about the house will add much to the beauty of a farm.

INSECTS. With increased heat insects are numerous and lively. There are so many such foes that a farmer in these days cannot keep up with the times unless he makes it part of his business to wage a systematic warfare on insect enemies.—Rural New Yorker.

CABBAGES. In planting late cabbages, even though the ground is moist, it is best to twist off at least one-half of each leaf. If any one at this time will try the experiment of planting two rows, say of fifty plants each, in one of which the plants are set entire while in the other the leaf is cut or twisted in two, he will be convinced that the trouble of the latter method is more than repaid by the results. These young leaves will die in any event, and they serve only to retard the establishment of the roots by exposing a larger evaporating surface than the roots can possibly supply with moisture.

Anecdotes.

"Why do you look so savagely at me?" asked a gentleman of a lady.

"Oh! I beg your pardon; I thought it was my husband," she replied.

Lady—"I don't wish you to stay with me, Mary, if you can better yourself."

Maid—"It ain't to better myself I care so much about, mum, it's to improve my condition."

A timid Bostonian has married a lady whose weight verges closely upon two hundred pounds.

"My dear," said he to her, "shall I help you over the fence?"

"No," says she to him, "help the fence."

An Irishman, at the imminent risk of his life stopped a runaway horse a few days ago. The owner came up after a while and quietly remarked:

"Thank you, sir."

"An' faith, an' how are ye a goin' to divide that betwane two of us?" replied Pat.

Elder sister (to little one who appears to take great interest in Mr. Skibbons): "Come, little pet, it is time your eyes were shut in sleep.

Little pet:—I think not. Mother told me to keep my eyes open when you and Mr. Skibbons were together."

On a recent Sunday, a superintendent at the close of the Sabbath School asked the little boys the following question from the smaller question-book:—

"Who knows better than father or mother?"

"A little five-year-old promptly answered, "I do."

If you feel dull drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "billousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR OR MEDICINE.

The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the World!
AN EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen.
Regulate the Liver and prevent
CHILLS AND FEVER MALARIOUS FEVERS, BOWEL COMPLAINTS, RESTLESSNESS, JAUNDICE AND NAUSEA.

TAKE SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

BAD BREATH.

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath, and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be so easily corrected if you will take Simmons' Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your Appetite, Complexion, and General Health.

PILES!

How many suffer torture day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering from Piles. Yet relief is ready to the hand of almost any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR, is no drastic violent purge; but a gentle assistant to nature.

CONSTIPATION!

SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulation from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache.

Grape Juice and Wine
FOR SALE.

I FIND that after two to three years of age, my grape juice produces a very excellent wine, and as I have on hand some 300 to 400 gallons, I would like to dispose of a part of it. It has been used in the church the past five years, and I have not yet heard of any of the members being higher or any lower than an upright position. But I think they don't take enough to do either good or harm. I presume I use more myself in one day than all the members of a church use in a month. If you are sick and wish to get well, take some grape juice; if you are well and wish to keep so, take a little grape juice and save the expense of all other medicine. I have used it freely the last six years, and none other, and intend to continue it.

Office of the Board of Health.
QUINCY, MARCH 5, 1879.

THE Board of Health issues the following notice:—That on and after MONDAY, March 10th, 1879, the following provisions of Chapter 26 of the General Statutes will be strictly enforced:—

SEC. 47. When a householder knows that a person within his family is taken sick of . . . . any . . . . . . disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the . . . . . . board of health of the town in which he dwells. If he refuses or neglects to give such notice, he shall forfeit a sum not exceeding $100.

SEC. 48. When a physician knows that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with . . . . any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the . . . . . . board of health of the town; and if he refuses or neglects to give such notice, he shall forfeit for each offence a sum not less than $50, nor more than $100.

The Board considers the above sections to apply to scarlet fever, small pox, diphtheria, measles and whooping cough.

Poetry.

Dare To Say No.

Dare to say no when you're tempted to drink,
Pause for a moment, my boy, and think;
Think of the wrecks upon life's ocean tossed,
For answering yes without counting the cost.

Think of the mother who bore you in pain;
Think of the tears that will fall like the rain;
Think of her heart—ah how cruel the blow!
Think of her love and at once answer no.

Think of the hopes that are drowned in the bowl;
Think of the danger to body and soul;
Think of sad lives once as pure as the snow,
Look to them now, and at once answer no.

Think of a manhood with rum-tainted breath;
Think how the glass leads to sorrow and death;
Think of the homes that now shadowed with woe,
Might have been Heaven had the answer been no

Think of lone graves both unwept and unknown,
Hiding fair hopes that were fair as your own,
Think of proud forms now forever laid low,
That still might be here had they learned to say no.

Think of the demon that lurks in the bowl;
Driving to ruin both body and soul;
Think of all this as life's journey you go,
And when you're assailed by the tempter, say no.

RIPE CURRANT PIE. Line a pie-tin with a good crust and fill with a mixture of one cup of crushed ripe currants, one of sugar, two spoonfuls of water, one of flour mixed smooth with the beaten yolks of two eggs; bake; then cover with a merangue made of whipped whites, and two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar; return to the oven to brown.

STEAMED PUDDING. Put two tablespoonfuls of sour cream into a pint basin; then fill up with rich buttermilk, add a little salt, a teaspoonful of saleratus, and flour to mix soft; roll out and spread with the preserves left from yesterday's tea. Place in a buttered tin and steam one hour and a half. Eat with a sauce of butter, sugar and boiling water; thicken with corn-starch and flavor with nutmeg.

TO CLEAN ZINC. Scour with sifted coal ashes; afterward rub with kerosene. Kerosene also gives a new look to oilcloths.

Miscellany.

SIR LEICESTER.

I had just finished my next Sunday sermon when, my study door opening, my wife entered.

"George," she said. "Jinks says he thinks something is amiss up at the Priory; for as he passed awhile ago, he saw the old steward, who looked terribly scared."

"Why did he not ask the cause, my dear," I replied.

"He did; but he says the old man merely shook his head, wrung his hands in the deepest distress, and hurried away."

Digging my pen in my desk, to the annihilation of its nib, I reflected over my wife's statement. Finally I said "My love, whatever it is, it is evident we can do nothing. Sir Leicester Connington is not a man with whom even a clergyman cannot interfere."

"He is as mad as a March hare, that is certain," remarked my wife.

"My love—my love!" I expostulated.

"Well, George, I say mad. If we were in the fifteenth century I'd say he was a dealer in the black art."

"As true as most such accusation of the period."

"Perhaps, therefore, as we are in the nineteenth century, I protest mad. James Morgan declared the other day he came upon him lying among the ferns in the woods, talking like a maniac to something he had in his hand. Then he laughed, then he wept, then he writhed on the grass in agony, uttering strange words; then, leaping up, untied his horse and rode off, like the Earl King himself.

"All true, my dear. Certainly, the poor gentleman has something on his mind, but of what nature ——"

My observations were cut short by a violent ring at the bell. The next moment the servant, entering, announced that the steward from the Priory wished to see me immediately.

"Show him in here, Mary," said my wife quietly.

If my wife desired to obtain any information she was gratified; for, on the old steward's entrance, his appearance fully confirmed Jinks' statements. He was pale to a degree, and his features depicted suppressed but intense distress. Bowing respectfully, he then delivered his message.

"Sir Leicester is sorry to trouble you at this hour, sir," he said, "but he'll take it as a favor if you'll come to him at once, for he's dying."

"Dying!" I cried, surprised; for only that morning I had seen him pass my study window, looking as well as usual.

"Dying!" ejaculated my wife, in horror. Oh, what can be done?

"Only, if you please, if Mr. Hartop will see him."

"Certainly. Dear, dear me?" I ejaculated, taking my hat. "Come, my man, let us go."

I believe my wife would, if possible, have liked to accompany us; but she whispered to me to return as soon as I could.

As we proceeded, I inquired of the steward the nature of his master's sudden malady.

"Sudden!" he repeated. "Sir, it's been of years' duration. Now the end has come. My dear master—you will hear all, Mr. Hartop, from him."

The old man's grief was so evident that I forbore to question him further, and went on in silence.

Kenelm Priory was a fine building of the Elizabethean era. Five years previous to this story it had been taken by a Sir Leicester Connington. The gentry were delighted at the addition to the neighborhood especially as the Baronet was unmarried, and not much over thirty. But it was soon found that Sir Leicester intended to keep no society. With him came two servants—the old steward and an elderly superior female domestic. The other servants were engaged from the town, and only employed in those menial offices which never brought them in contact with their master.

The visits that were made at the Priory were never returned. Sir Leicester led the life of a recluse. For months together he never quitted the house; then he might be seen riding on a superb horse about the country, with the recklessness of a maniac, or, as my wife remarked, like the Earl King himself. He never crossed a neighbor's threshold, and no strange foot crossed his.

For my own part I imagined Sir Leicester had committed some grave sin, and was thus expiating it by remorse. It may be conceived, then, that I felt both curious and a little anxious at the thought of hearing the truth from the dying man's lips.

On entering the Priory, I expected to be taken up stairs to the upper floor, where I knew were the bedrooms; but instead, my conductor, crossing the spacious hall, opened the library door, and ushered me into Sir Leicester's presence, where I stood, surprised, motionless, contemplating the "dying" man.

Dressed as was his wont, looking as usual, pale, sad and careworn, the Baronet sat writing at the table, as unlike a dying man as any I have ever seen.

On hearing my name, he arose, and, with a grateful expression, advancing, took my hand. He was a tall, well-made man, gentlemanly in the extreme, and I now saw, was not only good looking but remarkably handsome; while the eyes, dark, piercing at a distance, I found were sad, soft and gentle as a woman's.

"It is very good of you to come thus speedily, Mr. Hartop," he remarked. "I thank you very much."

"My time is ever at the service of my parishioners, Sir Leicester," I said taking the seat he himself placed for me. I am glad, however, to find that your need is not so grave as I was led by your steward to believe."

He regarded me, as he laid back in his chair opposite, with a transient smile.

"It is quite grave I can assure you!" he answered. "Morrison did not exaggerate. I am dying as he stated. In less than two hours I shall have ceased to live!"

I started in amazement while my wife's assertion seemed to gain confirmation. To me Sir Leicester had seldom looked better.

"It is scarcely to a clergyman I should make the confession I am about to," he proceeded. "But the name you bear for all that is good and charitable, tells me I may trust to your secrecy. I am dying, Mr. Hartop, because I am poisoned, the poison being self-administered. Yes, you behold one who has just taken his own life."

"Sir Leicester!" I cried leaping up, "what are you saying? You are either mocking me and my calling, or, if true, medical aid must be instantly obtained."

As I moved toward the door, he caught my arm gently but firmly, and forced me back into my chair, while with an earnestness almost prayerful, he exclaimed, "It is no mockery! It is true, and the most, skilful doctor could find no antidote for the Eastern drug I have swallowed, which, two hours after taken, generally produces a painless death. If you, Mr. Hartop, feel any compassion for me, don't let those two hours be lost. I have trusted in you. I beg you will not disappoint me, for you see before you the most wretched man on earth!"

"I cannot comprehend ——," I began confusedly.

"Listen to my story and you will," he said.

"He is mad, surely!" I reflected, looking into his face. There is no trace of death there. I will humor him."

Perceiving me quiet he proceeded.

"Mr. Hartop, I have a great favor to ask of you, [illegible] must be told; and briefly, for a quarter of an hour is already gone. Left an orphan at an early age, I was brought up under a maternal uncle's guardianship, and with his only daughter, Gertrude, my cousin. To describe her is impossible. Did I do so accurately, you would attribute my words to a lover's exaggeration, therefore judge for yourself."

Taking a miniature from his bosom, he handed it to me. It represented a young girl of scarcely eighteen, and with one of the sweetest, loveliest countenances I had ever beheld. Even the eyes of the picture seemed to thrill the observer's very soul.

"Seeing her," proceeded Sir Leicester, "you will not wonder when I say I loved Gertrude better than life. She—capable of the purest and truest affection returned my passion; and I being then the only presumptive heir of my grandfather, my uncle fostered my suit. Gertrude and I were consequently looking forward to the confirmation of our happiness, when my grandfather died, and it was found that, owing to personal animosity to my uncle, another grandson had been put in my place.

"At the same period a Lord Worth, elderly but immensely rich, paid marked attention to Gertrude. Secure in the knowledge of our mutual love, no fear assailed us, until one day, to our horror, my uncle informed us that as I was comparatively a beggar, our engagement must be broken, and that Gertrude must accept the addresses of Lord Worth. I shall not describe our agony, our useless supplications. I was banished the house—my cousin was kept a prisoner in her room. Yet by her maid's assistance, we managed to meet, when we decided to elope.

"Ah, why did I not mistrust that woman? Why did not the fatality which attended all my plans put me on my guard? I thought of nothing but the joy of soon calling Gertrude mine.

"The night arrived. Gertrude accompanied by her servant met me, and in the postchaise I had provided we started for the cottage of the maid's mother, where the former assured us a clergyman would be waiting to unite us.

"On our meeting in the dwelling situated in a lonely part of the country, we found no minister there. The maid assured me that the falling rain may have prevented him, but that he would be there before morning. We waited. The night went by—I spent it outside the cottage. I would not pass it even beneath the same roof that covered my poor Gertrude. My anxiety was all for her; and at daydawn I would have started for another clergyman, when the maid entreated me to forgive her, stating that in the confusion she must have made a mistake in the date, for the clergyman's reply said the 9th, not the 8th. She showed me the letter, and I believed her. We yet waited. The night came up, so did the clergyman.

"We had already taken our places before him when the door was burst open, and my uncle, Lord Worth, and three serving men rushed in. Instantly I was torn from Gertrude, firmly held by the servants, and mocked by my uncle' while Lord Worth grinning and grimacing took my place opposite my beloved as her bridegroom. In vain the poor child resisted; her father threatened her with public exposure. He confessed that the cottage was one of ill-repute and that her stay at it in my company had ruined her name forever were the circumstances known; adding that she would not find another with a love like Lord Worth's.

"I saw all then; we had been cruelly trapped. With a shriek Gertrude fainted and I verily believe she was not conscious during the ceremony which took place. Yes; I saw her wedded to another! I saw her grey-headed husband take her in his arms and carry her to the carriage waiting. At that moment however, breaking away she flung herself on my breast, that beat wildly against hers, while my lips passionately pressed her cheek. I could not embrace her, for my arms were pinioned.

"When they had dragged her away, I found she had left in my bosom this tiny bunch of forget-me-nots preserved here, and Sir Leicester held up a crystal vial. "I entreat that it may be buried with me!"

I bent my head and he went on:

"When she was out of my sight blissful oblivion ensued. A year after by the unexpected death of my cousin, I became Sir Leicester Connington, and the owner of wealth; but no riches could bring me happiness, for I had learned Gertrude was an unhappy and ill-used wife, because she could not bestow that love she had not to give, it being mine. My uncle had sold her, and broken her heart. We had one consolation—the knowledge that each was faithful to the other, and though here parted, in the world to come we should be re-united.

"It is she who has first been summoned.

"This morning," proceeded Sir Leicester, "I received intelligence of her death, upon which having arranged my affairs, I instantly prepared to follow her. She waits me! In a few moments we shall be together!

I made a movement but he checked me.

"Help is useless," he said; "and I have one favor yet to ask. Next Thursday Gertrude will be buried in the cemetery you will see written on that paper. I have made arrangements that another grave shall be dug during the night beside it, in which my body is to rest. Will you promise to see this done?

I hesitated, when he cried, with convulsive agony:—"Oh, sir, do not refuse the last wish of a dying man."

I could not at that moment—it would have been impossible.

"Sir Leicester," I said, "It shall be as you desire."

"Thanks! thanks! he exclaimed, a bright smile on his features. "Ah, Gertrude! hush! hush! How softly she comes. She is here—here!"

He extended his arms. His eyes were directed upward as slowly as he sank back on his chair. He was dead. I looked at the watch, it was the very hour he had mentioned.

I fulfilled my promise, and his remains were interred by Lady Worth's, unchecked by Lord Worth, who had gone abroad. Therefore until this day, no one save the two faithful servants and myself are aware that those who in life were so heartlessly parted, repose together in death.

A Model Confession.

Several years ago in a western town, a young lawyer a member of a large church got drunk. The brethren told him that he must confess. He demurred. He knew the members to be good people, but they had their little faults, such as driving sharp bargains, screwing the laborer down to low wages, loaning money at illegal rates, misrepresenting articles they had for sale, etc. But they were good people, and pressed the lawyer to come before the church-meeting and own up to his sin of taking a glass too much for they were temperance people, and abhorred in temperance. The sinner finally went to the confessional, found a large gathering of brethren and sisters, whose bowed heads rose, and whose eyes glistened with pure delight as the lawyer began his confession:—

"I confess that I never received ten per cent, for money." On that confession down went a brother's head with a groan.

"I confess I never turned a poor man from my door who needed food or shelter." Down went another head.

"I confess I never sold skim-milk cheese for a new one." Whereupon an old woman shrieked for mercy.

"I confess I have not been pharisaical and self-righteous, and have not sought to injure or persecute those who have not happened to agree with me," down went numerous heads.

"I confess I never played the hypocrite, and I do not lie, and that I have not used religion as a cloak," when down went several other heads, and among them the heads of the very ones who were so anxious that he should confess.

"But, continued the sinner, "I have been drunk and am very sorry for it," whereupon the meeting quietly dispersed.

A Forward Season.

An old negro named Sam Clark, who counts a Griswold street lawyer among his friends, called at his law shop recently with a very anxious look on his face. and said:

"Boss, Ize clean twisted up dis time, an' I want to ax few queshuns."

"Well, go ahead, Sam."

"Wall all de white folks tell me dat de sezun am at leas' a month ahead. I h'ars 'em talkin' 'bout it on de kyars an all ober."

"Yes, this is a very forward spring. I think we are at least a month ahead.

"Wall, if dat's de case, will de Fo'th o' July come on de Fo'th o' June, or when, an' hain't April fule day dun gone an' passed by two weeks?"

The lawyer tried to explain, but Sam was more mixed than before. He scratched his head and went slowly out, but in half an hour he returned with a face longer than ever.

"Got that through your head yet?" asked the lawyer.

"Fo' de Lawd, but Ize bin struck agin!" whispered the African. "If we am a month ahead now, dis y'ar will either have thirteen months or only 'leven! Splain dat now!"

But the lawyer couldn't, and Sam went out saying.

"Dese white folks am a werry curus set, dey go an get de sezun all outer gear, an' den a nigger can't tell whether to plant taters or dodge icicles.—Detroit Free Press.

Sea-Water vs. Obesity.

About a year since we published a note from a correspondent, who claimed that a tea made from sea-weed, or sea-wrack, was a specific for obesity. We were inclined at the time to doubt the efficacy of this remedy; but quite a number of our readers have desired us to give further facts in regard to it, but none having come under our observation, we have been unable to comply with their requests.

We now have another remedy to offer, which has the advantage of the former, as it appears to be more reasonable that sea-water would reduce surplus flesh sooner than a tea made from a weed possessing little or no known medicinal properties.

According to the Paris Medicale, sea-water, taken internally, acts like diuretic and purgative salts, a remarkable fact being that the diuretic effect increases when the purgative diminishes. The water should be obtained, when possible from some depth, and far from shore.—It is then to be left to settle for six or twelve hours and filtered. It is to be taken three times a day, in doses of a small glassful, or in half that quantity at a time, with fresh water or milk. It is stated as a fact that sea-water thus used facilitates the oxygenation of the blood, and that it hastens the elimination of effete materials. In combination with this treatment, sea-water baths are to be taken, free exercise is to be practiced, and fattening foods avoided.

Regulating the Small Boy.

Saturdays are red-letter days in the lives of schoolboys, and the amount of live experience that can be crowded into a spring Saturday is something to think of. I know a boy whose infant feet have pressed the blossoms of something like seven summers, or thereabouts, who made four kites and flew them with his mother's patent thread, tore his pants zigzag trying to nail a pigeon box to the woodshed, played trapeze on the clothes-line, and came down in the slop-barrel. These were only casual incidents of an hour. He coaxed a strange rooster into the yard and raised a revolt in the hennery, upset a pail of whitewash on the clean porch, and caused the hired girl to leave with a big ironing on hand; dropped the shears into the cistern, and broke the small blade of his knife, besides other and minor things beyond number. It is one of the impossibilities to regulate the leisure hours of a boy.—Cincinnati Saturday Night.

Fruit as a Medicine.

The irregular eating of unripe fruit is well known to be unwholesome. The regular and moderate use of well-ripened fruit is not so widely appreciated as contributing to health. Residents in regions where more or less malaria prevails, have discovered that nothing is a more sure preventive of its deleterious effects than a regular supply of fruit.

But fruit will not only prevent disease, but in some instances it has proved one of the best medicines to cure it. Many years ago a chronic cough, which had excited a good deal of uneasiness, was cured by daily eating ripe raspberries, recommended by a medical writer of high authority as an excellent expectorant. Severe colds are more apt to occur on the first cool and damp days of autumn than at other seasons. We have often cured these diseases on the first attack, by eating copiously of ripe watermelons. The beneficial effects of drinking freely of cold water on such occasions, are well known. Watermelons supply a larger quantity than we would easily swallow in any other way.

A Store Entered and Robbed.

TWO NEW YORK THIEVES.

CAUGHT BY OFFICER FURNALD

The store in Pierce's Block kept by Miss Lucy M. Jillson, fancy goods, and Miss Mary J. Bellew, dealer in ladies' hairwork, was entered on Wednesday morning about one o'clock, and about $125 worth of goods taken, but fortunately the rogues were caught. The particulars of the affair are very creditable to the officer:—

It appears that Messrs. Foster, Furnald, Bass and Bigelow had been to East Stoughton to install the officers of Forest Lodge, Knights of Honor, and returning arrived in this town between 12 and 1 o'clock. Officer Furnald left Messrs. Bigelow and Foster and then started to carry Mr. Joseph A. Bass to Wollaston, where he resides. After leaving Mr. Bass he started for his home, and when passing C. F. Pierce's Block he noticed two men sitting on the piazza steps. Being an officer who always has an eye for rogues, he mistrusted that "something was up," and accordingly drove his horse to his residence, a short distance, and came back to see what the persons were doing. He went into the Unitarian Church yard, in the shade of the trees, as the moon was shining, to watch their procedings. He had hardly arrived in the church green before he heard the breaking of glass, and crossing Washington street near Coddington street he crept carefully along, on the grass near the sidewalk, to the building. As he neared the westerly corner of the block out came a six-foot man from between the building and the fence on a run. Officer Furnald ordered him to stop, and he turned and started towards him, and threw a roll of ribbons in his face. Mr. Furnald drew his revolver and told him to keep off or he would shoot him. He obeyed and the officer then hollowed for help, but no one came, although he was heard by a dozen or more, some quarter of a mile away. Nothing daunted the officer ordered his man to the lockup under the Town Hall, some eight or ten rods distance and he followed within a few feet of him, pistol in hand. On arriving he told his prisoner to unlock the door, go in and light the gas, and then go into a cell, and fearing to do otherwise he obeyed. Mr. Furnald then stepped in and closed the door and secured his prisoner.

As he left the lockup four or five who had heard his calls came to him, but they were too late to render any assistance. Mr. Furnald then started to hunt up the other rogue who had made his escape. He traced dim to a swamp and from there to the railroad bridge, near Miss Jillson's residence, where he arrested and took him to the lockup, about 5 A. M. He at first denied any complicity in the burglarly, but recognized his companion when he reached the lockup. This fellow gave his name as James Harrison, his companion as Alexander Charles Stockwell.

The men are about twenty-five years of age. Stockwell is about six feet in height, thin features, light complexion and smooth face. Harrison is about five feet nine inches high, rather stouter than Stockwell, and of the same cast of countenance. They are undoubtedly brothers, and although they claim to belong to Boston, from papers and letters found on their persons, it is clearly conceded that their name is Ritchie, and that they belong to New York. Stockwell had his clothing full of goods but on Harrison nothing was found. When arrested each man had a pistol upon his person.

Miss Jillson estimates her loss at $120 and that of Miss Bellew at $30.

On Wednesday morning they were arraigned before Judge Bumpus. Stockwell pleaded guilty and was bound over in $1500 for his appearance before the grand jury. Harrison pleaded not guilty and his case was continued one week. Both failed to furnish sureties and were taken to Dedham by Officer Furnald.

On Thursday morning Officers Furnald and Locke found in a wall at Wollaston, more of the stolen property.

NEW RESERVOIR. The contract for a new reservoir at the junction of Quincy and Pleasant streets, South Quincy, has been awarded to Mr. Quincy A. Faunce of Wollaston. The capacity is to be about 15,000 gallons and the work is to be done before August 1st. Mr. Faunce's bid for the job was $385.00, and being the lowest was accepted. He has promised to fill the same when completed for $25, which the Engineers have agreed to pay.

REUNION. The tenth reunion of the Red Ribbon Reform Clubs to be held in Quincy on the 23d inst. is expected to be a grand affair. Several hundred delegates are expected from abroad, and no doubt they will be received by their friends in this place with generous hospitality. The convention will be called to order at 10 o'clock in Faxon Hall, by Benjamin E. Tucker, of Shrewsbury. The regular routine of business will then be attended to, and in the evening a grand mass meeting will be held in the Town Hall.

ACCIDENT. Mr. George E. Tirrell fell overboard on the 4th, from the yacht Wildfire. At the time of the accident the yacht was off Mear's and about one mile from shore. Mr. Tirrell being a good swimmer struck for the shore, and when he had gone half the distance was picked up in a very exhausted condition. He had a very narrow escape from drowning and is still suffering severely from the effects of the accident.

PRIZE WON. The yacht Glance of East Braintree, was the winner of a prize in the regatta of the South Boston Club. The prize was a very beautiful barometer valued at $30. In the fleet there were thirty-nine entries made and some of the boats were the fastest sailers in the harbor.

Local Items.

☞ We are glad to learn that Mr. James S. Baxter has quite recovered from a severe attack of pneumonia, from which he has been suffering for several weeks.

☞ The Rev. D. M. Wilson left town for northern Vermont this week, where he is to spend a short vacation. His address is West Charleston, Vt. His family went with him.

☞ The wife of Nathaniel Nightingale died on Sunday last after a long and painful illness. She was buried from the Congregational church on Wednesday last.

☞ The Vulture Engine Company will attend the muster at Danvers, on the 24th inst. They have invited the W. M. French Hose Company, also the Actives of North Weymouth. The Belknap Band will accompany them.

☞ The scholars and teachers connected with the Sunday School of Christ Church held their annual picnic at Wainwright's Grove, on Thursday last. A delightful time was enjoyed by all.

☞ Miss Frances E. Willard will address the citizens of Quincy in the Town Hall, on Friday evening next.—Let every one who wishes to hear one of the most talented lady speakers in the State be present.

☞ The marriage of Miss Annie L., daughter of Mr. Albert Thayer of this town, to Mr Frederick A. Marsh, of the international revenue service took place at the Mount Pleasant Unitarian church, Boston Highlands, Wednesday evening, July 2d.

☞ The Union regatta on the Fourth was rather a slim affair,—but few yachts entered for the prizes. The day was excessively hot and the South Boston race called quite a number of yachts away. The winners were the Œnone and the Annie.

☞ Mr. Frank A. Spear's horse became frightened on the morning of the Fourth, and turning suddenly overset the buggy and threw the occupants to the ground. Mr. Spear maintained his hold upon the reins until assistance was rendered, which probably saved a bad smashup. He was dragged some distance but was not badly bruised.

INTERESTING TO PENSIONERS. The Commissioner of Pensions gives notice that by virtue of an act of Congress, approved June 21, 1879, the biennial examination of invalid pensioners is abolished from that date.

The Fourth at Wollaston.

The Fourth was celebrated at Wollaston in quite a novel style. In the morning a breakfast was given in the Baptist Chapel by a company of twelve gentleman, representing in costume some of the early settlers at Merry Mount.

Following the breakfast were impromptu speeches by Geo. W. Chipman, Esq., of Boston, Rev. Mr. Van Meter of Rome, Mr. Cushman from Switzerland, Rev. Mr. Hall from Connecticut, Mr. Sherman and Mr. Williamson of Wollaston.

In the evening the ladies gave an entertainment at the same place, to which two elocutionist of Boston,—Mrs. Burgess and Mr. Cone—contributed recitations, and Mr. Robinson of Cambridge some fine singing. An original ode by Miss A. M. Guernsey, and choruses by a select choir were also sung. "Creature comforts" were provided in ice creams, lemonade, &c.

OBITUARY. Dea. Urbane Cudworth was buried from his daughter's residence on Monday last, the Rev. Mr. Wilson officiating. Until within a few years of his death, when the infirmities of age kept him confined to his house, he was an active and industrious citizen of this place. He attended all the town meetings and usually took a very active part in the proceedings. He was a member of the Universalist Society, and for many years a deacon of the Church.

Mr. Cudworth was particularly noted, however, for his honest and upright dealings. As long as he was able to read, and even until his wife's death, a few years since, he was a constant patron of the PATRIOT, and among our list of subscribers, not one was so prompt to pay as he. He did not wish to be indebted to any one, and for this reason he would never allow a copy of the PATRIOT to enter his humble abode, before it had been paid for. What a blessing it would be to the world, if all men were as prompt in their dealings as he.

WEST QUINCY. The floral concert at the Methodist church in West Quincy, on Sabbath evening, June 29th, notwithstanding the storm, was a decided success. Had it not been that a part of the programme was omitted, on account of the absence of some, it would have been the best concert we have had for a long time. As it was it was not inferior to any. The arrangement of the flowers represented a "garden" which was the subject for the concert, and was gotten up by the Superintendent, Mr. M. P. Fuller, aided by his wife and others, who generously contributed flowers for the occasion. Mr. Carter, the Superintendent of the Congregational school at the centre, by request was present and made a timely and interesting address, as also did Mr. Thomas Craig, a former superintendent, but now a teacher.

The singing was under the direction of Mr. H. S. Luce, one of our efficient young men; Miss Abbie Fuller presided at the organ. The speaking by the children was good. The exercises closed with remarks and the benediction, by the pastor, Rev. R. H. Harlow.

PICNIC. The annual picnic of the Quincy and Boston branches of the G. [illegible] occurred at Lovell's Grove, on the 4th of July, and was largely attended. In the morning the Quincy Branch, headed by the Weymouth Band, marched from their hall to the Square, where the band entertained the citizens with some choice selections. Afterwards the association took carriages for the grove.

About 12 o'clock the steamer Stamford from Boston arrived at the wharf near the grove, and it was astonishing to see the number of people that were on board. It is estimated that about 4000 persons were present at the grove during the day. Speeches were made by Messrs. Harris, Litchman, Kelly and others. Mine host Steward attended to the wants of those present in a manner creditable to himself notwithstanding the large number that wished to satisfy the inner man. The boat race occurred in the after noon and was won by the Costello crew. The other games were interupted by the rain, which put a damper on the pleasures of the day, and shortly afterward the picnicers started for their homes.

GLASS BALL SHOOT. The Merry Mount Shooting Club held a shoot at Quincy Woods, on Saturday last. There were three contests,—one at single ball thrown from a Bogardus trap, another at balls thrown from a revolving trap, and a third at double balls. The following is the summary:—

DISTRICT COURT. Criminal business has been a little more stirring this week, and the following cases have been attended to:—

Thomas Geagan of Weymouth, for an assault on Thomas Doran. Fined $3 and costs. His brother, Martin, was fined $20 for an assault on said Doran.

Thomas Mitchell of Quincy, for being drunk, was discharged for want of sufficient evidence against him.

Frank B. Reed of Holbrook, for an assault on Julia A. Mullen. The evidence was not deemed sufficient, and he was discharged.

Thomas Mulligan of Braintree, for an assault on Michael Stanton. He was discharged on payment of costs. Stanton acknowledging satisfaction.

Edwin A. Woods of Randolph, for being drunk. Discharged.

Edward E. Perry of Quincy, for being drunk, was fined $3 and costs.

Alexander C. Stockwell of Boston, for breaking and entering the store of Miss Jillson in Quincy. Plead guilty, and was bound over in the sum of $1500 for his appearance before the Grand Jury.

James Harrison, for the same offence, plead not guilty, and his case was continued until Wednesday next.

Peter Smith of Braintree, for an assault and battery on his wife. He plead not guilty, and the case was continued to July 21st, and he was ordered to give bonds in the sum of $3000. Committed.

Petition granted.—Martin P. Pike to sell real estate of Martha Thayer of Randolph; bond $1500.

Dedication of Monument.

On July 4th the beautiful soldiers' monument which Messrs. Thomas & Owens of this town constructed for West Bridgewater, was dedicated with fitting ceremonies. At half past ten a procession was formed on the church green and moved to the town square, in the centre of which the monument is located. The elegant structure was handsomely decorated with the national colors, wreaths and floral adornments, and as its graceful outline stood against the blue sky it was an object worthy the pride of the people as well as a fitting memorial to the fallen. After being grouped about the monument the Chief Marshal introduced the President of the day; after an invocation by Rev. Mr. Lovering, the architect and builder, Mr. William W. Thomas of Quincy, stepped forward and transferred the monument to the chairman in the following words:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee: The work which you intrusted to me a little over one year ago is completed, and is now submitted for your approval and acceptance. I have endeavored, as far as I could, with the limited means placed at my disposal, to execute a fitting and lasting memorial to the men of West Bridgewater who lost their lives sustaining the government during the war of 1861 and '65. Whether I have done justice to the cause, and how far I have succeeded in meeting the expectations of a grateful and patriotic people, remains for you, as their representatives to say. I have to thank you, gentlemen, for the kindness you have shown me, and for the generous support which I received from you during the progress of this work.

Mr. Francis E. Howard, president of the association, responded as follows:—

In accepting at this time the monument, permit me in behalf of the Committee, as well as the Association which they represent, to express to you our entire satisfaction with the manner in which you have discharged the duties devolving upon you as architect and contractor, in completing the workmanship of the beautiful structure we now see before us. You have done all and more than you contracted to do. Whether you have been amply compensated or not for your labor, or whether you may be at some future period by the Monument Association or by the town, this is not the time or place to determine. But this I may say, that it must be to you a never-failing source of satisfaction that you have in this structure given to the public a specimen of art, of which you may well be proud. • • • Again, in behalf of the Monument Association, we congratulate you on the successful completion of your work, and now in turn present it to the town.

VULTURE ENGINE. At the annual meeting of the Vulture Engine Company last Monday evening, the Board of Engineers were present, also the Active Engine Company from North Weymouth. One of the first duties of the evening was the playing of the tub, which was done in good shape, throwing a stream on this occasion over two hundred feet. On the conclusion of this exercise the company with their invited guests repaired to the engine house, where they sat down to a generous collation which they all highly enjoyed. At the conclusion of the feast, speeches were made by the Engineers and others. A glee club was present who entertained the company with some fine singing.

After a few hours spent in social enjoyment the company dispersed.

EXCURSION. The choir of St. Mary's Church, West Quincy, had a grand excursion to Downer Landing on Saturday of last week. The day was very pleasantly spent, and in the evening the party started for Nantasket beach, where a few hours good time were enjoyed by all. About nine o'clock the party were startled by "all aboard," and immediately took their seats for home, where they arrived in double quick time, well pleased with the day's festivities.

ACCIDENT. While workmen were engaged hoisting a new derrick at the granite works of Messrs. Churchill & Hitchcock on Thursday last, Mr. Matthew O'Brien was suddenly caught between two guys and had one of his legs severely injured. Dr. Gilbert was called, and after examining the injured limb, the wounded man was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital.

☞ For over a quarter of a century, Mr. Joseph W. Whiting, has never missed paying for his Patriot on the morning of July 4th. He thinks the day would not be celebrated rightly, if he should omit that duty. May that glorious day always find him with a pocket full of money.

CHANGE IN OWNERS. The yacht Wa-wa, owned by Mr. Arthur Hobart of East Braintree, has been purchased by Capt. J. F. Sheppard for $600.

July 3d, sailed Sch. Plymouth Rock, Capt. Parker, for New York, with granite from Granite Railway Co. and others.

July 5th, sailed sloop C. H. Edwards, Capt Driscoll, with granite from Churchill & Hitchcock and others.

COCK FIGHTING. A cocking main by parties from Hyde Park, Quincy and South Boston took place on Saturday night last at Faulkner's grove, Quincy Fifteen birds were entered for the fight, but only thirteen participated. The fight commenced at about 10.30 o'clock, and lasted until Sunday morning. All the birds but two were completely used up. These two fought until the owner of one of them, from Quincy, said that he was satisfied, and left South Boston in possession of the field, all the Hyde Park birds having been used up early in the fight. Although a large crowd was present, the utmost silence was maintained. Several of the party say that they saw a Boston officer at Granite bridge.—Herald.

THE PRESS EXCURSION—II.

On Thursday morning, June 31st, we left Oneonta for Ninevah, N. Y., a distance of thirty-nine miles; and from there we branched off and went to Carbondale, Penn. On this route we passed under the Erie railroad, which was built across a ravine on huge stone piers, 200 feet high. Our engineer by request stopped the train and allowed the tourists to examine this stupendous structure, and as we were viewing it, a freight train passed along, and the cars appeared nearly up to the clouds.

On arriving at Carbondale we left our train, and took special cars over the Gravity rode to Honesdale, a distance of sixteen miles, and on no part of our journey (over 1000 miles) were the members so perfectly delighted, as on this route over the Moosic mountain. The cars, two or three at a time, of a smaller size, are drawn up steep inclines by stationary engines and then allowed to go down the other side by their own gravity, checked only by brakes. The party was drawn up eight or ten of these inclines before they reached the highest peak, then they were started down a long inclined plane, ten miles in length, and allowed to go the whole distance without a stop. Some of the way the cars went very fast, (at the rate of a mile in two minutes,) and it was perfectly delightful. Clear up on the top of a mountain, in open cars, where a landscape view for miles could be had, and at the same time gracefully and gently gliding down, free from the puffing and blowing of an engine, and the dust and dirt so common on railroads. It appeared more like our boyhood days when we dragged the sled up the hill and then slid down. It is impossible to describe the joy we experienced on this trip, and would advise all who have an opportunity, to enjoy a ride over this mountain to do so.

In passing over the mountain from Carbondale to Honesdale one goes sixteen miles; and on returning he passes over an entirely different route, owned and worked by the same company, but the distance is four miles farther, or twenty miles.

The Gravity road was commenced in 1827, (about the same time the railway in this town was built for carrying our granite to the tide water,) but was not completed for two or three years. Many improvements have been made to the road since, and now it appears to be in perfect working order. It was built for the purpose of carrying coal over the mountain from Carbondale to Honesdale, where it is shipped down the canal. But the scenery is so grand that the company has built cars, expressly to accommodate passengers, and many are improving the trip. At the summit one is 2000 feet above tide water.

The company are conveying coal over this road at the rate of 1000 tons an hour, or 10,000 tons a day; and in case of an emergency we were told that they could increase the amount to nearly 20,000 tons per day.

As we rode into Honesdale we passed over the very stretch of railway, which the Stourbridge Lion, the first locomotive that ever ran in America, made its experimental trip, in the summer of 1829,—half a century ago. The engineer, Mr. Horatio Allen, is still living in New York City. The Stourbridge Lion was built in Europe and brought to this country. The first locomotive made in America was built at West Point, and weighed four tons.

On arriving at Honesdale the party walked to the Allen House, kept by M. B. Allen, where an excellent dinner was prepared for them. After dinner, through the kindness of Mr. Edward A. Penniman, editor of the Citizen, members of the Board of Trade, and others, the excursionists were shown about the town.

Honesdale is the county seat of Wayne County, situated 160 miles northeast of Harrisburg. It was named after Mr. Philip Hone, and was incorporated in 1831. It is beautifully laid out; has fine shady streets and is the largest coal-storing place in the world. The coal brought from the mines over the Gravity road accumulates during the winter, when the canal to Rondout is unavailable, and there have been on the two great dumping grounds as much as 575,000 tons awaiting transportation. This was in 1873, when the trade was very heavy. In the present year, in April, when canal navigation was opened, there were 339,019 tons awaiting transportation. At one of these great dumping grounds the coal is on a level, and is poured into the boats through chutes, as at the breakers. In the other it is raised by means of immense steam shovels, which lift two tons at a time, and pour it in uninterrupted streams into its receptacle for transportation.

P.

REAL ESTATE. There was a large sale of houselots at Mattapan this week. The property was owned by the Sixteenth Ward Land Company, who offered a free excursion from Boston to all who wished to attend the sale, and large numbers were present. The property is bounded by the tracks of the New York and New England Railroad and Blue Hill Avenue. It is well situated close by the depot and near schools and other advantages. The land is high and dry, and has recently been greatly improved, but the people present either did not appreciate the opportunity or were not in condition to invest. The bidding was slow, and prices ruled very low. The first lot on the corner, brought the best price, three cents per foot. After that there was a rapid decline, until finally a very fair site for a dwelling house was knocked down at the unprecedently low figure of an eighth of a cent per foot. Sixteen lots were sold on Wednesday, and then the sale was adjourned until Thursday afternoon.

VENTURESOME. Two gentlemen, residents of Milton Lower Mills, sailed on Tuesday last for Australia in a small yacht, called the Golden Gate. These gentlemen are thorough seamen, and are well aware of the hazardous undertaking, but they feel confident of their ability to bring their boat into the harbor of Melbourne, Australia. They expect to occupy one year in completing their voyage and have carried an abundant supply of provision. Their first stopping place will be St. Thomas, on the African coast and Cape Town will be the next, from whence they will go direct to Melbourne. The Golden Gate is eighteen feet long, five feet four inches wide, two and a half feet deep, and is the smallest craft that has ever attempted an ocean voyage.

Sudden Death.

Rev. Herman Bisbee, a former pastor of the Universalist Church in this town, died very suddenly on Sunday last. He had occupied his pulpit that morning at the Hawes Place Church, in Boston, where he had been pastor for the past five or six years. He had been suffering from a slight biliary derangement for a day or two preceding his death but nothing serious was anticipated.

At the conclusion of services on coming from the pulpit, he retired to the church parlor and reclined on a lounge, asking for a drink of water. Mr. Frank Penny who resides near ran to his house and brought some Jamaica ginger which gave apparent relief.

He then accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Penny home, feeling, he said better, only a stiffness in his arms. On the lady's recommendation a physician was sent for, and Dr. Sherman was immediately in attendance, but no danger was anticipated. He complained of a terrible pain over his chest and head and after a slight paroxysm expired about 2 o'clock.

Mr. Bisbee was in his forty-seventh year and fifteenth of his ministry. He was born at Springfield, Vermont, and was in 1868 pastor of the Universalist Society of this place. He was a gentleman much respected by all who became acquainted with him during his ministry in Quincy. Subsequently he united with the Unitarian body, and has occupied the pulpit of Hawes-place Church between five and six years, where he endeared himself not only to his own congregation but to other denominations by his kindness of heart, dignity and gentlemanly bearing. Mr. Bisbee was twice married and leaves two sons and a daughter by his first wife, who are living on a farm in Vermont, the eldest boy being twenty-two years old. He also leaves two little ones by his last wife, the daughter of Rev. Wm. G. Babcock of Boston. His sermons were carefully prepared and he illustrated largely from current events. At all times he expressed much sympathy with the poor, and his address last Sunday was in favor of improving the condition of the laboring class.

Mr. Bisbee had a slight shock four years ago which has now resulted so fatally. He often said to his people he would be glad if it was God's will that he could die and throw off the mortal for immortality. His sudden death has cast a gloom over a large number of acquaintances, and his afflicted widow and family have the sympathy of a wide circle.

A BLESSING. Dyspeptics and others will be pleased to learn there is a balm in Gilead for them. Mr. Fernald whose advertisement appears in another column relates to us some results of his experience in the working of the Holman Liver Pad. All that constitutes life are powerfully acted upon by this wonderful absorbent and tonic. The stomach and liver, blood and nerves are immediately acted upon, and the sufferers from headache and other ills are healed. No dosing! The nervous persons can sleep better from the first, and dyspeptic troubles leave in a few days.

July 6th, Mr. Nathaniel T. Guild, aged 65 years.

July 7th, Mrs. Phœbe, wife of Mr. Nathaniel Nightingale, aged 72 years and 18 days.

July 9th, Mr. Thomas C. Bates, aged 63 years and 4 months.

Great Spring Blessing!

DR. BLISS' CATARRH BITTERS. This is the best Spring medicine you can take. It will remove that all-gone feeling you have, for it puts new vigor into the blood, thoroughly cleansing and purifying it, thus striking at the very root of the troubles to which so many are subject in the SPRING TIME, such as CATARRH, HUMORS, SORES, LIVER TROUBLES, &c., all of which come from IMPURE BLOOD, or inaction of the LIVER. Some of the Herbs in these bitters are Mandrake (for the Liver), Yellow Dock, Burdock, Prickly Ash (for the Blood), Rhubarb and Boneset (for the Stomach). Then we add something that works especially in the blood for CATARRH. Large bottles, over one hundred doses, 75 cts. GEO. C. GOODWIN & CO., Boston.

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate.

IN MALDEN.

PURSUANT to a Power of Sale contained in a certain Mortgage given by John E. Thayer and Mary M. A. Thayer, his wife, in her own right, to the Weymouth Savings Bank, dated April 23d, 1877, and recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, Lib. 1433, folio 564, for breach of the condition thereof, and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at Public Auction, on the premises hereinafter described, on TUESDAY, the fifth day of August A. D., 1879, at three o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said Mortgage, to-wit:—

A certain piece or parcel of land with the buildings thereon situated in Malden, in the County of Middlesex, being lot numbered twenty-four (24) on a "Plan of land in Malden, belonging to W. S. Baker, A. F. and N. N. Sargent, Surveyors, April 1873," bounded northwesterly by Granville Avenue, fifty feet; northeasterly by Lot No. 23 on said plan, ninety-one feet; southeasterly by Lot No 35 on said plan, fifty and eighty-one hundredths feet: and southwesterly by Lot No. 25 on said plan, one hundred feet, and containing four thousand seven hundred and seventy-five (4775) square feet, being the same premises conveyed to said Mary M. A. Thayer by William S. Baker, by his deed dated April 21, 1877.

The equity in said premises is now supposed to be held by William E. Varney, Theresa H. Willard and Stephen P. Weld.

Said premises will be sold subject to all unpaid taxes and outstanding tax-titles if any.

Poetry.

Summer and Winter.

In the mellow month of June,
When the tawny thrushes sing,
And the yellow cowslips spring,
From the meadows by the brooks,
When in dusky forest nooks,
Elfin huntsmen wind the horn
And the clover-scented morn
Ripens into cloudless noon—
Then I love to lie alone
In the grass on some cool hill,
While the meadow-larks are shrill,
"Life is music." Care and pain
Fare but ill in Summer's reign.

When the hills are wrapped in sheets,
When the snow whirls on the leas,
And the icy-fingered trees
Sparkle in the moon's cold light;
When the clouds in the long night
Weave a pall for the dead year,
And the keen winds hurls its spear
Right at every one it meets—
Then my heart is never sad,
For I think of breezy Spring
And the joys that it will bring—
Of the robins on the lawns
Piping in the dewy dawns.

Scribner for June.

Agricultural, &c.

Are There Too Many Farmers?

It is a no more common complaint of farmers then of men in other avocations, that their business has been overdone or that, as one of them recently said to us, "Prices on farm produce will never reach paying rates again until a great many engaged in farming find work at something else." We believe that this is a serious mistake, and that it leads to other mistakes quite as serious. The idea is, that there are too many farmers because too much produce is grown. Obviously then, the world would be benefited if every farmer would produce less. A step farther, and we should all be more prosperous, if our soil were poorer. Fertility then, is found to be a curse and barrenness a blessing! About here a clear-headed thinker will see that there must be a fallacy somewhere in this logic. Let us briefly point out wherein the fallacy consists.

The trouble of this country is, not that there are too many farmers, or too many producers of any kind, but that there are too many producers who cannot sell in the markets of the world because they produce too expensively. So, we see that after all, it is because our land is too poor rather than too rich, and produces too little rather than too much, that American farmers are suffering. We cannot have too much production of anything provided it is produced cheaply. There are not too many farmers, but too many poor farmers and too much poor farming. When we get the cost of production here down below that of other countries, we can always undersell them and there will never be any glutted market.

Despite the large areas of new lands brought under cultivation at the West, the number of men employed in farming rather decreases. Every year a larger proportion of our people live in cities and villages. It would be strange, indeed, if too many farmers were the cause of hard times, when there are undoubtedly fewer farmers in proportion to the whole population, than there were twenty or thirty years ago.—Rural New Yorker.

Strawberry Beds.

A horticulturist is credited with the following statement of experience in reference to the practice of mowing strawberry beds:

For several years I have adopted the practice of mowing at the period that the plants cease to put forth new leaves, and the old ones look dry and rusty. The treatment prevents the production of runners to any great extent, the beds being renewed by offshoots from the crowns of the old roots. Usually by fall the plantation will exhibit one mass of fresh-grown leaves. This treatment fails only when a dry and hot spell succeeds the mowing. I have never suffered but once in this way, when the beds were badly burned and thinned out. I did not lose them, however, as they afterwards revived, and though five or six years old, looked this season like new beds. I am so well satisfied with this system that I shall always continue it, taking the risk of having the operation defeated by a drouth, which, after all, only happens occasionally. With plenty of rain it succeeds perfectly.

☞ Half a dozen onions planted in the cellar, where they can get a little light, will do much toward absorbing and correcting the atmospheric impurities that are so apt to lurk in such places.—Dr. Foote's Health Monthly.

☞ Cultivate the soil between the currant bushes often, unless the ground is heavily mulched.

Anecdotes.

"Prisoner, why did you follow this man and beat and kick him so shamefully?"

"I am sorry yer Honor; I was a little drunk, and I thought it was my wife.

A bashful young man could defer the momentous question no longer, so he stammered:—"Martha, I—I—do you—you must have—are you aware that the Good Book says—er, says that it is not g-g-good that m-man should be alone?"

"Then hadn't you better go home to your mother?" Martha coolly suggested.

Not long since a party of visitors inspected the poorhouse. Among the inmates was a venerable looking old man, whose face indicated perfect happiness. He seemed to be perfectly contented. Said one of the visitors, "you seem to be satisfied with your lot?"

"I am," he replied, "I have a source of satisfaction that is denied to most men."

"Ah, you look forward to a blissful future beyond the grave."

"Yes," responded the old man, "but I also find much comfort in the proverb that says one man's loss is another man's gain. It makes me happy to think I never lost enough to do the fellow that found it much good."

If you feel dull drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR OR MEDICINE.

The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the World!

AN EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen.

Regulate the Liver and prevent.

CHILLS AND FEVER MALARIOUS FEVERS, BOWEL COMPLAINTS, RESTLESSNESS, JAUNDICE AND NAUSEA.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

BAD BREATH.

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath, and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be so easily corrected if you will take Simmons' Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your Appetite, Complexion, and General Health.

PILES!

How many suffer torture day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering from Piles. Yet relief is ready to the hand of almost any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR, is no drastic violent purge; but a gentle assistant to nature.

CONSTIPATION!

SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulation from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache.

Poetry.

Casabianca—1879.

The boy lay in his little bed,
  Though oft his mother called:
"Get up! come down to breakfast, Fred!"
  "Get up!" his father bawled.

Yet quiet and serene he lay,
  As though he heard them not;
Oppossum did the youngster play,
  Though things were getting hot.

The time passed on—he did not start!
  But took another nap;
His father up the stairs did dart,
  And gave his door a rap.

He cried aloud, "Say, Freddie, say!
  Why don't you leave your bed?"
But silently young Freddie lay,
  As though he were quite dead.

"Speak, Freddie," once again he cried,
  "For I must soon be gone;
And"—but a lusty snore replied—
  Pa's patience nearly gone.

Up to his face quick ran the blood,
  He tore his auburn hair,
A moment at the doorway stood
  In still, yet deep despair.

And shouted 'gain with a thunderous knock,
  "Young scoundrel, do you hear?"
While in the hall loud ticked the clock,
  That grated on his ear.

With angry push he opened the door,
  And slammed it to again;
With noisy strides across the floor,
  To the bed he walked amain.

Then came a sound like threshing wheat,
  Or butcher tendering steak!
Hear screams! hear moans! hear scampering feet!
  Ah, Freddie is awake!

A ringing bell, a mother's call,
  May sometimes rouse a lad;
But the only sure thing, after all,
  Is a father, when he's mad.

Miscellany.

EDNA.

It was a cold night in September.

For three days the rain had fallen almost unceasingly.

It had been impossible for us to get out, and no visitors had been in.

Everything looked dreary enough, and we felt so, truly.

"Aunt Edna," I said, tell us a story—a love story, please."

"Oh, little one, you have read so many. And what can I tell you more?" she answered gently.

"Oh, aunty, I want a true story. Do tell us your own. Tell us why you are blessing our home with your presence, instead of that of some noble man, for noble he must have been to have won your heart, and—hush. Yes, yes I know something about somebody, and I must know all. Do, please."

I pleaded on. I always could do more with Aunt Edna than any one else. I was named after her, and many called me like her—"only not nearly so pretty" was always added.

At last she consented, saying:

"Dear girls, to only one before have I given my entire confidence and that was my mother. I scarce know why I have yeilded to your persuasions, Edna, save that this night, with its gloom and rain, seems to join its pleading with yours, yearning to cast forth some of its fullness, and perchance find relief by pouring into your loving heart its own sorrows. But, darling, I would not cast my shadow over your fair brow, even for a brief time."

With her hand still shading her face, Aunt Edna began.

"Just such a night as this, eighteen years ago, dear child, my fate was decided. The daughter of my mother's dearest friend had been with us about a year. Dearly we all loved the gentle child, for scarcely more than child she was—only sixteen. My mother had taken her from the cold lifeless form of her mother into her own warm loving heart, and she became to me as a sister. So fair and frail she was. We all watched her with the tenderest care, guarding her from all that could chill her sensitive nature, or wound the already saddened heart. Lilly was her name. Oh, what a delicate lily she was when we first brought her to our home; but after a while she was won from her sorrow, and grew into a maiden of great beauty. Still with child like winning ways.

"Great wells of love were in her blue eyes—violet blue he called them.

"Others wondered if anyone's gaze would linger on any dark eyes when Lilly's were near?

"Her pale golden hair was pushed off her broad forehead and fell in heavy waves far down below her graceful shoulders and over her black dress.

"Small, delicately formed features, a complexion so fair and clear that it seemed transparent.

"In her blue eyes there was always such a sad, wistful look; this, and the gentle smile that ever hovered about her lips, gave an expression of mingled sweetness and sorrow that was very touching.

"You may imagine now how beautiful she was.

"Her mother had passed from the earth during the absence of Lilly's father.

"Across the ocean the sorrowful tidings were borne him.

"He was a naval officer.

"Lilly was counting the days ere she should see him.

"The good news had come that he soon would be with her.

"At last the day arrived, but, oh! what a terrible sorrow it brought.

"When her heart was almost bursting with joy expecting every moment to be clasped in those dear arms, a telegraphic dispatch was handed in.

"Eagerly she caught it, tore it open, read—and fell senseless to the floor.

"Oh! the fearful crushing words.

"We read, not of his coming to Lilly, but of going to her, his wife, in Heaven.

"Yes, truly an ophan the poor girl was then.

"In vain proved all the efforts to restore her to consciousness.

"Several times, when she had before fainted, mother was the only physician needed.

"But that night she shook her head and said:

"'We must have a doctor this time, and quickly.'

"It was a terrible night.

"Our doctor was very remote.

"Your father, suggested another near by.

"Your father said he had lately known him and liked him much.

"Through the storm he came, and by his skilful treatment Lilly was soon in consciousness, but not in health.

"A low nervous fever and many days we watched with fearful hearts.

"Ah! during those days I learned to look too eagerly for the doctor's coming.

"Indeed he made his way into the hearts of all in our home.

"After the dreaded crisis had passed, and we knew that Lilly would be spared to us, the doctor told mother he would have to prescribe for me.

"I had grown pale, from confinement in the sick room, and he must take me for a drive, in the fresh air that would bring the roses back to my cheeks.

"Willingly mother consented.

"After that I often went.

"When Lilly was able to come down stairs, this greatest pleasure of my life then was divided with her.

"One afternoon I stood in the porch with her, waiting while the doctor arranged something about the harness.

"Oh! how I wish it was my time to go,' she whispered.

"Well, darling, it shall be your time I can go to-morrow. Run, get your hat," I said, really glad to give additional pleasure to this child of many sorrows.

"No, no, that would not be fair. And Edna, don't you know that to-morrow I would be so sorry if I went to-day? I do not mean to be selfish, but, oh, indeed I cannot help it. I am wishing every time to go. Not that I care for a ride——"

She hesitated, flushed, and whispered:

"I like to be with my doctor. Don't you Edna? Oh! I wish he was my father or brother, or cousin—just to be with us all the time, you know."

"Just then the doctor came for me, and I had to leave her.

"As we drove off, I looked back and kissed my hand to her, saying:

"Dear little thing! I wish she was going with us.

"I do not," the doctor surprised me by saying.

"I raised my eyes inquiringly to his.

"In those beautiful, earnest eyes I saw something that made me profoundly happy.

"I could not speak.

"After a moment he added.

"She is a beautiful winning child, and I enjoy her company. But when with her, I feel as if it were my duty to devote myself to her entirely—in a word, to take care of her, or, I should say, to care for her only. And this afternoon of all others, I do not feel like having Lilly with us.

"That afternoon was one of the happiest afternoon in my life.

"Although not a word of love passed his lips I knew it filled his heart and was for me. He told of his home, his relatives, his past life. Of his mother he said,

"When you know her, you will love her dearly.

"He seemed to be sure that I should know her. And then—ah, well, I thought so too, then.

"Lilly was waiting for us when we returned. He chidded her for being out so late. It was quite dark. Tears filled her eyes as she raised them to his and said—

"Don't be angry. I could not help watching. Oh, why did you stay so long? I thought you never would come back. I was afraid something had happened—that the horse had run away, or—

"Angry I could not be with you, little one. But I don't want you to get sick again. Come now smile away your tears and fears. Your friend is safe and with you again," the doctor answered.

"Taking her hand, he led her gently into the parlor.

"He had not understood the cause of her tears. Only for him she watched and wept.

"Do stay, she pleaded, when her doctor was going.

"He told her that he could not then; there was another call he must make, but would return after a while.

"She counted the minutes, until she should see him him again, never concealing from any of us how dearly she loved him. She was as truly guileless as a child of six years.

"From the first of her acquaintance with him, she had declared 'her doctor' was like father. Mother, too, admitted the resemblance was very decided.

"This it was, I think, that first made him so dear to her.

"Several times, after the doctor returned that evening, I saw he sought opportunity to speak to me unheard by others. But Lilly was always near.

"Ah, it was better so. Better that from his own lips I heard not those words—he would have spoken. Doubly hard would have been the trial. Oh, that night, when he said 'good-bye.' He slipped in my hand a little roll of paper.

"As Lilly still stood at the window, watching as long as she could see him, I stole away and opened the paper. Then, for a while, I forget Lilly—aye, forgot everything, in my happiness. He loves me. On my finger sparkled the beautiful diamond—my engagement ring—to be worn on the morrow, 'if I could return his love,' he said.

"Quickly I hid my treasure away, his note and the ring—Lilly was coming.

"She was not yet strong, and soon tired, and as she kissed me good-night she said:

"I wish I had a picture of him—don't you?"

"Who dear?" I asked.

"My doctor. Who else, you tease? You know well enough," she answered, as she nestled her pretty head closer to mine.

"Soon she was sleeping, and dreaming of him. Sweet dreams at first I knew they were, for soft smiles fitted over her face.

"I could not sleep. A great fear stole in upon my happiness. Did not Lily love him too. How would she receive the news which soon must reach her? Was her love such as mine? Such as is given to but one alone? Or only as a brother did she love him?

"I must know how it was. Heaven grant that joy for one would not bring sorrow to the other, I prayed.

"I had not long to wait. Her dreams became troubled. Her lips quivered and trembled, and then, with a cry of agony, she started up.

"Gone, gone!" she sobbed.

"It was many minutes ere I succeeded in calming her and making her understand it was but a dream.

"Oh, but so real—so dreadfully real. I thought he did not care for me. That he had gone and left me, and they told me he was married."

"Telling this, she commenced sobbing again.

"Lilly, dear, tell me truly—tell your sister, your best friend—how it is you love your doctor?" I asked.

"How?" she returned. "Oh, Edna, more than all the world. He is all that I have lost and more; and if he should die, or I should lose him, I would not wish to live. I could not live. He loves me a little, does he not Edna?"

"I could not reply. Just then there was a terrible struggle going on in my heart. That must be ended, the victory won, ere I could speak.

"She waited for an answer, and then said, eagerly:

"Oh, speak, do. What are you thinking about?"

"Pressing back the sigh—back and far down into my poor heart—I gave her the sweet and kept the bitter part, when I could answer.

"Yes, dear, I do think he loves you a little now, and will, by and bye, love you dearly. God grant he may.'

"Oh, you darling Edna! You have made me so happy!" she cried, kissing me.

"Next morning I enclosed the ring with only these words—

"Forgive if I cause you sorrow, and believe me your true friend. I return the ring that I am not free to accept."

"I intended that my reply should mislead him, when I wrote that I was not free, and thus to crush any hope that might linger in his heart.

"While at breakfast that morning, we received a telegram that grandma was extremely ill, and wanted me.

"Thus fate seemed to forward my plans. I had thought to go away for awhile. I then told mother all. How her dear heart ached for me.

"Yet, she dared not say aught against my decision. She took charge of the note for the doctor, and by noon I was on my journey.

"Two years passed ere I returned home. Mother wrote me but little news of either Lilly or the doctor after the first letter, telling me that my note was a severe shock and great disappointment.

"Three or four months elapsed before grandma was strong enough for me to leave her. An opportunity at that time was presented for my going abroad.

"I wanted an entire change, and gladly accepted. Frequently came letters from Lilly. For many months they were filled with doubt and anxiety, but after a while came happier and shorter ones. Ah, she had only time to be with him, and to think in his absence of his coming again.

"When I was beginning to tire of travel, and nothing would still the longing for home, the tidings came that they were married, Lilly and the doctor.

"Then I hastened back, and ever since, dear girls, I have been contented, finding much happiness in trying to contribute to that of those so dear. Now, Edna, you have my only love story, its beginning and ending.

"But' aunt, do tell me his name," I said. "Indeed, it is not merely idle curiosity. I just feel as if I must know it—that it is for something very important. Now you need not smile. I'm very earnest, and I am sure I shall not sleep until I know."

I really felt a presentment that if I knew his name, it might in some way affect the story.

"Well, my child, I may as well tell you, Dr. Graham it was—Percy Graham," answered Aunt Edna.

"Ah! did I not tell you it was not curiosity? Listen Aunt. When you were away last winter, papa received a paper from S——; he handed it to me, pointing to an announcement. But I will run and get it. He told me to show it to you and I forgot; I did not dream all this."

From my scrapbook I brought the slip. and aunt read:

"DIED—Suddenly, of heart disease, on the morning of the 15th, Lilly, wife of Dr. Percy Graham, in the 34th year of her age."

Edna remained holding the paper without speaking for some minutes; then handing it back to me, she said softly, as if to her friend:

"Dear Lilly! Thank heaven, I gave to you the best I had to give, and caused you naught but happiness. God is merciful. Had he been taken and you left, how could we have comforted you?"

And then turning to me, she said:

"Nearly a year it is since Lilly went to heaven. 'Tis strange I have not heard of this.

"'Tis strange from him you have not heard," I thought; "and stranger still 'twill be if he comes not when the year is over. For surely he must know that you are free."

But I kept my thoughts, and soon after kissed aunt good night.

One month passed and the year was out.

And somebody was in the parlor making arrangements to carry away our aunt Edna.

I knew it was he, when he met me at the hall door and said:

"Edna—Miss Linden! can it be?"

"Yes, and no, sir—both Edna Linden; but, Doctor Graham, not your Edna. You will find her in the parlor," I answered, glad and sorry both at his coming.

Ah, she welcomed him with profound joy, I know.

He knew all; papa had told him.

And if he loved the beautiful girl, he then worshipped the noble woman.

"Mine at last!" I heard him say with fervent joy as I passed the door an hour after.

How beautiful she was when, a few weeks after, she became his very own.

I stood beside her and drew off her glove.

How happy he looked as he placed the heavy gold circlet on her finger.

How proudly he bore her down the aisle.

Ah, little Lilly was no doubt his dear and cherished wife.

But this one, it is plain to see, was the one love of his life.

For the Patriot.

"Whatsoever He Saith Unto You, Do it."

We should all observe this command to be personal,—"Whatsoever he said unto you, do it." O, it is so much easier to find out what Christ says to other people, and even to tell them of it, than to hear and put in practice what he says to us. A minister once preached a sermon with especial reference to one member of his congregation, a gentleman whose piety was, unhappily, not always marked by its consistency. His remarks were very plain and pointed, and he thought to himself,—as ministers have frequently thought—"Now surely this will touch him; he must see the force of that," and so he did, but not in the way wished or anticipated. When the service was over the gentleman and his pastor happened to meet. "I must thank you for your admirable discourse," said the former; "it was so very earnest and faithful, I couldn't help thinking all the time how exactly it suited Mr. B——." Are there not many members in every congregation who hear for others instead of themselves? Are there not many readers of the Bible who seem to peruse it for everybody's else benefit but their own? Mr. B——'s conduct is no excuse for yours. Each one of us must give an account, not of his neighbor, but of himself, to God. God has proclaimed to you his law, that you may see whether your next door neighbor comes up to its standard. Why not honestly carry out your convictions, and do what you know to be right. "Whatsoever Christ saith unto you, do it." X

For the Patriot.

To Live and Let Live.

My Brothers and Sisters:—Do you, who have been blest with much of this world's treasure believe that much is required of you, in order to secure a treasure beyond this life? It is the all important question for each one of us to consider. Do we think how many aching hearts there are in our world suffering for the necessaries of life? Do we think how much there is spent day by day to spread misery through our land and world? I will just speak of one thing that makes more misery than any thing in the world, and that is intoxicating drinks. My friends, will you who stand at your bars and deal out this monster death, will you think of that bar that you must stand at sooner or later. It is a great question for you to answer yourselves. Will you stop before you go down to endless darkness! Be entreated by one who wishes all well, to turn and live, and do some good to humanity in your day and generation.

Again, I speak to the rich, be liberal to those that have gained your riches for you to live at your ease; and that class is the hard working men, who toil hard day by day for a small sum to support their families. My friends, let us strive to be less selfish and more liberal; and then we shall begin to fill up the measure of our days; we shall see some leap for joy that there is a better day dawning. And, my friends, how our dear departed ones will rejoice to know that we are striving to follow the teachings of Jesus. Let us one and all have some noble time or end in view. Let each one of us leave some token or mark that will lead others safe into a haven of rest, when we shall have passed off the stage of action. Let us be wise and we shall gain a prize. A TRUE FRIEND.

How to Create Sunbeams.

Children for the first five years are just what their parents choose to make them. One of the most important things is to cultivate a pleasant disposition. If a child can get what it wants only by teasing and screaming, it learns to tease and scream and becomes a perfect torment. But if a child is told promptly and firmly, "you can get nothing by scolding, you must ask pleasantly and politely for whatever you want, you must be pleasant and look pleasant to win favors," it will soon learn to wear habitually a pleasant and winning aspect and to be a perfect sunbeam to the house.

Narrow Escape from Drowning.

THE UPSET YACHT.

We give below a full account of the excursion of some of our citizens who went down the bay for a sail on the day of the gale:—

Wednesday morning last a party of fourteen persons started from Point Holes, Quincy Point, in two boats, on a pleasure excursion down the river. After a dinner at Raccoon island, the party was divided. The first boat, the Undine, belonging to Mr. Harvey French, containing Mr. and Mrs. Danford Arnold, their son Willie, Mrs. Wrisley and daughter Minnie, and Amy, daughter of James H. Slade, with Ambrose Lelois as skipper; and the other boat, Lyra, owned by Mr. Daggett, containing Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Wrisley, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Slade, and son two years of age, Miss Annie Wrisley and Harry Slade; Mr. Slade as skipper.

Both boats ran down the East Gut, as far as Fort Warren, when signs of the impending storm were seen. The boats put about and ran up the river, intending to go ashore at Mears' Beach, for shelter, but owing to the calm which usually precedes a squall, the Undine, was unable to get nearer than about half a mile from the shore, and the Lyra about a mile, when the squall struck. The Lyra being built for heavy weather, although exposed to the full fury of the gale, rode through handsomely, under the skilful management of the skipper, although the whole party were thoroughly benumbed from exposure to the pelting hail and rain.

At the first approach of the squall the skipper of the Undine dropped his anchor, but being an old-fashioned one, with short flukes, proved entirely useless. The boat held to it for a few minutes at first, when a terrific gust lifted her almost clear from the water, and threw her over. Mrs. Wrisley and Mr. Arnold were washed overboard, and were, with great difficulty hauled back; Mrs. Wrisley was placed upon the keel of the boat, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold supported their son and Mrs. Wrisley, who was entirely helpless. The two children stood upon the centre board box, and were completely submerged by every wave.

Mr. Lelois being an able and skilful seaman, turned his attention to the comfort, (if there can be such a thing in such a position) of the others. He with almost superhuman daring, managed to bind the party together, and to the wreck, to prevent their being washed away.—Thus, for nearly half an hour or more, they stood at the mercy of the raging tempest, each wave almost taking away their foothold. The agony and suspense of the party, in this terrible situation cannot be described. All depended on the fine judgment of the skipper, and the presence of mind of all, who did everything quietly.

The boat could not be seen at first from shore but as soon as a glimpse was had, Mr. William H. Mears, with the assistance of Mr. John Veada, at the risk of their lives, started immediately for the scene. After considerable hard work the party were placed in the boat, Mrs. W., and Willie, were almost gone. This small boat being now loaded with nine persons, settled to the water's edge, but were carried safely to the Weymouth shore, although the storm had only slightly abated. All hands were taken in charge by Mr. and Mrs. Sawtelle, at North Weymouth, who offered every part of their house, and supplied each with dry clothing and attended to their every want. Sincere thanks are due them, and the shipwrecked party are heartily grateful for their care. Mr. Sawtelle furnished a team, carrying them to their several homes in Quincy.

Too much credit cannot be given Messrs. Mears and Veada for their humane act, and if anybody is deserving of medals from the Massachusetts Society they are.

Mr. and Mrs. Mears took the Lyra's party and did everything for them, supplying them with dry clothing, and provided a carriage to convey them home.

The tender of the Lyra went adrift at the first squall, and was picked up by two scoundrels in a South Boston sloop, who started for Boston with it in tow, thinking that they had secured a prize, and although hailed and told to let the skiff go, paid no attention, but kept on their course. They were pursued by Mr. Slade in the Lyra, who overhauled them near Nut Island, when they unwillingly gave it up. Such people should be made to suffer for such contemptible meanness.

Burning Accident. On Wednesday afternoon, during the heavy shower, a young son of Mr. Daniel Mahall met with a terrible accident while lighting the fire to prepare supper for his father. He took the oil can and poured the kerosene into the stove where there were some live coals which he thought were out, but such was not the case as the oil immediately took fire, blowing the bottom and top out of the can, and setting fire to his clothes. He then ran to the residence of Mr. John Cashman, which was but a few rods distant, and from there to the barn, where a large trough for watering Mr. C's horses was kept, into which the little fellow plunged to relieve his sufferings, which must have been terrible. His clothes were nearly all burnt off and his body and arms presented a shocking appearance. Dr. Morison was immediately called and done all in his power to relieve the boy's sufferings. At last accounts he was very low and slight hopes were entertained for his recovery. This is a sad blow to his parents as he is their only child.

It will be the grandest temperance meeting ever held here, and the audience should only be limited to the capacity of the hall. The members of the Quincy Reform Club will meet this evening to choose delegates. A full ttendance is desired.

TERRIFIC STORM.

HEAVY RAIN AND SHARP LIGHTNING.

A PERFECT GALE.

BUILDINGS DEMOLISHED.

TREES UPROOTED AND BROKEN.

Yachts Sunk, &c.

The gale which visited us on Wednesday afternoon is one long to be remembered by our citizens. Monday and Tuesday, and part of Wednesday had been excessively hot and a change was looked for with pleasure; but when the fearfully black cloud appeared in the west, and before its fury had hardly reached our village, the citizens began to shake in their boots and feel that all was not well.

The gale commenced in Quincy about four o'clock and lasted about forty minutes, during that time hundreds of trees were blown over or broken off, sixty to eighty chimneys tipped over, eight or ten yachts overset, buildings and fences blown down, corn-fields leveled and a few places struck by lightning. The following incidents we have been able to gather:—

The Adams Academy vane was blown off, which struck on the roof in front, tearing off the slate and making a large hole in the roof.

The St. John's Catholic Church steeple was struck by lightning and somewhat injured.

The trees around the Unitarian Church were handled roughly but none were severly injured; Temple street, however, was strewn with leaves, twigs and branches.

A large number of bricks were blown off of Adams' block, and in there fall broke two large panes of glass, one in George Saville's clothing store and another in Joseph Silva's.

One of the squares of glass in the large skylight, in the rear of Mr. George T. Defrees's store, was broken while Mr. D. was trying to close it and the broken pieces of glass, which were very thick, fell striking Mr. Defrees, cutting an ugly gash in his head and side. His wounds were dressed by Dr. Gilbert and we are pleased to say that he is doing well.

A large apple tree belonging to Mr. Charles L. Pierce on Canal street was torn up by the roots; and an ash tree, near the brook, tipped over.

A house belonging to George L. Baxter was about the only one that lost chimneys at South Quincy. The gale at the south and west parts of the town was not so severe as near the seashore.

A large limb of one of the horse chestnut trees in front of Charles F. Adams' house was broken.

The estate of the late Charles Miller suffered severely. Many fine elms were blown over, and the house damaged. The old hollow tree in the wall by the driveway is gone. It has stood for scores of years, and by its hollow appearance attracted the attention of passers over the stile.

A chimney on the residence of Jonathan Baxter on Washington street was blown over.

A large handsome linden tree in front of John W. Hall's and near Dr. Underwood's was badly broken.

A telegraph pole corner of Hancock and Greenleaf streets was slivered from top to the bottom by the electric fluid as it passed from the wires to the ground. Several others near Peter Butler's were used similarly.

Many large trees on the Butler farm were blown over and many broken. The willow trees appeared to be the least able stand the high pressure.

A large elm on Cross street near residence of Richard Williams, was broken.

The storm at Quincy Point and immediate vicinity was very severe. Upon the grounds of H. M. Federhen, Jos. L. Whiton, and George Thomas, large trees were torn up by the roots.

A large elm in front of the residence of Isaiah G. Whiton, was blown across his house, damaging the house to a small extent.

The large blacksmith shop of Dea. George Thomas in the ship yard, was levelled to the ground, and the store house of D. Howard Bills, a building 30 by 50, was badly twisted.

Among the yachts sad havoc was made:—the Elfin, Imp, Elite, Osceola, Minette, and a sloop, name unknown, were capsized, and the Elf and Clytie filled at their moorings, while a boat owned by N. B. Holmes which laid high and dry upon the upland, was rolled over like a toy.

The covered walk leading to Lovell's Grove, was completely demolished and the bathing houses connected with the grove, were nearly all upset.

After the storm had abated, Washington street from the residence of John Federhen, Esq. to the bridge, presented more the appearance of woods road, than the busy street it really is, owing to the trees and limbs piled therein.

Three large chimneys on Edmund B. Taylor's residence were snapped off like pipestems, and one falling on the back roof smashed two of the rafters, and nearly went through into the garret.

The roof of Whittemore's Factory, for the manufacture of shoe tools was lifted and quite a hole was made in the same, which will cost several hundred dollars to repair.

A large stately elm on the easterly side of Mr. John Faxon's residence was shattered in twain, and the chimney on the L was struck by lightning, but little damage was done to the house.

Mr. Joseph A. Bass had a chimney knocked over, but the insurance agent does not think it was caused by lightning.

The following gentlemen, also of Wollaston, lost one or more chimneys:—George F. Pinkham, J. B. Rollins, Geo. Elliot, G. W. Griffin, Deacon Parker and Mr. Farland. Also the Wollaston Hotel, and houses belonging to Henry H. Faxon.

Mr. David Whittemore had a large grape trellis badly injured, and the Wollaston Methodist Church had several windows blown in and broken.

Many large elms on the Quincy farm, set out many years ago by Josiah Quincy, were broken and uprooted.

At Atlantic and Squantum, a number of chimneys were blown down. Of the residences noticed, were Henry Giles, C. A. Richards, H. J. Pope, the Gibbons' house, H. C. Richards and H. S. Burkhardt. The ventilator on the barn at the Baker place on Atlantic street was blown to the ground.

Two panes of glass were broken in Gurney's store by hail, and some twenty or more in Mrs. Berry's residence, near Mr. Burkhardt's, and owned by Jos. W. Robertson.

Mr. Butland had a fine grapery destroyed, together with a large amount of other fruit.

Mr. John Clean's fine yacht, Julia dragged her anchors, and drifting against the edge of the channel filled with water, completely ruining her cabin furniture, and cushions which had been newly upholstered. Two boys in it, were rescued with difficulty. A party from the Jenkins' house set out in a row boat and brought the sufferers ashore. Every possible aid was given, under the direction of Col. Jenkins, and they soon commenced to improve.

The gale at Houghs Neck was very severe. Hardly a beach house or barn but was more or less injured.

A barn owned by Josiah Babcock, on the bluff east of the Willow house, was stripped into pieces. Not a particle remaining on the spot where it once stood.

Many windows were broken by hail in the new beach houses built this season by Mr. Mears.

A barn belonging to Adam Vogel was somewhat damaged.

A barn belonging to J. D. Taber, proprietor of the Bay View House, was lifted from its foundation and carried over forty feet, with a horse inside of it. The animal fortunately escaped with a few scratches and bruises, but the building was badly shattered. And it was with difficulty that the horse was removed.

The roof of Lewis Cain's beach house was blown off and it was otherwise injured.

The sheds connected with Mears' hotel were blown down, but fortunately no one was injured.

The orchard of Rufus P. Littlefield was badly injured. Some trees were blown over and others broken off.

A barn belonging to Wellington Smith, at Rock Island was blown over and a carryall badly damaged.

William Croucher, a Nut island fisherman, was capsized, and his companion, a boy named Walter Hillenheim of East Boston, was drowned.

George W. Morton's cottage, the Red Lion, had its roof blown off, and its piazza carried away.

The old oak tree, which has stood for many years at the junction of the roads to Germantown and Houghs Neck is gone. Many other large trees in the vicinity were broken.

A party consisting of John H. Ryan, Peter Barry, Patrick Barry and John McGowan, were at Quincy's beach claming, when the storm commenced. Their horse was let lose to seek shelter the best he could. The young men stuck to the wagon, to prevent its blowing over, and were frequently lifted off their feet by the gale.

The hail flew thick and fast and some stones were quite large, as McGowan can prove by the many bruises on his body.

Off the shore were numerous pleasure boats. Capt. Ambrose Lelois had a party of seven on board of the yacht Undine, owned by Mr. Harvey French, composed mostly of women and children. The squall overtook them when about half a mile from shore, there being but little ballast on board, she was very easily overset. They were seen from shore and a boat manned by William H. Mears, and Joseph Veada, started to their rescue.

The sloop yacht Undine was capsized near Great Hill, and its occupants, John S. Kelly and Edward Barry from South Boston, were thrown into the water.—Kelly could swim, and kept his companion above water for a long time but finally lost his hold and he sank. Kelly was afterwards rescued in nearly an exhausted condition. Barry was nineteen years old and unmarried.

Mr. Jacob H. Hersey and his two children, and the little daughter of Mr. J. Edward Spear were on one of the Nantasket beach steamboats. The passengers were all terribly frightened.

Mr. W. W. Ewell, wife and child were on the pier at Long Island. They did not dare to leave their shelter for fear of being blown into the water, and were fearful that the structure might be blown over. Their half hour's experience was not enviable.

For the Patriot.

Braintree.

The blow on Wednesday afternoon did considerable damage in the south part of the town. On Pond street it came in tornado style, passing in nearly a straight line towards the east. The back part of the large house, known as the Capt. French place, near the corner of Pond and Granite streets, was destroyed. The falling timbers severely injured Mrs. Loring Hayden and a grandchild who was with her. They were so much hurt that they were taken to the hospital in Boston. The tornado then struck the house opposite, known as the Ben. French place, and made a complete wreck of the house, demolishing the stable and also the large building connecting the house and stable. Timbers, carriages, hay and other contents of the building were scattered in the low lands east of the house.

The unwelcome visitor then passed on, tearing up trees of all sizes in its way to a large barn, belonging to Mr. H. B. Arnold, making a complete wreck of this building. The tornado covered in breadth about five rods, and a very few moments proved its destructive power. Fortunately Mrs. Hayden and her grandchild were the only ones injured.

The South Congregational Sabbath school made their annual excursion to Long Beach on Thursday of this week.

Home Protection. Miss Frances E. Willard, the eloquent temperance lecturer from Illinois, delivered a free lecture on "Home Protection," at the Town Hall, on Friday evening. She made a powerful appeal to the women present to embrace the opportunity now offered for school suffrage.

Refreshments. The Red Ribbon Reform Clubs of this State, will hold a Convention at Faxon Hall, on Wednesday next. A large number of delegates are expected to be present and it is hoped that our citizens will contribute refreshments liberally to entertain them. A committee will be in attendance at Faxon Hall, on Wednesday morning to receive contributions.

East Milton. The Belknap Band gave an open air concert on Thursday evening, in this place. This is the first of four or more which are to be given here. The second one will be by Gelcher's German Band of Boston, and will occur on Thursday evening next if the weather permits; if unpleasant the next pleasant evening.

Cock Fighting. We are pleased to learn from Mr. Faulkner, that the article copied from the Boston Herald about a fight in Faulkner's Grove was incorrect. Nothing of the kind is permitted, or did occur there to his knowledge.

Picnic. The Christ Church Sunday School and Literary Association, Boston, held their annual picnic on Monday, some five hundred joining in an excursion to Lovell's Grove, near Quincy Point, where the day was passed in a pleasant manner.

☞ A new paper has been started at Brockton. It is called the Enterprise and Messers. Fuller & Rich are its managers. It is full of news and general reading matter, and is very neatly printed. We should judge by its general appearance that it must be a successful Enterprise.

☞ The Old Colony Railroad repair shop in South Boston had glaizers at work on Thursday, setting 714 panes of broken glass.

THE PRESS EXCURSION—III.

After enjoying a short but pleasant visit at Honesdale, the excursionists left by the Gravity road for Carbondale, where they found their cars, the same that left Boston with them, ready to carry the party to Scranton, Pa., where they were to stopped for the night. The excursionists were tired when they arrived at the Wyoming House, having traveled that day about 150 miles; still, from the delightful rides on the Gravity road, together with the many courtesies shown them, they felt happy; and were soon invited into the dining room, where an excellent supper awaited them.

Hardly had the meal been finished before the editors were greeted with singing by a glee club, composed of Swede miners. They were excellent vocalists and were frequently applauded.

About nine o'clock the party, by invitation, visited the large steel works located in this city, and witnessing the process of making Bessemer steel ingots and the manufacture of the ingots into steel rails, which are now being used very extensively on our railroads. The company's works are run night and day; and our party visited it in the evening, partly for economy in time and because the scenic effect of blowing the impurities out of the "converter" is more impressive by the darkness. Many of the party were greatly delighted, and expressed themselves in words of eloquence,—believing the sparks to be more brilliant and beautiful than any fire works they had ever seen. But the intense heat from the liquid and melted ingots, was very oppressive and made us perspire freely; although near the middle of the night, it was as hot and uncomfortable in the foundry as has been some of our hot days the present week. The Lackawanna Iron Company furnished employment on the first of May this year for 2500 men. The capacity for producing pig iron is 120,000 tons per annum; at the rolling mills 100,000 tons of steel and 50,000 tons of iron rails are the annual product.

On returning to the hotel we found a brass band discoursing sweet music for the pleasure of the tourists.

The next morning we left Scranton for Mauch Chunk, pronounced as if written Mock Chunk. On this trip we were obliged to pass over a high mountain, and to overcome an elevation of 1200 feet, the train was carried over a circuitous route for the distance of eleven miles, when really it was but three miles in a straight line to the top. When on this high eminence the scene along the Wyoming Valley was grand. A bird's eye view for fifty miles was had, but the moments were too limited to allow us time to fully appreciate its grandeur. Villages, town and cities were near the mountain's base, but in the far distance the tops of mountains appeared, one piled above the other.

The ride down the mountain was delightful. The larger part of the way was through the Lehigh Valley, and close to the river bearing that name. When within two miles of Mauck Chunk we came to Glen Onoko, where the party was permitted to stop an hour and a half to ramble in the glen, formerly known as Moore's Ravine. This beautiful glen was until a few years ago, comparatively unknown, but recently the Lehigh Valley Railway Company have laid out several thousand dollars in building paths, staircases, railings and bridges, and it is now in excellent taste. It is entirely safe for the most timid explorers, and the structures are purely rustic from beginning to end.

We were soon again on our way to Mauch Chunk, the Switzerland of America, as it is called, but we failed to notice the beauties of this place. The Mansion House, where we stopped, was packed in under a mountain, with another in front, only four or five hundred feet distant, and a river, canal and two railroads between. Long trains of coal cars pass every fifteen minutes through the day (and night we should judge by the noise). These trains usually have about 125 cars, but one we counted had 180 cars, and appeared as if there were no end.

The Switch-back railroad is one of the attractions here for tourists. There are but two inclines on this road, but they are more frightful than on the Gravity road. The first, at Mount Pisgah, is 2322 feet in length, and rises about one foot in three. But as we were told not less than 35,000 beings made this journey last year without an accident, we ventured up. At the top we found two powerful engines of 120 horse power each. After stopping a few moments to view the scenery, we move away gaily over a slightly declining grade for six miles, to the foot of Mount Jefferson. A few minutes later we were at Summit Hill, the place where coal was first discovered in this country in 1791, by Philip Ginther, a hunter. About 5,000,000 tons of coal is the total annual product of this region at the present time. The Switchback was originally built for the transportation of coal from the mines to Mauch Chunk, but is now used exclusively for pleasure travel, a tunnel cut down through the mountain furnishes an outlet for the coal. At Summit Hill there is a burning mine, which took fire in the year 1832, and is still burning. Although there is nothing about it that would attract particular attention of a stranger in damp weather heat or smoke can be noticed rising from the ground; the surface is uneven, having the appearance as if portions had fallen in.

The party remained at Mauch Chunk until the next morning when they returned to Scranton and visited a coal mine, a description of which we will give in our next article. P.

Serious Accident. On Sunday evening last as Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Litchfield, of this town, were returning from Nantasket beach to Scituate, where they were visiting, their horse became frightened while passing through King street, Cohasset, at a white horse upon a bank beside the road, and shying, threw the buggy down an embankment, some fifteen feet deep, injuring them both very severely, and completely wrecking the buggy. The street at the place where the accident occurred is very narrow and dangerous, and as Mr. Litchfield approached the spot the horse on the bank rose to his feet which frightened Mr. L.'s horse. Upon becoming detached from the vehicle the animal started to run up the embankment, injuring himself so severely on the rocks that he had to be killed. The horse was very gentle and highly valued by Mr. Litchfield, and he feels his loss severely; he estimates the mishap at about $200. Owing to the fact that the accident occurred on Sunday night, Mr. Litchfield unfortunately can claim no damages from the town.

Old Braintree and Quincy.

The following criticism of the History of Braintree, Quincy and a sketch of Randolph and Holbrook, has been taken from the Historical and Genealogical Register; and written by the well known antiquarian, John Ward Dean.

"The territory of ancient Braintree has had an historic interest from the time of the Pilgrims, when Capt. Wollaston commenced here a plantation, destined, after his departure, to obtain, under the leadership of Thos. Morton, the author of the "New English Canaan," a notoriety which makes it needless for us to repeat the incidents in its history. In this territory was also erected one of the first two furnaces in New England for smelting iron, which were set up about 1645, within a few months of each other, here and at Lynn, the priority not being clearly established. Here, likewise two presidents of the United States were born. The territory was for some years, before its incorporation, a part of or appendage to Boston.

"For more than a quarter of a century we have known Dr. Pattee as a collector of local history and genealogy, and he has been several years engaged in preparing the present work for the press. He has done his work in a very thorough and conscientious manner. We are pleased to see that he has quoted largely from documents, and has given many important papers in full. The reader can obtain from this volumes satisfactory knowledge of the history of Braintree and its offshoots, Quincy, celebrated for its quarries; Randolph and Holbrook; and of the manners and customs of its people in former days.

"A good history of the Braintree ironworks was prepared by the late Rev. John A. Vinton, and published in 1858 in the appendix to his Vinton Memorial; but Dr. Pattee has been able to add to this, and clear up many points that were then in doubt. Mr. Vinton locates the works in the presant town of Braintree; but Dr. Pattee has collected evidence which satisfies us that the true location was in the present town of Quincy. Indeed, it is evident from a memorandum by Mr. Vinton, in a copy of his work belonging to this society, that some years before his death he had doubts as to the true location.

"The book is handsomely printed and has a good index."

"[Published by Green & Prescott, No. 84 Hancock Street. 1878 8vo. pp. 660, with 14 Illustrations. Price $3.50 in cloth; $4 in half morocco; and $5 in half morocco full gilt. For sale by the publishers in Quincy, Mass.]"

District Court. The following cases have been before the court this week:—

George Carney of Braintree, on complaint of Margret Carney his wife for an assault. Upon the injured party acknowledging satisfaction, the defendant was discharged on payment of costs, $8.85

Edward Brophy, of Milton, for being a common drunkard, was found guilty and fined ten dollars and costs, amounting to $19.85.

Ebenezer Holbrook, of Randolph, was arraigned on complaint of George M. Johnson for being drunk, but the evidence appearing very contradictory the defendant was given the benefit of the doubt and was discharged.

Abner Hill, of Weymouth, for larceny of a watch from one John Roachman, plead not guilty and case was continued till Wednesday. At that time it appearing to the court that the watch had been left for repairs and having been recovered by the owner the defendant was discharged.

Thos. F. Hand of Randolph, for being a common drunkard. Continued to Sept. 1.

Elizabeth Steward of Boston, for being a vagabond at Randolph, was sent to the Reformatory Prison for three months.

James Harrison of Boston, an accomplice of Alexander Stockwell for breaking and entering the shop of Lucy M. Jillson and committing larceny therein. He was found guilty and ordered to give bonds in $1500 for his appearance before the Grand Jury on the first Monday in September next. Not finding bonds he was committed.

Thomas Gagan and Patrick Barry of Weymouth, were arrested for an assault on Timothy Fogarty. Found guilty, and fined $5 each, and part of the cost.

James and John Moran, for a like offence on Fogarty, were discharged.

The Lynn Mystery. Inspectors of the Boston police have at last succeeded in placing under arrest those connected with the death of Miss Jennie P. Clark whose body was found in a trunk at Lynn.

Great Spring Blessing!

DR. BLISS' CATARRH BITTERS. This is the best Spring medicine you can take. It will remove that all-gone feeling you have, for it puts new vigor into the blood, thoroughly cleansing and purifying it, thus striking at the very root of the troubles to which so many are subject in the SPRING TIME, such as CATARRH, HUMORS, SORES, LIVER TROUBLES, &c., all of which come from IMPURE BLOOD, or inaction of the LIVER. Some of the Herbs in these bitters are Mandrake (for the Liver), Yellow Dock, Burdock, Prickly Ash (for the Blood), Rhubarb and Boneset (for the Stomach). Then we add something that works especially in the blood for CATARRH. Large bottles, over one hundred doses, 75 cts. GEO. C. GOODWIN & CO., Boston.

Poetry.

Only Going to the Gate.

Like a bell of blossom ringing,
Clear and childish, short and sweet,
Floating to the porch's shadow,
With the faintest fall of feet,
Comes the answer softly backward,
Bidding tender watcher wait,
While the baby queen outruns her,
"Only going to the gate."

Through the moonlight, warm and scented,
Love to beauty breathes a sigh,
Always to depart reluctant,
Loth to speak the word "good bye";
Then the same low echo answers,
Waiting love of older date,
And the maiden whispers softly,
"Only going to the gate."

Oh, these gates along our pathway,
What they bar outside and in!
With the vague outlook beyond them,
Over waves we have not been.
How they stand before, behind us!
Toll-gates some, with price to pay;
Spring-gates some, that shut forever;
Cloud-gates some, that melt away.

So we pass them going upward
On our journey one by one,
To the distant shining wicket
Where each traveler goes alone—
Where the friends who journey with us
Strangely falter, stop and wait,
Father, mother, child or lover,
"Only going to the gate."

Agricultural, &c.

Hints for July.

The failure to gather the hay while it is at its best, is a too frequent and inexcusable neglect at this season. If farmers could be convinced of how much of the feeding value of hay is lost by leaving the grass to become ripe, hard, and woody, it would no longer be permitted.

Ripe hay may be improved by curing it in the cock instead of drying it in the sun. Being comparatively dry when cut it is very soon cured; and if put up in cocks as soon as it is thoroughly wilted, it will heat and steam and become much softened, and will remain greener than if sun-dried in the swath.

After early potatoes are dug for market, cabbages may be set out to good advantage.

Sow ruta-bagas early this month, and white turnips later. Superphosphate of lime, or fine bone dust, is specially adapted for these crops.

Pruning can be done in this month. Look to an open head to the tree, that the sun and air may reach the interior.

Grafts will need attention. Pinch all those that are growing too vigorously.

Thinning—though rather late — will pay in the apple and pear orchards. The first thinning is rarely sufficient. Better remove the excess even though the fruit is of some size; that which remains, will be enough better, to pay for the labor.

Budding should be done as soon as the buds are mature, and the bark of the stock rises readily.

Destroy any tent caterpillars' nest that may have escaped earlier notice.

Slugs on cherry and pear trees, can be killed by dusting with lime from a muslin bag tied to a pole.

If blight appears, there is but one thing to do, cut away the blighted twig, branch, or whole tree, as the case may be. Cut down to bright sound wood, and burn the removed portion.

Heaves in Horses. A correspondent of the Rural Home gives the following remedy for heaves in horses :—

Give once daily a teaspoonful of aqua fortis, prepared as follows. Mix it with a teaspoonful of sour or skimmed milk, and mix this with bran, and the bran with the grain seed. The catarrhal affection of the throat makes rapid amendment under this treatment, and the correspondent says he has known a number of cases cured by it.

☞ A calf will draw milk in three minutes, and the nearer a milkman can come to that time the better. A slow milker makes a cow impatient, which often causes her to hold up her milk.—The "strippings" are the richest part, and if a cow is milked quietly as well as quickly there will be more as well as richer milk because of the "strippings."

☞ Use aqua ammonia for the stings of bees, wasps, spiders, and all kinds of insects.

☞ The farmers of Kentucky say they have about as good a wheat crop as they ever raised.

☞ Delaware expects to send about 3,700,000 baskets of peaches to market.

Anecdotes.

A little Sunday School miss was asked by her teacher, "What must people do in order to go to heaven?"

"Die, I suppose," replied the little one. The teacher didn't question her any further.

"But you know, pa," said a farmer's daughter, when he spoke to her about the addresses of his neighbor's son, "you know, pa, that ma wants me to marry a man of culture."

"So do I, my dear, so do I; and there's no better culture in the country than agriculture."

"Marion," asked young B. J. R. Smith, in that style which a big brother assumes when patronizing a little sister, "do you know that the earth turns round?"

"Of tos I does," answered Marion, resenting the imputation of ignorance; "that's the reason I tumbles out of bed."

Little baby just before dinner asked his mother for a piece of cake.

"No, my dear; wait a little, and when dinner is ready you will have a nice appetite." The table was set and little Robbie took his seat, but refused a piece of roast beef, pudding or pie.

"Why I thought you were so hungry," said the mother, "don't you want anything to eat?"

"No, mamma, not any of those things but still I am so hungry."

"Well, what shall I give you?"

"You promised me, mamma, that if I didn't eat any cake I should have a nice appetite at dinner; I'll take some of, that."

NORFOLK, SS. PROBATE COURT.

To the Next of Kin, Creditors, and all other persons interested in the estate of

JAMES ADLINGTON,

late of Quincy, in said County, deceased, intestate:

Whereas, application has been made to said Court to grant a letter of administration on the estate of said deceased, to Edward I. Thomas, of Brookline, in the County of Norfolk,

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be holden at Dedham, in said County of Norfolk, on the first Wednesday of September next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, against granting the same.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the QUINCY PATRIOT, printed at Quincy, the last publication to be two days at least before said Court.

Witness, GEORGE WHITE, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this fifth day of July in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine.

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate.

IN MALDEN.

PURSUANT to a Power of Sale contained in a certain Mortgage given by John E. Thayer and Mary M. A. Thayer, his wife, in her own right, to the Weymouth Savings Bank, dated April 23d, 1877, and recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, Lib. 1433, folio 564, for breach of the condition thereof, and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at Public Auction, on the premises hereinafter described, on TUESDAY, the fifth day of August A. D., 1879, at three o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said Mortgage, to-wit:—

A certain piece or parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situated in Malden, in the County of Middlesex, being lot numbered twenty-four (24) on a "Plan of land in Malden, belonging to W. S. Baker, A. F. and N. N. Sargent, Surveyors, April 1873," bounded northwesterly by Granville Avenue, fifty feet; northeasterly by Lot No. 23 on said plan, ninety-one feet; southeasterly by Lot No 35 on said plan, fifty and eighty-one hundredths feet; and southwesterly by Lot No. 25 on said plan, one hundred feet, and containing four thousand seven hundred and seventy-five (4775) square feet, being the same premises conveyed to said Mary M. A. Thayer by William S. Baker, by his deed dated April 21, 1877.

The equity in said premises is now supposed to be held by William E. Varney, Theresa H. Willard and Stephen P. Weld.

Said premises will be sold subject to all unpaid taxes and outstanding tax-titles if any.

Terms of sale, — $200 cash at sale, and balance in ten days thereafter.

Weymouth, July 8th, 1879. J12—3w

If you feel dull drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR OR MEDICINE.

The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the World! AN EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen.

Regulate the Liver and prevent CHILLS AND FEVER MALARIOUS FEVERS, BOWEL COMPLAINTS, RESTLESSNESS, JAUNDICE AND NAUSEA.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

BAD BREATH.

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath, and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be so easily corrected if you will take Simmons' Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your Appetite, Complexion, and General Health.

PILES!

How many suffer torture day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering from Piles. Yet relief is ready to the hand of almost any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR, is no drastic violent purge; but a gentle assistant to nature.

CONSTIPATION!

SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulation from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

The Ideal and the Real.

BY DR. C. A. MCFOSSIL.

Together we stood on the cool moist beach,
As the broiling sun sank to repose.
She—twirled her hat by its dainty string;
I—rubbed my blistered nose;
She—tenderly gazed on the sleepy sea,
And sighed for a coral strand;
I—lit one of "Wilson's Champions"
And sat down on the sand.
She—thrilled with the voice of the throbbing main,
And breathed a tender ballad;
I—longed for a blue-fish stuffed and baked,
And a dish of lobster salad.
She—dreamed of a lonely desolate isle,
Where seething billows dashed,
I—thought of the "heated rocks," and clams,
And hoped they were well washed.
She—sang of the stars, the moon and night,
And the breath of the dewy morn;
I—pulled my boot, ('twas awful tight),
And bathed an aching corn.
She—raised her eyes to the glowing clouds,
Floating so dreamily;
I—felt a dryness in my throat,
And sighed for "iced green tea."
She—clasped my hand! hush darling! list;
'Tis a chime from a sylvan dell;
I—responded with "true inwardness,"
For I knew 'twas the dinner bell.
And then we strolled along the beach,
Avoiding the crowd at the pier,
And closed the day in a quiet way,
With "Meserve" down at "Revere."

MOTHS IN CARPETS. The best way to kill moths in a carpet is to lay a cloth, wet with hot water, on the place where the pest is supposed to be, and press it with a hot iron.

LIBERTY CAKE. One cup butter, two cups sugar, one cup of milk, one and one-half pints of flour, three eggs, salt and spices, and three teaspoonfuls Babbitt's yeast powder.

UNCLE JOE'S STORY.

We were a hungry jury, kept out by an obstinate judge who told us the case was a very plain one, at the same time taking care not to tell us on which side it was plain.

Most of the testimony on both side, we were convinced, was false, and the problem to be solved was one not usually presented in law suits—to find out the truth by striking a balance between contradictory lies. Being in for a night of it, and having regained toward each other the case, the next question was how to get through the time.

"Sombody tell a story," suggested the foreman. Mr. Dropple, you're an old settler, and must have met with some adventures in pioneer times, that would be worth telling."

"Well, I've seen some queer things," said Mr. Dropple—"Uncle Joe," neighbors called him, a hale old man of about sixty, with a face full of good humor and good sense. "I have seen some queer things, but I am not much at narrating them. But if you'll excuse mistakes, I'll tell you about a case that might have turned out a good deal more seriously than this one."

"Go on," was urged.

"This is how it was," begun Uncle Joe, clearing his vocal hatchway by rolling an immense quid into one cheek. "When I'd made up my mind to come out here and buy, mother, as I called my wife, made me a belt to carry my money in. Them was the days before greenbacks, and bank notes were no great shakes if they got too far away from home. So land buyers mostly carried what they had in specie, in belts around their bodies, a dodge the robbers got up to, and the first thing they did when they got hold of a chap was to look for his money belt.

"Well, I kissed mother, and bid her good bye, one morning, and set out to hunt a new home for us, carrying the price of it in hard cash. One night I stopped at a cabin and asked for lodging.

"You can have it," was the answer; "that is, provided you don't object to sleeping double for another stranger is

"I didn't exactly like the idea but houses were scarce in them parts, and not caring to risk going further, and faring worse, taking my saddle bags on my arms, I led the critter around to the stable, the proprietor showing the way. When old Roan had been looked after, we went into the house."

"The other stranger was sitting by the fire, and gave me a sharp look as I came forward. I noticed he kept watching sharp. I didn't fancy his looks much; but after a while he managed to be friendly; it was always my way to meet that sort of thing half way."

"He, too, was on the lookout to buy, and we compared notes on the subject till bed time. Our host was one of them sort of chaps that listens a good deal without saying much, and his wife looked as if she daren't say much if she would."

"We paid our bills before going to bed. The other traveler said he was going to start before day; but as our roads lay little together, I concluded I would not rise so soon for the sake of only that much company. Sunrise was early enough for me."

"Our sleeping room was one end of the cabin partitioned off by itself.

"It's a long time since you and me slept together," said the stranger, "when we were both ready to lie down."

"So it is," said I. "Which side do you take?"

"Front side," said he, "if it's all the same to you."

"All the same," said I, jumping in.

"The stranger followed, and I don't know what he did, but I soon fell fast asleep."

"I don't know how late or early it was when I woke up, feeling chilly. The moon was shining bright through the window. The clothes were turned over from the other side of the bed, and there stood my bed fellow, leaning over me with a big knife in one hand, and fumbling at the buckle of my belt with the other."

"Of course you grasped the arm that wielded the knife with one of your hands, and the villian's throat with the other?" interrupted a blustering juryman.

"Well, no, I didn't."

"You cried out, then?"

"Nor that, either."

"Well," said the blustering juryman, "I would like to see the man that would rob me without having a tussel for it. Suppose he had killed you—what after all is death? Only an eternal sleep, philosophy tells us."

"That may be," said Uncle Joe, "but I was'n't a bit sleepy then."

"'Ha, ha!" laughed the foreman, "I never heard the eternal sleep better answered."

"Well," continued Uncle Joe, "I lay still as a mouse until that pesky critter undone my belt and slipped it from under me which he did so gently that I hardly felt it, wide awake as I was. Then he pulled the cover over me, and tucking it in as carefully as a mother could have done, he buckled my belt around him, finished dressing him and slipped out."

"And you lay there and let yourself be robbed without uttering a word?" again broke in the blustering juryman.

"I didn't see no good in speaking," said Uncle Joe. "I knew he'd sock his knife into me if I so much as chirped, and take his chances of cutting his way through the landlord, if so be he woke up. No, I didn't say a word, but just turned over and took another nap, and in good time got up mounted old Roan rode off just as if nothing had happened. I got to my journey's end that day and bought land next."

"But your money?" the foreman reminded him.

"Oh, that was all right," said Uncle Joe.

"Why, didn't the robber get it."

"He got the belt," Uncle Joe answered.

"You see mother and me knew that money belts had got to be so much in fashion that they would be the first thing every robber went for, and when they got a man's belt they would go off contented. So what does mother and I do, but fill my belt with pewter buttons, and mother she sewed the double eagles into the fur lining of my coonskin jacket, which the fur on the outside kept from showing, and there I carried them safe enough."

We were still laughing at Uncle Joe's story, when the bailiff tapped at the door. The Judge wanted to see us. His honor had had his supper, and feeling in a better humor, he discharged us from durance.—Health and Home.

Stray Thoughts.

The sweet summer days are fleeting, and soon will be gone. Naught but their memories will be left to tell us of the bright sunny days, when the grass of the early year was growing green on the hillsides, and the violets bloomed in the vales; and that the robins built their nests high up in the old maples on the lawn; and of the pleasant June days when we gathered wild roses along the wood-land paths, as we wandered hand in hand through the meadows.

But summer is with us yet a "little while," its sultry days and sleepless nights have not gone before but are to come, and while the day star reigns, and the atmosphere is ladened with malaria, the kitchen closets and all outside places should be carefully looked after,— [illegible] pleasant [illegible], whose very presence is death. Here let me say a word about dishcloths. If they are black and stiff, and smell like a barn-yard, it is enough, throw them away and henceforth and forever wash your dishes with cloths that are white; cloths that you can see through, and see if you ever have that disease again. There are sometimes other causes, but I have smelled a whole house full of typhoid fever in one dishcloth.

I had some neighbors once—clever, good sort of people; one autumn four of them were sick at one time with typhoid fever. The doctor ordered the vinegar barrels white-washed, and threw about fifty cents worth of carbolic acid in the swill-pail and departed. I went into the kitchen and made gruel. I needed a dishcloth and looking around found several, and such rags! I burned them all, and called the daughter of the house to get me a dishcloth. She looked on the table. "Why," said she, "there was about a dozen here this morning;" she looked in the wood-box and on the mantle-piece, and felt in the cupboard.—"Well," I said, "I saw some old, black, decaying rags lying around here, and I burned them, for there is death in such dishcloths as those, and you must never use such again." I took turns at nursing that family for weeks, and I believe those dirty dishcloths were the cause of all that hard work; therefore, I say to every housekeeper, keep your dishcloths clean.

You may only brush or comb your hair on Sundays; you need not wear a collar unless you go from home, but you must wash your dishcloths. You may only sweep the floor when the sun gets right; the windows don't need washing so often, you can look out of the door; the spider's web on tho front porch does not hurt anything, but as you value your lives wash out your dishcloths. Let the weeds grow in the garden along the flower-beds, let the vases on the parlor mantle go empty; let the holes in the heels of your husband's stockings go undarned; let the children's white dresses go soiled, and their shoes go two Sundays without blacking, but do wash out your dishcloth. Eat without a table cloth; wash your faces and let them dry; do without that expensive dress and elaborate trimmings; do without curtains for your windows and cake for your tea, but for heaven's sake keep your dishcloths and dishwater clean.

BLANCHE.

☞ Says The Georgia Advocate, a religious newspaper: "recently during night service at Morgantown, Ga., a screech owl sailed noislessly up the aisle and perched himself complacently upon the bald head of a good brother sitting on the front bench just facing the preacher. The surprised look of the man and the wise look of the bird presented the funniest sort of contrast."

☞ "Dear me, how fluidly he talks," said Mrs. Partington recently, at a temperence meeting. "I'm always rejoiced when he mounts the nostrils, for his eloquence warms every cartridge in my body."

For the Patriot.

Saratoga Styles.

Perhaps the most effective ornamentation is that consequent on the employment of ribbon bows, to say nothing of the employment of the coquettish belt to match. These bows are placed anywhere and everywhere and the results are as charming as can be. And yet as if in perversity, we constantly see the ribbon bow or tie at the throat discarded in order to give place to a single large flower or bunch of small flowers as the case may be. Bunches of flowers are indeed a notable feature in the outfit of the Saratoga belle. They are worn par excellence at the waist on the left side, but as I have said, they give finish at the neck, or sometimes a smaller bouquet or single flower is at the throat, while an addition of the same kind,—but larger, is at the waist.

COSTUMES.

Mixtures of colors in costumes are quite remarkable. Miss Tiffany of New York the other day wore a dress of ecru camel's hair combined with pale blue, while a brocaded ribbon showing bright mixtures of red and blue gave finish and an Alsasian bow to match appeared on her head. Again I observed Mrs. Vanderbilt who was dressed one morning in a pink striped lawn, with broad brimmed hat lined with pale blue satin and an immense poppy on the outside. The shade hats worn on piazzas and about the streets (for we all go about in a reckless sort of way; with or without a hat indeed; without gloves; with long trailing muslins or habited in demure walking suits) are captivating by reason of the variety and the extreme abandon of the mode of trimming. Sometimes great piles of crushed roses are heaped together without foliage; sometimes 'tis one large flower; a modest bunch of small flowers; or again careless sprays which hang down occasionally as far as the waist. Fayal work is quite in favor and one of the prettiest morning costumes worn by a daughter of Judge Hilton was of zephyr gingham having rows of Fayal work let in throughout. Another superb toilette worn by Mrs. Astor of New York was of white satin elaborately trimmed with fine Fayal work. Miss Marvin, daughter of the owner of a [illegible]ettes. She wore the other morning a polonaise of ecru silk embroidered in self color and edged with ecru Spanish blonde. A square of Spanish blonde was thrown over her shoulders and confined in front by a bouquet of yellow crushed roses. Her hat was a broad brimmed Leghorn trimmed with ecru ribbon, white ostrich plume and crimson roses. Skirt black velvet.

ARCHERY.

What a contrast all this to the simple yet coquettish costumes of flannel, bunting or cheese cloth with bandanna trimmings which the belle assumes when trying her skill at archery or lawn tennis. There is a rage for both. These games, as the implements thereof everywhere exposed for sale bear witness. Those most highly esteemed are made by Philip Highfield of London, whose agents here are Peck & Snyder, 124 Nashua street, New York. The same widely known firm are agents for Jefferie's Lawn Tennis, and also have on hand a pretty little book sold at twenty-five cents, which is a complete guide to lawn tennis and Badminton, while at the same price, another little volume, "The Modern Archer," gives full information as to the rules of archery. For ten cents, they forward a catalogue containing more than seven hundred illustrations of sporting goods adapted to all seasons of the year.

NEW DESIGNS.

A word as to some new designs. The Ilona walking costume consists of a tight fitting basque with cut-away fronts showing a pointed vest and skirt trimmed with deep box plaited flounces, while the Nerissa overskirt certainly also may be singled out because of its graceful stylishness; the more so as it is adapted to any class of dress goods or wash materials. With this the Lucille basque would combine tastefully, having cut-away loose fronts and tight fitting vest. I cannot omit mention of the Berenice walking skirt, which shows a draped apron turned back with revers above a finish of plaits and flounces below. For traveling, the Brighton ulster is the leading design.

Preserving Sea Weeds.

For a method of preserving sea weeds, we present the following recipe, which we copy from the Scientific American:—

Float out each specimen by itself in salt water in a white dish, like a wash bowl. Put the paper under the plant in the water, arrange the plant on the paper and carefully draw it out. Lay the paper with the plant upon it on drying paper and spread over it a piece of white muslin. Then spread over this a layer of drying paper, then more plants, and then more cloth, drying paper, etc. Put all under a board, and weight it with forty or fifty pounds of stone or other heavy substance. The next day change the cloths and drying paper, and in one day more the plants will be dry and ready to go into the herbarium or the album for permanent preservation.

College Requirements.

We have recently received from the publishing house of Appleton & Co., a little book, entitled, "Requirements for Admission to Colleges, by A. F. Nightingale, A. M., Principal of Lake View High School, near Chicago, Ill."

The author's name recalls little "Gus," a Quincy boy who pursued his studies for a time in our high school and later entered the university at Middletown, Conn., where he bore off the first honors of his class. After graduation he entered the educational field in the West, where, as an instructor of young men and women, he soon won an enviable name to which he has added new lustre from year to year by uninterrupted and conscientious labor, so that to-day scarcely any school of like grade in the West ranks so high as that over which he presides.

This hand-book, suggested no doubt by the oft-repeated questions of his pupils, is designed especially for those young men and women in our preparatory schools who will sooner or later be confronted with that very important question, Which college shall we choose. Recognizing the impracticability of giving detailed information respecting every collegiate institution in the land, the author has selected forty-four representative colleges, an average of whose requirements will, he believes, admit the student to any other college or university not included in the list given.

The book opens with a tabulated statement of college requirements, presented in such a compact and desirable form that one is able to see almost at a glance the amount required, in every department of study, by the colleges he names. To this some general remarks are added and a few foot notes, indicating the position now held by our highest educational institutions upon the question of Latin pronunciation.

Following the "Requirements" are tables of statistics, showing the number of students, both ladies and gentlemen, who have been in attendance upon colleges during the past year and the courses of study pursued by them; also some pertinent facts with reference to the increasing interest manifested in the study of the sciences, and the important embraced in the book, relate to the Roman pronunciation, the classification of the colleges in the order of their establishment (also with reference to church influence or control), and an enumeration of all the colleges in the land, giving their location and indicating their religious bias or the absence of it.

The book closes with a statement of the Harvard University examination for women, and some specimen sets of questions, recently used for admission to Yale, Dartmouth and Bowdoin colleges and Boston University.

This hand-book well merits the commendations it has already received from the highest educational authorities, as it fills a place until now vacant in our limited collection of distinctively college books. Had the author seen fit to add a chapter, in a tabulated form, upon the work accomplished in the forty-four colleges during the four years of study which,—though too often lost sight of in making the choice of a college,—is really the important thing, he would, in our opinion, have rendered a still greater service to the young men and women of the land who are soon to fill our college halls. Still he may be purposing to give us this or something better at a later day. We heartily commend the book and congratulate the author upon his success.

Willing to Oblige.

A very prepossessing young lady, canvassing for a popular book, stepped into the office of a broker, and finding him apparently at leisure, asked him to look at the book. The gentleman informed her that it would only be a waste of time, as he could not purchase it.

"Oh! never mind that," ejaculated the vivacious young woman, "it won't cost anything to look at it, even if you don't buy. I should like to have you read some portions of it, and see what it is."

The accommodating broker took the volume, and, glancing at the title page, commenced a perusal of the introduction. This finished, he began at the first chapter and read carefully along.

It was about nine o'clock when he commenced, and an hour passed silently away, when the book agent began to show signs of nervousness, which were apparently unnoticed by the broker, for he never took his eyes from the volume, but read steadily on. Eleven o'clock came, and the lady began to walk smartly around the room, glancing occasionally out of the windows. At noon the broker was still reading, and the agent wore a decidedly troubled countenance. A few minutes before one o'clock the broker laid the book down, leisurely donned his overcoat and hat and remarked:—

"That is a very good book. I am sorry I can not read more of it, but I am obliged to go to dinner. If you will call this afternoon I will continue reading it."

☞ In dusting, use a soft cloth instead of a wing; the cloth will catch all the dust, and you can shake it from the window, while the others set it floating again.

SATURDAY, JULY 26, 1879.

Short communications and items of news earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.

☞ Anonymous communications are not published.

PICNIC. The members and friends of the Universalist Sunday School held their annual picnic at Downer Landing on Thursday last. The day was all that could be desired, and all present seemed to have enjoyed themselves. At 12.30, Mr. C. B. Tilton took the platform, and in a short speech announced that the ice cream and cake which had been provided for all, through the generosity of Henry H. Faxon, Esq., was then ready, and soon a lively crowd was engaged in testing its good qualities. Boating, dancing, swinging, and other amusements were indulged in. The picnic was under the management of Messrs. C. H. Winslow, C. B. Tilton and George Newcomb, and they deserve praise for the manner in which it passed off.

An invitation was extended to the Unitarian Society to accompany the party on this excursion, and some fifty or more from that Society joined them.

PICNIC. The twenty-ninth annual picnic of the Catholics of Quincy Parish, took place at Silver Lake Grove, Plympton, on Thursday last. The day was a delightful one and the party, though not as large as those of other years, had an excellent time. The most interesting event of the day was the boat race which occurred about three o'clock. There were four crews at the starting point when the word "go" was given, and sixteen oars struck the water together. At the half way stake but two crews were in the race, the others having dropped out. The contest on the last mile was exciting, but the race was won by the following crew:—John McCarthy, Wm. Garvin, John Welch and John Costello.

The party left the grove about 5.30, highly pleased with the day's festivities.

REGATTA. The Quincy Yacht Club held their second race in the championship course, off Great Hill, on Thursday afternoon. The courses sailed over were the same as for the previous race. There was but a small attendance present to witness the regatta. At ten minutes past 2 the first gun was fired and at 2.31 the start was made. The following is the summary of the race:—

ASSAULT. John E. Mann of Ran- [illegible] for an assault on a little girl, eleven years of age, daughter of Mr. George S. Whiting of Braintree. It appeared from her evidence that she was going home about sunset, and when near the railroad crossing at Mayflower Park, this villain grabbed her, and carried her into the woods, a short distance from the road, and attempted to ravish her. The case was continued until this morning, and he was ordered to give bonds in $1500 for his appearance. Unable to give bonds, he was taken to the lock-up. He has been before the Court several times for assaults on females, and for being drunk. One case is well known to our citizens; it was an assault on the daughter of Mr. Samuel B. Turner, of this town. It seems to be full time that he was locked up for a term of years, being a dangerous man in the community.

SEVEN OAKS. The sisters and children of St. Vincent Orphan Asylum, of Boston, were invited by Mr. and Mrs. William Amory, to hold their annual picnic at Seven Oaks, on Saturday last. Barges and carriages were chartered to convey the party from the depot in this town to Seven Oaks, the beautiful summer residence of Mr. Amory. The day was spent by the happy children in various sports, games and yachting, and a bountiful dinner and supper was also served.

GLASS BALL SHOOTING. The Merry Mount Shooting Club of this town, with a few of the members of the East Milton Club, held a shoot on Saturday last at Quincy Woods. There were three contests: single, rotary, and double balls. The following is the score, and the names of the gentlemen who participated in the sport.

He resides in Marshfield, and has always lived in the same house, He met with an accident recently but otherwise he is quite strong and well. We learn that there is a movement on foot to celebrate the anniversary which is certainly a remarkable event.

Red Ribbon Reunion.

The tenth reunion of the Red Ribbon Clubs of Massachusetts was held in this town on Wednesday last. The convention met at Faxon Hall, and was called to order about half past ten o'clock and Mr. H. K. Cady, of New England Village, was chosen temporary chairman and Mr. Arthur B. Champlin, of Chelsea, temporary secretary. It was then moved that the chairman appoint a committee of three who should retire and bring in a list of names for the permanent organization of the meeting.

Henry H. Faxon thought it would be better to nominate the President from the delegates present. It would not only save time, but would give every one an equal chance. He did not want anything that looked like a cut-and-dried affair. He moved that ten be nominated at large and then each of them voted for, and the one receiving the most votes be declared the President of the Convention. The motion created an exciting debate, but it was finally sustained by the delegates and ten persons were nominated and voted for. Mr. J. D. Flynn, of Lynn, receiving the highest number of votes, was declared elected and took the chair.

A committee was then nominated to retire and bring in a list of names to complete the organization. While this committee were absent, Geo. W. Penniman, of Quincy, made an address of welcome to the Convention. He spoke of the Quincy Reform Club, and in reference to the decrease of their membership he said, to speak frankly it was largely due to persons who, professing temperance principles 364 days in the year, went to the polls on the 365th day and cast a ballot for those men who will, if elected, grant liquor licenses. He spoke of the fine building owned by the Quincy club, and the liberality of Mr. Faxon in helping pay for the same. Mr. Penniman said there were seventeen licensed rum shops in town, but there were many brothers and sisters in town who would throw their protecting arms around the delegates and keep them safe. He closed by a hearty welcome to all.

The committee nominated to complete the organization brought in the following names:—For Vice Presidents, James Winston of Boston, Charles Goss of Westboro, G. W. Newhall of Amherst, W. H. Blanchard of Worcester, W. H. Gibby of Chelsea, E. G. Manslow of Wakefield, and J. D. Nutting of Quincy. For Secretary, Edward Southworth of Chelsea.

Mr. Southworth declined to have his name used, and Mr. Walter Billings of Sharon nominated Miss Gertrude H. Hixon of Sharon as Secretary.

The President ruled that the motion could not be entertained, as a woman, according to the by-laws, could not legally hold the position. This created an exciting discussion.

Henry H. Faxon then took the floor, and pitched into the President and others favoring his unjust ruling. Ladies, he said, were the corner stone of our temperance organizations. They nourished and sustained them and without their influence few temperance societies would [illegible], the President being unable to preserve order.

Finally a motion was made and taken to lay the matter on the table until the Committee on Credentials reported. The report of the committee showed that 49 club were represented by 221 delegates, including the lady members,—being the largest convention ever assembled. The President then decided that the ladies could not be admitted as members of the convention. But an appeal was taken and his decision over-ruled by a handsome majority. It was a little singular that he should rule in that way, as the ladies were regular members of reform clubs, and had been elected as delegates to the convention.

A motion was again made that Miss Hixon be Secretary of the Convention. Mr. J. T. Ellis, of Hyde Park, took the floor and spoke warmly for the ladies. Miss Hixon was then elected by a large majority, and was escorted to her seat on the platform by Mr. Ellis, who introduced her as the "honor of the meeting."

The gathering then listened to reports of the delegates from the different clubs throughout the State, until the dinner hour, when the meeting adjourned until half past one o'clock.

After dinner the Convention chose the following Committee on Resolutions: E. B. Macy of Fitchburg, S. C. Small of Winchester, A. W. Robbins of Westboro', Charles Messer of Reading and H. C. Hall of Wakefield.

After the committee had retired, reports of delegates from the various clubs were listened to with great pleasure. Many reports were very favorable, showing an increase in membership and much enthusiasm in the organizations; then there were others who represented their clubs scarcely able to hold their own; and still others who said their clubs were dead, or not much better. Still, as a whole, we should judge that the cause was in a good condition, and a large amount of good work is being done today by many clubs throughout the State. We did intend to give a report of a few lines from each club, but our limited space will not permit.

Rev. Edwin Thompson, an old pioneer in the temperance work, and well-known to many of our readers, was present. He was seventy years old on Wednesday, still he appeared smart and well and probably would be taken by many as a man of fifty-five. He made a very favorable report for Norwood.

During the time the reports were being presented, the Committee on Resolutions returned, and a motion was made to have the resolutions read. Mr. Faxon hoped they would be laid on the table for the present, as the meeting was very harmonious and the reports very interesting. Some discussion was had on this subject, and finally the reports were continued.

But this was only for a short time. A committee reported the names that had been selected for the State Executive Committee for the ensuing year. Mr. Faxon moved that the name of Calvin Howland of Stoughton be added to that committee, which created another breeze. After a short discussion the name was accepted, and the committee chosen, which is as follows:—David W. Cushing, Fitchburg, Chairman; E. D. Flynn, Lynn, Secretary; H. K. Cady, New England village; Calvin Howland, Stoughton; C. A. Goss, Westboro; Charles Messer, Reading; A. B. Chmaplin, Chelsea; David Walker, Wakefield.

In a short time another call was made for the resolutions, but the meeting decided to allow them to remain on the table. But, at last, by an urgent request from members who wished to leave on the five o'clock train for home, the report of the Committee on Resolutions was taken from the table and read, as follows:

Resolved, that it is for the best interest of this convention to adhere strictly to the principles of the Reynolds' red ribbon reform clubs.

Resolved, that in the future red ribbon reform clubs be conducted simply on the Reynolds' plan.

Resolved, that in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, we recognize a strong auxiliary to the reform clubs, and say "God bless them" in their work.

Resolved, that we think the Reynolds' plan has done more than all other organizations to reform men from the intoxicating cup.

Resolved, we recognize that the increased use of malt liquors and light wines has a dangerous and demoralizing effect upon the temperance work, and, from our experience, that total abstinence is the only watchword for the reform clubs of Massachusetts.

Resolved, that this convention return its sincere thanks to the ladies and citizens of Quincy for the liberal manner in which they are entertaining this convention.

At the close of the reading Mr. Faxon offered the following resolution:—

That at all future reunions of red ribbon reform clubs ladies be admitted and considered eligible as delegates.

A motion was made to lay Mr. Faxon's resolution on the table. This called forth an exciting debate, resulting in voting the motion down,—49 yeas and 70 nays. It was then moved to take up Mr. Faxon's resolution, but the President ruled it out of order. An appeal was then taken from the President's ruling, and sustained by the Convention.

Mr. Faxon then spoke in favor of the resolution, and said the treatment that the ladies received at the hand of some of the delegates, was an insult to their intelligence and virtue.

E. B. Macy of Fitchburg, responded to Mr. Faxon. While admitting all that that gentleman had said regarding the grand work women had done for the temperance cause, he claimed that it would be detrimental to the interests of the Red Ribbon clubs of Massachusetts to allow ladies to be eligible as delegates, and it would tend to break up many clubs.

The question was then called, and Mr. Faxon's resolution was passed. Those who were dissatisfied at the result tried to reopen the question, and acted in a manner which was extremely disgraceful to themselves, and a discredit to the order which they were supposed to represent.

Finally, Mr. Parker of Arlington, Mr. Blanchard of Worcester and others, called upon all who were dissatisfied to leave, and some fifty or more left the hall, and held a meeting in the street. Parker of Arlington, was chosen President, and Flynn of Lynn, Secretary. All the resolutions offered, except Mr. Faxon's, were adopted, and it was voted to hold a Red Ribbon Convention at Waltham in October, and that [illegible] After things had become quiet in the hall, Vice-President Nutting of Quincy, took the chair and then the consideration of the report of the Committee on Resolutions was resumed. The first, second and fourth were laid on the table, and the third, fifth, sixth and seventh were adopted.

S. C. Small of Winchester, was chosen to preside at the meeting in the evening, and the remainder of the afternoon session was occupied in hearing reports of Clubs.

THE EVENING MEETING.

The gathering in the Town Hall in the evening, was quite large, and a brotherly feeling reigned throughout. The audience was called to order by Vice President Nutting, who introduced S. C. Small of Winchester, the presiding officer. The Rev. Samuel Kelley was called upon to offer divine blessing.—Then two hours were most pleasantly passed in listening to five minutes speeches, and songs from ladies and gentlemen. No gathering have we attended for years that was more pleasant and entertaining. There were some thirty or more speakers, and among the number was Capt. George R. Derry of Sharon, a native of Quincy, and for many years a resident of this place. He had been well known for his drinking habits when living in this town; and the reader can judge of the pleasure it gave those who listened to his remarks to learn that he had reformed. Also, to see the improvement in his looks, dress and general appearance. He made an excellent speech, and we were sorry that he was obliged to limit it to five minutes.

A gentlemen from Randolph gave some of his experience in rum drinking. He said in former years he worked on the salt marshes in Quincy, and earned good wages ($3 to $4 a day) and spent nearly the whole of it each night at the old Hancock House, then kept by Mr. Allen.

There were many excellent speeches but we cannot find room for them. We were sorry more of our Quincy people did not improve the opportunity of attending this meeting.

THE LADIES.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union lent their aid in providing food to entertain the gentlemen and did their part in a generous manner. The tables in the hall were spread with an abundance of excellent food. Two hundred and twenty-two delegates sat down to a dinner of cold meats, hot potatoes, bread, puddings, pies, cucumbers, watermelons, tea, coffee and lemonade, which made up the bill of fare.

The supper was as bountiful as the dinner, and consisted of bread, pies, cakes and ice cream. One hundred and twenty-five sat down to the evening repast. Accommodations were provided for those who wished to stay over night. The ladies belonging to the Union, worked hard to provide for the comfort of the delegates during their stay.

A Business Letter.

BOSTON, JULY 24, 1879.

Notwithstanding the exodus from Boston of no small portion of its inhabitants to rural or seashore retreats, the city for the summer solstice wears a lively appearance, and is comparatively healthy for a population of 350,000.

It is admitted that the business outlook wears a cheerful aspect. Labor is in demand and the holder of to-day of a paper promise to pay a dollar, feels that it is as good as gold. In fact the paper currency is so stable that nobody wants to exchange it for gold. But what will be "the future of resumption" no one can tell.

The balance of foreign trade for some time past has been in one favor; having a special bearing on the commercial prosperity of Boston as seen in the activity of our shipping from its numerous wharves from one end of the city to the other. With the excess of exports over foreign imports every commercial city of our Union will prosper. Indeed we have the assurance from the Secretary of the Treasury that greenbacks will be redeemed on presentation in gold. There is no law to fix a policy. In other words there is no law against redeeming greenbacks in gold.

A review of the week on finance shows that money remains in great plenty and interest rates have reached pretty low points. Loans between banks have declined from three to one and one-half per cent. Bank shares to the surprise of many have advanced; United States Bonds in good demand.

Since the adjournment of Congress there has been a growing activity and cheerfulness in business circles and a healthy reaction is dawning upon us.

Stone Cutters' Meeting.

To the Publishers of the Patriot:—

Will you be so kind as to allow the Granite Cutters of Quincy space in the columns of your paper to return their thanks to the gentlemen who attended their picnic on the Fourth of July, at Lovell's Grove, and joined with us in celebrating the anniversary of American Independence.

At our general monthly meeting, Saturday, July 19th, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted, that we return thanks to the following gentlemen, namely:—Hon. B. W. Harris of Bridgewater; Representative J. J. Kelly of Cambridge; Rep. Charles H. Lichman of Marblehead; E. E. Williamson of Wollaston.

WHEREAS, it gave the people of Quincy and the assembly generally, great pleasure in having such distinguished gentlemen to participate in the joys of the first picnic of the Granite Cutters of Massachusetts,

Resolved, That we tender our hearty thanks to the Boston Globe for their kindness in keeping our picnic before the public, and in publishing the speeches in full and the games.

Resolved, That we return thanks also, to the Constables of Quincy for the duties they performed on that day.

Resolved, That this be published in the Boston Globe and Quincy Patriot.

Once more thanking you all, gen- [illegible]

Yours faithfully,
THE STONE CUTTERS OF QUINCY.

BAND CONCERT. The citizens of East Milton were entertained on Thursday evening by a band concert by Gilcher's German Band of Boston. A large number of people improved the opportunity. The streets in the vicinity were packed with carriages. The band played a number of selections from Pinafore, which were well received. Thursday evening next the Belknap Brass Band will give the third concert at E. Milton at 7.30 o'clock, if weather is pleasant; if unpleasant the first pleasant evening.

STEEL BRIDGE. The first steel bridge on record is now being built over the Missouri river by the Chicago and Alton Railroad. It will be of five spans 350 feet each. The elevation over the high water mark will not be less than 80 feet, at which height the light steel roofs will look like silver cobwebs shimmering in the sunlight. The total amount of steel used will be 1500 tons, equivalent in strength to almost double that quantity of iron.

French, Constable, directing him in the words of the statute, "to proceed forthwith either to kill or to cause to be killed all dogs not licensed and collared as required by law, and to enter complaint against the owners or keepers thereof."
The law further provides as follows,—"Any person may and every Police Officer and Constable shall kill or cause to be killed, all unlicensed and uncollared dogs whenever or wherever found."
Licenses can be procured of George L. Gill, Town Clerk, or application may be made to W. M. FRENCH, Constable.

THE PRESS EXCURSION—IV.

We promised in our last letter to give a description of a coal mine, and, thinking many of the readers of the PATRIOT have never had an opportunity of visiting one for themselves, we shall endeavor to give full particulars.

At Scranton, through the kindness of the Board of Trade and other gentlemen, the Mass. Press Excursionists were permitted to visit one of the many mines in that vicinity. We rode in our cars to within a few rods of the mine, and then walked into a huge, rough, dingy-looking building, called a "breaker." We presume it is called by this name because there is in the top of the building machinery for breaking the large lumps of coal, (four or five times the size of your head) as they are hoisted out of the mine, into marketable sizes. These "breakers" or buildings near the mines, are usually about 125 feet high, 30 to 40 wide and 100 feet long. They are so numerous in this Wyoming valley region that they attract the attention of all strangers as they ride along in the cars.

The mine we visited was called Pyne, in honor of a distinguished gentleman of Scranton. It was a "dry mine," that is, free from dripping of water, and therefore the visitors required no extra clothing, but visited it in their ordinary travelling dress. The mine is 300 feet below the surface and the elevators are similar to those used in the storehouses in Boston. There were two; one comes to the surface as the other descends; and eight or ten of the party were carried down at a time. The law of the state is, we believe, that the coal companies shall not carry over ten persons at a time. They move quietly and quickly; only a few seconds were required to go the 300 feet. After reaching the bottom of the mine, the tourists were escorted along the passage ways to the headings, or "chambers" as they are called, where workmen are engaged in digging out the coal. Seventy chambers are being worked in the Pyne mine at the present time; and each chamber by two persons. One takes the contract to work the chamber and receive for mining sixty-six cents a car. He is able to mine on an average seven car loads a day, with the help of an assistant. The 7 car loads at 66 cents per car amounts to $4.62. From this amount he has to pay his assistant $1.50, and for the powder used in blasting, &c., leaving a balance of about $2.50 for his labor per day.

The coal is packed solid, like our granite and has to be drilled and blasted somewhat similar to our granite quarries; although the coal being much softer than granite, the holes can be drilled simply by punching with a long bar, without any pounding. One man mines and the other loads the cars. When a car is full it is drawn by mules to the elevator and hoisted to the breakers above.

The Pyne mine was opened six years ago by the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Company, who are now taking out from 700 to 800 tons daily. The coal is white ash and weighs 100 pounds to the cubic foot. When in the chambers one sees by the dim lamps in the miners' caps, or by the torches carried by the visitors, coal on all sides. The vein is [illegible]teen feet deep and it is worked by the company in chambers about seven feet deep at the present time. They leave several feet at the top of the chamber to prevent the earth from tumbling down. The roof is smooth and we saw leaves of ferns and the impression of a trunk of a huge tree, with every line of its curiously figured bark as perfectly shown as on the day, thousands of years ago, it fell in its native swamp.

No company is allowed to work its mine farther than is owned on the surface. Each mine has its civil engineer, who, as fast as a chamber is extended draws on his map of the subterranean domain, the progress made; and he knows what relation every foot of excavation below has to the surface above. Hence a pond on the surface is given a wide circuit below, lest its water breaks through and drowns the miners.

The atmosphere in the mine was sweet and agreeable and is kept so by large fans at the head of the shaft, which are constantly revolving. The thermometer is about sixty the year round, making it cool and comfortable.

About two hundred persons are daily employed at this mine, and we should judge about one-quarter of them to be boys. Many of the latter are employed at the top of the building in picking out the slate and other impurities in the coal, as it runs down the "shoots" or chutes, from the breakers. All the screening is called "culm," which is drawn out and dumped in huge piles on the vacant land close to the mine. P.

EAST MILTON. The regular weekly glass-ball shoot of the East Milton Sporting Club, took place Saturday afternoon. Ten balls were thrown from a rotary trap, at eighteen yards distance. The score: G. Badger, 6 broken; H. Johnson, 5; F. Badger, 6; W. Bell, 3; J. Pierce, 6; G. H. Bent, 9; H. R. Gardner, 9; J. Blacker, 3; C. F. Gardner, 7; T. Hollis, 9; J. Buntin, Jr., 7; H. E. Sheldon, 4; G. A. Mitchell, 4.

For the Patriot.

Notes from Ireland.

NEWRY, JULY 5th, 1879.

Quincy has a good name here. Thomas M. H. Flynn of the Bessbrook Granite Co. told me to-day that when he visited America, he was received with more hospitality in Quincy than in any town he visited. He sought in vain for a hotel but was received by strangers and entertained most cordially. He has oversight of three quarries, 160 workmen, and their wages foot up yearly $37.500. An elegant spiral staircase has been sent by them to the Town Hall, Manchester. The polished columns of blue granite and the entrance steps, twenty-two feet long, are very elegant. Their office in New York is 99 Maiden Lane. The James Watt Dock, Greenock, also shows their work.

The Emerald Isle never looked more rich in verdure than now. Daily showers fall, and then the sunshine pours a flood of beauty over mountain and meadow, lake and stream. Just a week ago to-day we were landed at Queenstown, after a good voyage, ten days from Sandy Hook to Cape Clear. From Queenstown to Cork, Blarney and Killarney, Limerick and Dublin, Drogeda and Dunkirk to Newry, where I spent "the glorious Fourth," is the outline of one week's tour. Fifty miles journey through the paradise of the Wicklow district, south of Dublin and a trip to the famous watering place of Rostrevor on Carlingford Lough, have also been added.

Next Sunday, July 6th, I hope to spend in Londonderry, thence proceed to Belfast, Glasgow, Edinboro', Northern Wales, England, France, Italy, Switzerland and Holland.

Last evening I lectured on "American Life," to an appreciative audience, and a pleasant colloquial interview followed, in which questions and views were exchanged.

I see improvements in Ireland since my last visit in 1855. In the town of Newry, of 15,000 population, where I now am, there is an unusual amount of building going on. It was founded some 800 years ago. Dean Swift preached here. Dr. John Hall of New York was born near by. But my postal card is full. More at another time. E. P. THWING.

Coming State Elections.

In the following named States, elections are to be held this year:—

Kentucky, August 4th—Governor and Legislature.

California, September 3d—Congressmen, Legislature and State officers.

Maine, September 9th—Governor and Legislature.

Ohio, October 14—Governor, State officers and Legislature.

Maryland November 4th—Governor and Legislature.

Massachusetts, November 4—Governor and Legislature.

Mississippi, November 4th—County officers and Legislature.

New Jersey, November 5th—Legislature.

Wisconsin, November, 5th,—Legislature.

Virginia, November 5th—Legislature.

New York, November 5th—Governor and Legislature.

☞ We learn from the Boston Herald that, "The occupants of Stephen Arnold's house at Braintree were considerably alarmed on Monday by the discovery of a large rattlesnake in one of the rooms on the lower floor. His snakeship, who was amusing himself by intimidating the house cat, was promptly killed by the male members of the family."

☞ The civil damage law is to be tested in Marlboro. A drunken fellow broke out about $600 worth of glass in store show-windows, and a liquor dealer has been invited to settle the bill.

☞ The rate of taxation in Weymouth is lower than it has been for many years, $12.80 on $1,000, and $1.58 on each poll.

ST. NICHOLAS. The August number has seventy-two pages—eight more than usual—with contents adapting it for children's summer reading. It opens with a long poem, by Celia Thaxter, based on an actual incident in which the present Emperor of Germany and two small peasant children bore equally honorable parts; the illustration, by Frederick Dielman, is a fine large one, and is the frontispiece of the number. Next comes "A Mississippi Chowder," a brisk account of a fishing frolic, with two striking pictures. After that, is "The Baby's Morning," the history of an escaped baby's pranks in a meadow,—with five charming illustrations by Addie Ledyard; and then there is an illustrated description of the wonderful aquarium at Brighton, England, with its finny treasures. Lawn Tennis, the new and fashionable ball and racquet game, is plainly and fully described, by type and diagram and pictures. "Hercules Jack," which follows, is a funny story of a plump but unlucky boy who tried to imitate Hercules; the fun enhanced by seven most comical pictures by Mr. Hopking, &c., &c.

Marriages.

In this town, July 22d, by Rev. T. J. Danahy, Mr. Jeremiah Denahy to Miss Mary E. Chance, all of this town.

In New York, July 23d, Mr. William Ferrie to Miss Mary A., daughter of Mr. Charles Arnold, formerly of this town.

Deaths.

In this town, July 19th, Mr. Samuel Simonds, aged 76 years.

July 19th, Mrs. H. Augusta, wife of Mr. Alvin Rogers, aged 50 years, 11 mos. and 19 days.

Great Spring Blessing!
DR. BLISS' CATARRH BITTERS. This is the best Spring medicine you can take. It will remove that all-gone feeling you have, for it puts new vigor into the blood, thoroughly cleansing and purifying it, thus striking at the very root of the troubles to which so many are subject in the SPRING TIME, such as CATARRH, HUMORS, SORES, LIVER TROUBLES, &c., all of which come from IMPURE BLOOD, or inaction of the LIVER. Some of the Herbs in these bitters are Mandrake (for the Liver), Yellow Dock, Burdock, Prickly Ash (for the Blood), Rhubarb and Boneset (for the Stomach). Then we add something that works especially in the blood for CATARRH. Large bottles, over one hundred doses, 75 cts. GEO. C. GOODWIN & CO., Boston.

Poetry.

Little Worries.

Though many ills may hamper life
 When fortune turns capricious,
The great but nerve us for the strife,
 The small ones make us vicious.
Fierce griefs are soon outstripped by one
 Who through existence scurries;
It's harder for a race to run
 With nimble "little worries."

A button bids your shirt good-bye
 When late for dinner dressing;
You have a kite you cannot fly,
 And creditors are pressing.
And run to catch—and lose—a train
 (That fatalist of hurries);
Your newest hat encounters rain—
 Life's full of "little worries."

From day to day some silly things
 Upset you altogether;
There's naught so soon convulsion brings
 As tickling with a feather.
'Gainst minor evils left him pray
 Who fortune's favor curries—
For one that big misfortunes slay
 Ten die of "little worries."

Agricultural, &c.

Do the Best You Can.

Where is the farmer that comes up to his own ideal; who succeeds in accomplishing his own plans to his own satisfaction? There are too many incidental matters that come in to modify our fond expectations. The weather, the interruption of sickness, the reasonable claims and frequent necessities of family and friends, social obligations, accidents to tool and machinery and horses; unavoidable losses by flood or other causes, and, perhaps, many other things that cannot be anticipated, often, if not always, prevents the fulfilment of "the best laid schemes." But there is one very prominent difficulty. He cannot get laborers that will faithfully follow his directions. Those whom he employs may strive to please him while he is looking on; and some may even do their best at all times; but many will prove careless when the directing eye is turned away; and even the truest are almost sure to bring disappointment and trouble because of their want of knowledge and skill. Perfect work cannot be done by any one who is not, himself, perfect. Unfortunately, many on whom we must rely to carry out our wishes, are destitute of the active desire and intention to improve—being content to move on in future as they have done in the past. Many seem to have no capacity for better work than that which they have long performed, and only disappoint those who strive to instruct them.

What can be done to meet this great evil? First, as you know that it will come in some form or degree, be not disheartened by it. Secondly, keep trying—make your mark high; give all practicable attention; and rest assured that, though you do not see it, the workman is learning, and the character of the work will improve. Try on! Hope on!

Hints for Warm Weather.

Pure drinking water for animals is of the first importance. More dangerous poisons are taken into the system with the water used, than in any other way. That from brooks is dangerous, as wash from manured fields, and soakage from the soil flows into them. Water from clear wells and springs only should be given to cattle, and if such precaution is needed for them, it is equally so for the owners. Much avoidable disease is due to impure water.

The flock should now be weeded out; all unprofitable fowl, poor layers, and poor mothers, should be used or marketed. Two weeks feeding in a coop will be sufficient to make them fat. A few of the best hens may be kept over for early setting, but many in a flock are unprofitable.

The utmost cleanliness should be preserved about the premises in the hot weather. All wastes and garbage should be disposed of on a compost heap; a load of good soil and sods from fence rows will be useful, as the basis for it. Weeds should be gathered and added to the heap. Liberal use of air slacked lime will prevent disagreeable odors.

Anecdotes.

As some lady visitors were going through a penitentiary under the escort of a superintendent, they came to a room in which three women were sewing.

"Dear me!" one of the visitors whispered "what vicious looking creatures! Pray, what are they here for?"

"Because they have no other home; this is our sitting-room, and they are my wife and two daughters," blandly answered the superintendent.

A legal gentleman met a brother lawyer one day, and the following conversation took place.

"Well, Judge, how is business?"

"Dull, dull, I am living on faith and hope."

"Very good, but I have got past you, for I'm living on charity."

The organ grinder, accompanied by the inevitable monkey, was preforming to the delight of the children. A father asked his son of five years, how she liked the music.

"I like it much," he replied, "but I pity the man's little brother.

"Isn't my photograph excellent?" said a fond wife to her husband.

"Well, my dear," replied he "there's a little too much repose about the mouth for it to be natural."

"Ma, lend me a pencil; I want to draw some ladies."

"Draw some ladies! why Johnny this is Sunday."

"Well, I'll draw them in there Sunday clothes." Proposition declined with spanks.

"Come, come," said a distracted father, who had endured the children's noise on Christmas day, until patience ceased to be a virtue, "there is no reason why you should scream and holloa so."

"Why, father," said one of the little fellows, "don't you know this is a Hollerday?"

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate.

IN MALDEN.

PURSUANT to a Power of Sale contained in a certain Mortgage given by John E. Thayer and Mary M. A. Thayer, his wife, in her own right, to the Weymouth Savings Bank, dated April 23d, 1877, and recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, Lib. 1433, folio 564, for breach of the condition thereof, and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at Public Auction, on the premises hereinafter described, on TUESDAY, the fifth day of August A. D., 1879, at three o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said Mortgage, to-wit:—

A certain piece or parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situated in Malden, in the County of Middlesex, being lot numbered twenty-four (24) on a "Plan of land in Malden, belonging to W. S. Baker, A. F. and N. N. Sargent, Surveyors, April 1873," bounded northwesterly by Granville Avenue, fifty feet; northeasterly by Lot No. 23 on said plan, ninety-one feet; southeasterly by Lot No 35 on said plan, fifty and eighty-one hundredths feet; and southwesterly by Lot No. 25 on said plan, one hundred feet, and containing four thousand seven hundred and seventy-five (4775) square feet, being the same premises conveyed to said Mary M. A. Thayer by William S. Baker, by his deed dated April 21, 1877.

The equity in said premises is now supposed to be held by William E. Varney, Theresa H. Willard and Stephen P. Weld.

Said premises will be sold subject to all unpaid taxes and outstanding tax-titles if any.

Terms of sale, — $200 cash at sale, and balance in ten days thereafter.

If you feel dull drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR OR MEDICINE.

The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the World: AN EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen.

Regulate the Liver and prevent

CHILLS AND FEVER MALARIOUS FEVERS, BOWEL COMPLAINTS, RESTLESSNESS, JAUNDICE AND NAUSEA.

TAKE SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

BAD BREATH.

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath, and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be so easily corrected if you will take Simmons' Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your Appetite, Complexion, and General Health.

PILES!

How many suffer torture day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering from Piles. Yet relief is ready to the hand of almost any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR, is no drastic violent purge; but a gentle assistant to nature.

CONSTIPATION!

SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulation from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache.

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT

Pain is a blessing. It locates disease. Whenever the bowels become irregular, use

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT,

it will save much pain and danger. Nature sometimes is so outraged by the burden she is made to carry, through the heedlessness of her children, that she openly rebels, and punishes fearfully. Don't neglect the proper treatment when the symptoms first appear. Resort to the aperient, and get well speedily.

Scarlet Fever, Small Pox, Diphtheria, Measles, &c.

Office of the Board of Health.

QUINCY, MARCH 5, 1879.

THE Board of Health issues the following notice:—That on and after MONDAY, March 10th, 1879, the following provisions of Chapter 26 of the General Statutes will be strictly enforced:—

SEC. 47. When a householder knows that a person within his family is taken sick of . . . . any . . . . . . disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the . . . . . . board of health of the town in which he dwells. If he refuses or neglects to give such notice, he shall forfeit a sum not exceeding $100.

SEC. 48. When a physician knows that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with . . . . any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the . . . . . . board of health of the town; and if he refuses or neglects to give such notice, he shall forfeit for each offence a sum not less than $50, nor more than $100.

The Board considers the above sections to apply to scarlet fever, small pox, diphtheria, measles and whooping cough.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

A Slight Mistake.

She.—I estimate fully
The honor you do me,
And trust, worthy sir, you
Will not misconstrue me,
But, sir, if I marry,
'Twill be to somebody,
Who thinks more of water
And drinks less of toddy.

He.—Ah—really—dear lady,
'Twas not my intention,
To ask for your hand in
The manner you mention;
I only requested—
Divinest of chances—
Your hand for a couple
Or more of the dances.

Receipts, Wit, &c.

RICE CUSTARD. One quart of milk; three eggs, well beaten; four tablespoonfuls sugar; one scant tablespoonful butter; a little salt; one small cup boiled rice. Boil the rice, and while still warm, drain, and stir into the milk. Beat the eggs; rub butter and sugar together, akd add to them. Mix all up well, and bake in buttered dish half an hour in a pretty quick oven.

COTTAGE PUFFS. One cup milk, and the same of cream; four eggs beaten stiff, and the yolks strained; one tablespoonful butter, chopped into the flour; a very little salt; enough prepared flour for thick batter. Mix the beaten yolks with the milk and cream; then the salt and whites, lastly the flour. Bake in buttered iron pans, such as are used for "gems" and corn-bread. The oven should be quick. Turn out and eat with sweet sauce.

☞ Wear flannels winter and summer; never mind the heat, you will soon become used to it and will be less subject to colds and lung troubles.

☞ Use kerosene to clean unvarnished furniture.

☞ An old fellow reading a newspaper headline. "War against the Afghans," said he was glad of it; he never did like "then circus blankets."

☞ Money in your purse will credit you—wisdom in your head will adorn—but both in your necessity will serve you.

☞ There is said to be a man in Worcester who has lived so long on corn bread that his voice has become husky, his hair has turned to silk like that which grows on the grain, and his toes are covered with corns.

☞ The things which are remembered are few and unimportant, compared with those few which are forgotten.

☞ Miss Susan King recently saw the following advertisement in a country newspaper: "How to get Rich—A rare secret—Send twenty-five cents to George Fullerton, box 413, Portland, Me." Prompted by curiosity, she forwarded the money and received the following reply: "Work night and day and never spend a cent."

☞ "Fellow Citizens," said a local candidate, "there are three topics that now agitate the State—greenbacks, taxes and the penitentiary. I shall pass over the first two very briefly, as my sentiments are well known, and come to the penitentiary, where I will dwell for some time."

A MYSTERY EXPLAINED. "Why does lightning so rarely strike twice in the same place?" Prof. Wortman asked a new boy in the class in natural philosophy. "Huh," said the new boy, "it never needs to." And it is a little singular that nobody had thought of that reason before.

☞ The flowing reporter who wrote, with reference to a well-known belle:—her dainty feet were encased in shoes that might have been taken for fairy boots," tied his wardrobe up in his handkerchief and left for parts unknown when it appeared the next morning:—"Her dirty feet were encased in shoes that might be taken for ferry boats."

☞ Archbishop Whately was at one time endeavoring to elicit a candidate's idea on the market value of labor, in reference to demand and supply; but being baffled the prelate put a question in this simple form:—"If there were in your village two shoemakers with just sufficient employment to enable them to live tolerably, and no more, what would follow if a third shoemaker set up in the same village?" "What would follow sir!" said the candidate; "why a fight, to be sure!"

Miscellany.

A LITTLE ROMANCE.

"I really think we might do something for her, Clara."

Mr. Glenn stood warming his coat-tails before the cheerful fire in the drawing room, Mrs. Glenn sat opposite, with no very gracious expression in her face.

"Nonsense!" said Mrs. Glenn; "she had just as much money as you when we both started in the world, hadn't she?"

"Well, yes, but you see, my dear, Fanny has been so unlucky. She married at eighteen, and that ne'er-do-well husband of hers contrived to spend it all before he died."

"Whose fault was it that she married such a poor bargain?" sharply questioned Mrs. Glenn. "Not yours, I'm sure."

"Well, we can't always see the future," mildly remarked her husband. "Here she is now a widow, and destitute, with that little child on her hands, and no means of providing for it."

"No means!" echoed the lady. "But what is means. Didn't I cut out that advertisement for a housekeeper in the country, and send it to her? And didn't she send it back with an insolent message, that she didn't choose any menial position! Menial, indeed! After that, I wash my hands of both of 'em."

"But, my love, Fanny never was strong."

"Never was fiddlesticks!" retorted Mrs. Glenn, growing red in the face.

"And," desperately added Mr. Glenn, "I thought as our spare chamber wasn't occupied at present, you would invite Fanny and her child to stay here as a sort of headquarters while she tried to earn something as a teacher."

"A teacher!" sneered Mrs. Glenn, "O, yes, that would suit Fannie Vivian exactly—to go smirking and smiling into peoples' houses."

"Clara, hush!" interrupted her husband, "you forget it would seem, that Fanny Vivian is a lady!"

"Lady or no lady, I'll not have her in this house!" cried Mrs. Glenn, angrily, "And if she thinks——

But at this moment the somewhat stormy dialogue was interrupted by the opening of the door which led into the adjoining room, and a tall, sweet-faced young woman in widow's weeds entered leading a curly-headed little child by the hand.

"Geoffrey," said she in tremulous accents, "I—was waiting in the other room, and heard all. I couldn't help it. And while I thank you for your kindness, I want Clara distinctly to understand that I have no favors to ask of her!"

Mrs. Glenn bridled and drew herself up.

"I never heard a case yet of listeners hearing any good of themselves!" said she, with a somewhat embarrassed smile. "But I certainly have said nothing that I didn't mean!"

Fanny Vivian held out her cold hand to her brother.

"Good-bye Geoffrey," said she simply. "We used to be all in all to each other, but since your wife has come between us you never have been quite the same."

And so the young widow left her brother's home, leading little Linda by the hand.

* * * * * * *

Ten years have passed away since the morning when Fanny Vivian so resolutely seperated her future from that of her brother, and Geoffrey Glenn lay ill in a stuffy little lodging in the least promising portion of the lovely city of Florence.

Fate had not treated him well since he sided with his wife in that memorable family quarrel.

His business had fallen away, his health had failed, and now, at forty-one, he lay dying in the foreign country.

You would scarcely have known Clara Glenn, as she stood by the window, searching through and through her shabby purse for a solitary coin, but in vain.

She was pale, wearied and worn.

In place of the substantial silks in which she used to rustle about, she wore a thread-bare brown poplin, spotted here and there by medicine stains.

Alas! poor Clara!

As she shut her purse with a sigh she glanced toward her husband.

He lay apparently asleep on the bed, and, with a noiseless footstep, she crept downstairs to where Eligia, the portress, was nodding at her post.

"Eligia," she said wistfully, "are there any English families living in Florence now?"

"There was Signore Cleveland, the English milord at the Villa Castellani, on the Arno," she said, after a moment's deliberation. "He was an Englishman and people said he married an English wife."

"Is it far out of the city?"

"Not far," Eligia answered, "a mile or so. The signora would know it by the superb marble statues on either side of the gate. The signor milord rains money down as if it were water."

Mrs. Glenn stood hesitating a moment.

She had never deliberately asked for charity before, but the time had come in which she had no alternative left.

Her husband was perishing before her eyes, and Geoffrey's long illness had consumed all their slender resources.

For herself she would almost have cowered down in some alley and starved, but she could not see the sick man suffer.

"I cannot beg of strangers and aliens," she thought, with a thrill of aversion at the idea, "but I think I could ask for help from some one who was born in my own country."

And thus reasoning within herself Mrs. Glenn toiled along the burning road in the direction of the Villa Castellani, having first made interest with Eligia to sit with her husband during her absence, lest he should want anything.

But when at last she reached the magnificent mansion, whose marble colonades rose from groves of orange and oleander, her heart, like that of the queen of Sheba, failed within her.

As she stood hesitating, a respectable white-haired old butler came to the door.

"Did you want to see Mr. Cleveland?" he asked, in accents that betrayed his English nationality, and not without a rather contemptuous glance at Mrs. Glenn's dusty boots and threadbare poplin.

"I wish to see Mrs. Cleveland," poor Clara answered.

"Your card, if you please, ma'am?" said the butler.

"I have no card," said Clara, coloring. "Tell Mrs. Cleveland that it is an English lady who wishes to see her."

And with some dignity she followed the man into an ante-room where a gorgeous Persian rug covered the marble floor.

Presently a light footstep sounded on the echoing pavement of the hall without, and a tall lady dressed in white muslin, with floating ribbons, entered the room.

She started back with a cry of glad surprise as her eyes fell on Mrs. Glenn's wan and faded face.

"Clara!" she exclaimed.

"My God!" it is Fanny Vivian!" shrieked Mrs. Glenn, scarcely believing her eyes.

And Fanny, ringing the bell for wine and refreshments, threw her arms around the sister-in-law she had never again expected to see.

Before dark Geoffrey Glenn was comfortably established in one of the great airy rooms of the Villa Castellani, waited on and nursed by Linda Vivian, now grown a tall girl of fourteen.

Fanny's story, when related in detail, proved romantic.

She had accepted an engagement as governess with a family going to Italy, taking Linda with her.

There she had met with a wealthy widower, who had lost his heart to her blue wistful eyes and peach-like bloom, and for five years she had her living at the Villa Castellani like a young queen in her palace.

"You must stay with me now, both of you," said Fanny, eagerly. "You must never go away from me."

"I consider Fanny's relatives as my own," said Mr. Cleveland cordially.

While Geoffrey looked up with a sad smile, and said—

"I shall get well now, Fanny, for I honestly believe that my trouble was as much of the mind as of the body."

That night when Fanny came to see if all was comfortable in the invalid's sick chamber, Clara followed her out into the corridor.

"Fanny," whispered she, "will you forgive me?"

"Forgive you, Clara! For what?"

"For the wicked words I spoke that day when you parted from us, for my cold, cruel selfishness."

"Never speak of it again, Clara," said Mrs. Cleveland, tenderly kissing her, for she knew that God's hand had punished the carelessly uttered words.

Altogether Too Quick.

One morning an enraged countryman came into Mr. M.'s store with very angry looks. He had left a team in the street, and had a good-sized stick in his hand.

"Mr. M," said the countryman, "I bought a paper of nutmegs here in your store, and when I got home they were more than half walnuts; and that's the young villian I bought them of," pointing to John.

"John," said Mr. M., "did you sell the man walnuts for nutmegs?"

"No, sir," was the ready answer.

"You lie, you little villian," said the countryman, still more enraged at his assurance.

"Now, look here you old goose," said John. "If you had taken the trouble to weigh your nutmegs, you would have found that I put in the walnuts gratis.

"O, you gave them to me, did you?"

"Yes, sir. I threw in a handful for the children to crack," said John, laughing at the same time.

"Well, now, if that aint a young scamp," said the countryman, his features relaxing into a grin, as he saw through the matter.

Much hard talk and bad blood would be saved if people would always stop to weigh before they blame others.

HINTS FOR POOR SLEEPERS. Poor sleepers will find it advantageous often to raise the head of the bed a foot higher than the foot, and then to sleep on a tolerably thick hair pillow, so as to bring the head a little higher than the shoulders. The object of this is to make the work of the heart in throwing blood to the brain harder, so it will not throw so much. A level bed, with the head almost as low as the feet, causes an easy flow of blood to the brain, and sometimes wakefulness when the vessels cannot contract on it and keep the brain empty.

Letter of a Tourjee Excursionist.

We have been permitted to copy the following extracts from a very interesting letter written by a young lady, one of the Tourjee excursionists, to her friends in this town.

The party left New York June 21st, and arrived at Morillo, on the Irish coast on the 1st of July. Their passage was a very rough and unpleasant one; the sun shining but two or three times during the entire passage. The writer was sea-sick throughout the whole journey. They arrived in Glasgow on the 2d of July. She says:—

"I never can tell you how beautiful the Irish coast looked as we steamed up Lough Foyle to leave a section of the party at Morrillo. The shores sloped gently to the bay and were under a high state of cultivation, presenting every shade of green, clear to the water's edge; even the rocks on the narrow strip of beach were moss-covered. Then we steamed out to sea again and dropped anchor early next morning at the port of Greenock. Here some took a tug and landed and proceeded by rail to Glasgow. It did seem good to put the solid earth once more beneath our feet, although it seemed a litle unsteady and rose to meet us at every step. Father and I walked about a good deal and saw considerable of the city, which is a large place containing half a million of inhabitants. The old cathedral is by far the greatest object of interest. I could have stayed there all day studying the beautiful painted windows. Even Westminister Abbey did not impress me as did this cathedral, and no other ever will, because it was the first I ever saw. * * *. The windows illustrating scripture parables are sermons in themsevles, and speak right to the heart.

We left Glasgow by rail for Bollock, where we took a steamer across Loch Lomond, a beautiful lake shut in by green hills where grew the heather and the yellow broom and down whose sides leaped tiny waterfalls all foam and spray. Sometimes we passed islets of a vivid green. Now and then we stopped at a romantic little village on the shore composed of a cluster of picturesque dwellings. It was all charming, only we visited it in a pouring rain. After crossing the lake we took open carriages and rode around and between the hills to Loch Katrine, which is much smaller than the other Loch Ben Lomond. Ben Venne and Ben An are mountains which keep watch over this beautiful lake region. Loch Kathrine is you know the scene of Scott's Lady of the Lake. The captain had the poem at his tongue's end and delighted to point out all the points mentioned. The rain now held up and we had a most enjoyable ride through the Trossachs in open stages. Stopped to lunch and then rode to Callander, over a road replete with historic and legendary interest.

Here we took the cars for Sterling where we visited the old castle and enjoyed a magnificent view from its parapet. There is probably no place more closely connected with Scottish hunting than is Sterling Castle, the key to the lowland and there is scarcely an acre of ground in its vicinity but has had its taste of blood shed. The field of Bannockburn is in sight from the castle, as is Abbey Craig crowned with a monument to Wallace. The windings of the Forth spanned by picturesque arched bridges, fields of living green, ancient red-topped houses and the Highlands in the background form part of the picture that delights the eye from the battlements of Sterling. The place is unseparably connected with the Stuarts. Here James VI was educated; here James V lived and here is still shown the secret staircase down which he passed to mingle with the people in various disguises; and the room where he murdered Black Douglass as well as the window through which he threw the body into the court below.

We went into Edinboro' that night and devoted the next day to visiting objects of interest in that city. We went first to Craigmillar Castle, an old ruin all overgrown with ivy. From there to Holyrood Palace which was full of interest. We were first shown the banquetting hall, where were portraits of all the Stuarts; then the ball room, the Darnley's bedroom and dressing room. On the floor above was Queen Mary's audience chamber, in which was the bed of Charles I when living at Holyrood. It had once been fine; the curtains were of embossed velvet but had suffered from the ravages of time. On this bed Prince Charles slept during his brief occupation of Edinburgh. Out of this room opens Mary's bedroom, where stands the bed formerly occupied by her, with decayed hangings of crimson damask. This apartment as well as the others mentioned are hung with tapestry, of faded colors, quite concealing the walls. Behind these hangings is a small door which opens upon the escort stair way up which came the murderers of Rizzio. The supper-room, where the murder was committed, leads out of this chamber.—Not more than three could have supped there at once. A little dressing room completed the suite of Mary's apartments. They could not be considered luxurious by anybody in these times. In the bedroom hangs a portrait of Queen Elizabeth.

At the head of the principal staircase is shown a discoloration on the floor, supposed to be a blood stain of Rizzio.

We then took a delightful drive around Arthur's leap, visited John Knox house, rode though the Canon gate, and High street to the Castle. I fell in love with the old Castle. It is the most conspicuous object in Edinburgh, and can be seen from many points. It crowns the summit of a rocky crag, towering above everything, and is as strong, apparently, as it was hundreds of years ago. It seems impossible ever to take it by assault. We were shown Queen Mary's apartments here also, including the little closet, for it was scarcely more, where James VI. was born; out of the window which he was let down in a basket when only eight days old, and sent to Stirling to be nursed and educated. * * *

We saw the Crown and Regalia of Scotland, lost for so many years, but which were discovered through the agency of Sir Walter Scott. * * * *

I do not expect to stop at any place that I shall prefer to Edinburgh. It is a charming city. * * The old part is the most interesting of course,—such tal buildings. I counted one ten stories high, and was told that some are fourteen stories. * * * *

Yesterday we visited Kenilworth and Stratford on Avon. * * * *

We have stopped at excellent hotels, and have been well served in every particular. There are two conductors, one who engineers the party, and one who attends to the luggage. They never say baggage here. If you were to enquire for the depot, nobody would know wha you meant; they call it the station; and a horse car is a train. * * *

At Stirling we dined at the Golden Lion, and yesterday we lunched at the Red Horse Inn. The dishes used at dessert are beautiful, every one different.

The season is far behind ours. Rhubarb and green gooseberries are used for dessert. The former is prepared more nicely than I ever supposed it could be Strawberries are just in blossom. The season is unusually wet. There has not been a day since we sailed from New York, that it has not rained some part of the day. Though the sun may be shining brightly, it is not safe to venture out without water-proof and umbrella, so suddenly do showers come up. They are not tempests either. This morning we went to hear Spurgeon. In his prayers he alluded to the incessant rains, and said, "O Lord! we are poor simpletons, we do not know much about these things, but we think some, and we pray as our finite judgment prompts, for more sunshine, that the earth may produce for man and beast." To which we internally responded, Amen.

We stay here till Wednesday night, when we leave for Holland.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 2, 1879.

Short communications and items of news earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.

☞ Anonymous communications are not published.

LIFE BOAT. Mr. Wm. H. Mears is trying to secure money by subscription to build a suitable building for storing a Life Boat. The boat with truck and rigging has already been granted by the Humane Society, on condition that a house would be built by subscription for its storage. Mr. James Mears has given the use of a piece of land for this purpose, in such a position that the Life Boat can be used in both bays. It is situated near Quincy Great Hill, and is a thing much needed in this locality. It is hoped that our citizens will contribute something for this humane object. A paper for this purpose may be found at the store of E. B. Souther. Every little helps.

MISSIONARY WORK. Miss L. R. Drake gave a very interesting lecture at the Rev. Mr. Norton's Church, last Sabbath evening. She spoke of the trials and difficulties missionaries are obliged to undergo in India, in preaching the Gospel to the heathen. It was amusing to hear her relate her experience in travelling with a buck team; also her journey from the mountains a distance of seventeen miles, which required the services of twenty-four men to bring her and a lady companion down to the shore. The account of the miserable houses the inhabitants live in, and the many privations the missionaries are obliged to put up with, makes us think of the many luxuries one has to enjoy here in New England. A servant's pay is one and a half cents per day, and he boards himself, which seems scarcely anything, still you are obliged to have a great many servants, namely: one to do the cooking, another to bring the water to cook with; another to take care of the horse or cow, if you have one; or two if you have both; another for washing, &c., &c.

THE FIRST ONE. Miss Isabel F. P. Emery, of Atlantic, is the first lady in this town, who has had confidence to go to the Assessors' office and have her name registered, so that she may vote for School Committee if she desires. It is a feather in her hat which she can look to in years to come, with honor and pleasure.

SEASHORE VISITORS. The following young ladies have been rusticating at Elmwood Cottage, Rock Island, Houghs Neck, the past two weeks:—Misses Ellie Gallagher, Josephine Brett, Mary A. Fegan, Louisa Devereux and Theresa Fegan. They have been visited by many of their friends, and on Monday evening the St. Mary's choir, under the leadership of Miss Nellie McDonnell paid them a visit which was highly enjoyed. On Thursday evening, a party of young ladies and gentlemen, to the number of thirty or more, gave them a pleasant surprise at their new quarters. The evening was pleasantly spent in games, etc., until supper was announced, when the surprisers adjourned to the dining room, where a bountiful repast was spread, and which was done justice to. After a few hours more enjoyment the guests bade the surprised an affectionate adieu, but not before they returned the latter a vote of thanks for their kind attention. The party then took their seats in a large and commodious team furnished by Mr. Herbert F. Doble, drawn by a pair of dashing greys, and were soon enjoying a few hours of sweet repose at their several homes.

MELVILLE GARDEN. There are numerous resorts in this vicinity where a day can be spent very desirably. One of the most noted is at Melville Garden, Downer Landing, where every facility for a day's pleasure can be enjoyed.—Every Thursday, day and evening, the garden is open to the public, and Edmand's Band discourses some of its most excellent music, while the cool shady nooks afford a quiet retreat for the visitor. If you wish for a day of real pleasure, visit Downer Landing.

INSURANCE BUSINESS. We were somewhat surprised as well as gratified one day this week to notice the order and method adopted by Mr. Temple, the Secretary of the Dorchester Mutual Fire Insurance Co., in keeping the list of property insured by them, the names of the owners, &c. Probably few companies in the State of its size, have their business so well arranged or can tell so quickly and decidedly, whether a certain piece of property is insured in the Company or not. The Secretary's plan requires extra care and labor at first but once adopted and carefully looked after, requires but little extra work and is very complete.

VACATION. Dr. Mary K. Gale of Wollaston is spending her vacation in New Jersey. Dr. Underwood takes charge of her patients during her absence.

DISTRICT COURT. The following criminal cases have been before His Honor the present week:—

Patrick Sullivan, of Quincy, for being drunk was fined three dollars and costs.

John E. Mann, of Randolph, was arrested by constable Farrell for an assault with intent to commit a rape on the daughter of George S. Whiting of Braintree. After a careful examination by Justice E. Granville Pratt, the defendant was held in the sum $2000 for his appearance at Dedham the first Monday of September next. In default was committed. J. E. Tirrell appeared for defendant.

Patrick J. Whalen, of Randolph, for an assault on Royal S. Holbrook, was found guilty and fined $5 and costs, from which sentence he appealed.

Felix Farrell, William A. Gardner and Patrick Shovelin, all of Quincy, for being drunk, were each fined $3 and costs.

Patrick Sullivan, for being drunk, was also fined $3 and costs. In default was committed.

Francis Moneyhan, of Weymouth, was arraigned for an assault on Mary Hallihan. Found guilty and fined $5 and costs.

Bridget Welsh, of Braintree, for being a common drunkard. Discharged.

Local Items.

☞ A very interesting letter from Glasgow will be found on the first page.

☞ The potato crop in this vicinity promises to be unusually large and good.

☞ Among the patents granted to New England inventors is one to D. Whittemore, on Sewing Machines.

☞ Mr. Lewis Newcomb has been spending a few weeks very pleasantly with his son, in New York.

☞ The stone contractors had a grand time at Nantasket beach on Wednesday last.

☞ The descendants of the late Seth Spear will hold a picnic at Downer Landing on Wednesday the 13th inst.

☞ The new apothecary store improves the looks of Temple street, particularly in the evening.

☞ Mrs. George S. T. Whiting has been dangerously sick at her residence on Quincy Avenue, the present week.

☞ This has been a decidedly hot week. The thermometer ranging nearly every day from 90 to 100 in the shade.

☞ The regular monthly meeting of the Granite Engine Co. occurs on Monday evening next.

☞ Wednesday afternoon was so hot that the workmen in some of the granite yards were obliged to quit work.

☞ Benjamin F. Bass of this town, won the champion flag, at the Dorchester yacht race, on Saturday last.

☞ The employes of Messrs. Catey Bros., had an excursion to Mears' beach, on Saturday last.

☞ Rev. Mr. Hague will preach to his old society, the First Church in Providence, R. I., to-morrow.

☞ The O. C. R. R. have caused to be laid a new plank walk at the Quincy Adams station.

☞ Many moonlight parties have visited the beaches this week. The evenings have been beautiful.

☞ Joseph T. French's barge, Augusta, with four horses, carried a lively party of ladies to Nantasket beach on Thursday.

☞ The workmen employed by Messrs. Vogel & Sons, are invited to a social gathering to be held to-day at Quincy Woods.

☞ The Orthodox Church was a very hot place last Sunday evening. We don't mean the language used by the lady, but the atmosphere.

☞ Frederick H. French returned on Wednesday after a week's visit at Marblehead. He helped quell the row there on Sunday by the Boston roughs.

☞ Mr. Geo. H. Locke has been reappointed Collector of taxes. He has given the required bond of $50,000. This is his twelfth year.

☞ Miss Nellie Bodwell from New Hampshire has been on a short visit to her old home in this town, and made one of a party at Mr. Woodbury's.

☞ The Catholic Sunday School children of Quincy Parish will hold a grand union picnic at Lovell's Grove on the 13th of this month.

☞ Mr. Frank W. Poore, the younger of the Poore Brothers, is spending a few weeks at that beautiful resort Annisquam Point, Gloucester.

☞ There is a young lad in this town, of some ten years of age, who has never eaten any kind of fruits, vegetables, pies or candy; and he is happy.

☞ Mr. John McGowan had a barrel of beer stolen from his cellar on Sunday morning last. The entrance was effected through a cellar window.

☞ N. Curtis & Co.'s boot manufactory on Granite street is now running on full time, and we learn that they have a large order ahead.

☞ John Q. Newcomb, one of the clerks at the Boston Branch store, has been enjoying a weeks vacation at the summer residence of Messrs. John Shaw and Henry French at Nantasket beach.

☞ We are pleased to learn that Roger Lewis has had a successful operation performed in extracting a species of cancer from under his tongue. He is still at the Hospital.

☞ Miss Stella Bird of Brookline, and Mr. A. F. Woodbury, formerly of this town but now of Brookline, spent a few days last week at Quincy Point, with Mr. William K. Woodbury, the father of the gentleman.

☞ Monday morning last as Mr. Wm. Gardner Prescott was crossing the railroad track at Quincy Adams, his horse stumbled and fell, breaking both shafts and cutting the knees of the horse in a very bad manner.

☞ Mr. John H. Sweetser has the thanks of the employes of the PATRIOT Office for the refreshments furnished them on Wednesday last. Such acts are always remembered by the poor printer.

☞ The State poll tax in this town this year is 77 cents; the County poll tax $1.00, total $1.77. The Assessors have not completed their labors so far as to be able to give the rate of taxation on $1,000.

☞ The old shed connected with E. Clapp's store, built about half a century ago, has been taken down this week and a new one erected in the rear of the building. What would the late Josiah Brigham say to see the changes which have been made in his old store within the last three years?

☞ Mr. Seth Spear has a very large and handsome apple orchard which is loaded with fruit. It bore a large crop last year which makes it a little remarkable. Doubtful if there is another apple orchard in Norfolk or Plymouth counties that will compare with it. Many of the trees in Plymouth county have not fruit enough to pay for picking.

A Jolly Time at Nantasket.

At one o'clock on Wednesday, the members of the G. M. Association of Quincy stepped into the carriages waiting for them at the Robertson House, and were bowled along over the Point bridge, through Hingham, into Nantasket, and five miles along the beach to the summer cottage of Mr. William Field. This is situated in one of the loveliest spots of the beach, just at the foot of the hill near Point Alderton, commanding a grand view of the ocean on one side, and Boston bay on the other.

We were heartily welcomed by Mr. Field and his family, and after enjoying the beauty of the scene, went down on the smooth shining beach, just in front of the house and spent an hour in sport; jumping, throwing the stone, turning somersaults in the sand, laughing, singing, &c., enjoying ourselves generally. Presently "Gus." approached with the welcome news that dinner was ready.—We needed no second invitation—in less than two minutes there was not a contractor on that beach.

We were smilingly received in the spacious dining room by Mrs. Field and her daughter, and after a few words of welcome from our host, sat down to dinner, and such a dinner,—Shades of the Parker House—our eminent caterer, Daniel F. French fairly distinguished himself. We had only calculated on a little clam-bake, but when the fourth and fifth courses began to get round, one of our number, who did ample justice to each, started from his chair and exclaimed:—"Look here, Dan, if you're coming round any more I want to know it now; we must make some calculation on this sort of thing." But we noticed when the watermelons got round, he was just as Wild as ever.

The only man who attempted to make an after dinner speech said he was too full for utterance, and suddenly resumed his seat. One of the party however, was even Fuller, and he was found sometime after stretched his full length, (six feet two,) on the piazza. After a very interesting walk around the rock-bound bluff of Alderton Point the flowing bowl was once more passed around and with three rousing cheers for our genial host and hostess we departed. A beautiful moonlight drive of two hours, brought to a close, one of the most enjoyabl afternoons of the season. H.

Moonlight.

A moonlight excursion to Nantasket House, Nantasket Beach, occurred on Thursday, July 30th. At the appointed time a hundred people came together at the Point Church and half past seven, seated in the beach wagons furnished by Bourk of Weymouth Landing, they started on their way. On arriving at the Nantasket House, the sight was as fine as often witnessed. All along the beach as far as one could see, twinkled the lights of the several cafes; the hotel was brilliantly illuminated as usual, and the music, both of the breakers and band, together with the scores of people who crowd the promanade, made a lively scene. After spending a couple of hours very pleasantly, we once more crowded the teams and enjoyed a delightful drive home, enlivened by some fine singing. The feeling of the party is expressed by the words, "Oh that we may go again." A "D. C"

Fruit Stealing.

Raids upon the fruit gardens of the town are becoming too common of late years. No one who has choice fruit feels any safety without a "big dog" to guard it. If there is anything that will make a deacon exclaim, "I dew vum," it is to look out in the morning and see his favorite pear tree stripped. Even the ministers of Quincy are not spared. Last season Rev. Mark Trafton had nearly all his choice fruit stolen in a single night. Others shared nearly the same loss. In Dorchester the courts have dealt with such severity with several boy culprits arrested that I am told that the fruit about Harrison Square was last year untouched. Who will join a vigilance committee now numbering six, to make an example of a few of these sneak thieves, who last year kept the owners of gardens on the qui vive. Let the justice of the court give us their efficient aid. ARGUS.

The Committee's Report.

To the President and Members of the Massachusetts Humane Society:—

GENTLEMEN:—In pursuance of an understanding to that effect with Mr. Motley, the Secretary of your Society, and at his request, the undersigned, a committee of the Quincy Yacht Club appointed for that purpose, have made a careful investigation of the facts connected with the saving of seven persons from the disabled boat Undine off Houghs Neck, so called, in Quincy, during the sudden storm of the 17th inst.

The Undine is an open cat-rig boat, nineteen feet in length. At the time of the disaster there was on board of it a pleasure party from Quincy consisting of two men, two women and three children. The storm gave ample warning of its approach, and Mr. A. B. Lelois, who was in charge of the Undine, anchored her in shallow water, and took every precaution to enable her to ride in safety. When the gale struck, however, the anchor proved too light and was rapidly dragged, while the boat, caught by the wind broad-side on heeled over so that she failed to right herself, and was completely disabled. The fury of the wind and rain was such at this time that everything on the water was completely obscured from the shore; and there can be no question that all on board the Undine would at once have been drowned had she not fortunately been supplied with air tanks, which prevented her sinking. She was, however, for the time being a complete wreck, to which those on board clung, or were held, exposed to the full force of the wind, waves and rain.

Some time elapsed before the storm lifted sufficiently to enable those on shore to see the condition of the boats. As nearly as we can ascertain, it was some twenty minutes after she was disabled before the Undine was made out, as she had by that time drifted a considerable distance towards the opposite, Weymouth, shore. After careful inquiry we are satisfied that immediately on ascertaining her disabled condition, and without waiting for the storm further to abate, William H. Mears and Jose Voeda, two residents at Houghs Neck, prepared to go to the assistance of those on board of her. Mears at once divested himself of his outer clothing; the two took Voeda's dory, and rowed for the Undine. It would seem that they were some ten minutes in reaching her, so that those on board had then been exposed for about half an hour. The women and children were very much exhausted; the men far less so. All were safely transferred to the dory, which was then headed for the Weymouth shore on which the party was safely landed and cared for.

After inquiry among those who assisted at the landing of the persons rescued, we learn that even then the storm was not over. Though the wind had considerably abated, it was still raining and blowing freshly. There was about a barrel of water in the dory. Of those on board the Undine we are satisfied that two at least, but for the action of Mears and Voeda, would have perished from exhaustion. Three of the others might possibly have survived. The two men, we have little doubt, could have clung to the boat until the storm was over, when they would at once have been taken off.

Both Mears and Voeda are experienced boatmen, and at the time they started out the sea was not so rough or the storm so violent that, in our opinion, they could be said to have incurred any very great danger by that act in itself. They went out, however, to a rescue; and the transferring in mid-channel seven persons, of whom five at least were exhausted, helpless or frightened, from a disabled wreck to an open dory, and that in rough water, amid wind and rain, is, it must be unnecessary for us to say, a most dangerous operation.

We have endeavored to state the facts in this case as we have ascertained them, carefully avoiding all exaggeration, that your society might feel that in our report it had a reliable basis upon which to take action. The preservation of all of those on board the Undine, was, considering the age and sex of certain of them, most remarkable. It was primarily due to the fortunate precaution of the owner of the boat, Mr. Harvey French, in supplying her with air tanks. This, as is well known, is a measure of safety much too seldom taken, but which in the present case beyond a doubt saved the lives of seven persons. The chance of life thus afforded would unquestionably have been lost but for the excellent precautions taken by Mr. Lelois, which relieved the boat of most of her ballast, and, by having everything securely lashed, enabled the feebler members of the party to cling, or to be secured by him to her. It was, however, with several of them, a mere question of time, and a very short time at that, and the preservation of the lives of a portion of the party at least must, we are satisfied, be attributed to the prompt and voluntary exertions of Messrs. Mears and Voeda.

As we have already stated, the Undine belonged to the Quincy Yacht Club.—Among those rescued from it were a member of the Club, and the child of a former Commodore of it. Under these circumstances, on behalf of that Club, we now present these facts and conclusions to your Honorable Society in aid of the petition of those rescued, which has already been forwarded to you, that you will suitably recognize the brave conduct of Messrs. Mears and Voeda, both because it is in itself deserving of such recognition and to encourage others to emulate it when similar exigencies shall again arise.

Letter from Boston.

The weather out of joint. Business. Health of the city. Weekly mortality. The Old Colony Railroad and Nantasket. Political. State and Presidential election.

BOSTON, JULY 30th, 1879.

The weather for the week past has been remarkably cool for summer. Some professing to be wise in astronomical matters, attribute the cool temperature to the influence of old Sol's planets, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and the moon, which are now visible to us mortals of the earth at night. A sight no living human being will ever see again.

Notwithstanding summer, there is no lack of visitors and strangers here, as shown by the hotel lists. The general boot and shoe market is quiet. There are the usual number of buyers in the market; some of them heavy operators, but a large proportion of them purchase on small bills.

Boston continues healthy for dog days, and no sanitary measures are spared for the preservation of health. The mortality last week was 158. Cholera infantum caused 39 deaths; consumption 20, cancer 8, getting quite common. The mortality of children is remarkable, 65 under one year of age equal to the weekly death in Paris and London, in proportion to the population, or even New York. There is no apprehension that yellow fever, the present scourge of the South, will reach Boston. There is no wanting of timid people here who are fearfully apprehensive that Yellow Jack will soon make us and unwelcome visit and carry off some hundreds of its denizens. A possibility but not probability.

The flight of human beings over the Old Colony Railroad—the number being legions—renders the season highly successful to the corporation. The stock, selling over $106 per share, is much in demand. The distances of travel now over the main track of the railroad and its branches are some 800 miles. The proposed extension of the railroad from Hingham to Nantasket Beach, about three miles at a cost of $30,000, is favorably entertained and will soon be consummated. The direct communication of Boston with Nantasket by railroad will create a new era with the travelling community, making a second Coney Island.

Quite a political sensation was produced here last week by the announcement that General Butler is to be the Independent candidate for Governor of the old Bay State, for the next political year, 1880. We shall have occasion to comment on this matter hereafter as we expect to come out favorably for Butler.

A Washington correspondent of July 25th, says: "Tilden is getting ahead with his presidential operations, and the Grant crowd are falling behind theirs. The Democratic machine is in no condition to resist Tilden's movements at any point. He has got New York and Pennsylvania well in hand today and he will have little difficulty in holding his own in the South." With the election of Tilden to the Presidency, your distinguished townsman, Hon. C. F. Adams, whom all parties honor will doubtless hold the port folio of Secretary of State. X

In Memoriam.

WHEREAS,—It has pleased Almighty God in his wise Providence, to remove from our fraternal circle and our community, our Comrade William Stiles, and,

WHEREAS,—We realize that year after year our ranks are becoming thinned, by the hand of death. Yet we know that in due time we shall all be gathered in that grand bivouac above, and,

WHEREAS,—We do not expect to promote our late brother to a higher sphere of blissful beatitude, but to show our appreciation of his patriotism by these resolutions.

Resolved,—That his memory shall be cherished by us in all after time as one of the gallant defenders of our glorious Union.

Resolved,—That the lessons inculcated by his after life of patient suffering, are those of true heroism and self-abnegation, that shall have a lasting influence with us.

Resolved,—That we tender our sincere and heartfelt sympathy and condolence to the surviving relatives and friends of our late brother, in this hour of affliction.

Resolved,—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our late brother, and a copy inserted in the Quincy PATRIOT and placed on our records.

Samuel Curtis' 100th Birthday.

We had the pleasure on Wednesday last, to unite with the descendants of Mr. Samuel Curtis of Marshfield, in celebrating his one hundredth birthday, and propose to give our readers an account of the affair, together with a few facts connected therewith, believing it to be of no common occurrence; no person born in Quincy, has ever lived to our knowledge, to that remarkable age, although several have in that noted town.

Mr. Curtis was born in Marshfield, July 30th, 1779, in a small pitch-roof house, situated about half of a mile northwest of where the Town Hall and Poor House now stands, and where he has always lived. The house was built in 1767, or 112 years ago, and has had during that long period but two owners.

Mr. Curtis is not a gentleman a casual observer would take to be over 75 or 80 years of age. His head is well covered with gray hairs, his face is plump, and he has but few wrinkles. His eyes are bloodshot, which naturally attracts one's attention, otherwise no one would take him to be very old; still, upon careful scrutiny one notices signs of great age. He retains his faculties remarkably well. His memory is excellent, and his hearing is good. He converses easily, and seems to take an interest in passing events. Is able to dress and undress himself, and walk about.

He has been twice married. He led to the hymenial altar in 1802, Hannah French, who died in 1848. In the following year, at the age of 70, he married Eunice Rogers, and lived with her for twenty-eight years, or until her death, two years ago last June. Few ladies who marry husbands of seventy can expect their partners to live long enough to have a silver wedding.

Mr. Curtis has had nine children, eight sons and a daughter, all by his first wife. Phillips, Mercy, Ira, Samuel and Asa are still living. A tall, noble-looking family. Three of the sons are living in Weymouth. One grandson (William T. Curtis) and two great-grand-children reside in this town.

Mr. Curtis has been a man of marked ability, and many responsible trusts have been imposed upon him by the citizens of Marshfield. For seventeen years he was town clerk.

On this eventful occasion, four generations were present, including all his children now living, 1 son-in-law and 1 daughter-in-law; 8 of his 10 grandchildren; and 12 of the 14 great-grand-children; besides other relatives, friends and neighbors,—about 125 in all.

After a bountiful dinner of good things that tempt the appetite, a few hours were intellectually spent. The assembly was called to order and a few remarks were made by Phillips, the eldest son; then followed a biographical account of Mr. Curtis, by the Rev. George Leonard of East Marshfield; Reading of Scripture by the Rev. Otis L. Leonard; Prayer by the Rev. Mr. Alden; followed by singing and the reading of the following stanzas, written by E. I. Humphrey, a grandson, of Hyde Park:—

Grandfather Curtis' 100th Birthday.

The cup of life o'erfills with years,
And still the hand of time outpours
A ceaseless stream; still smiles and tears
Hold their brief sway; and thus allures
The spirit from its native clime,
That lies beyond the shores of time.

The century holds its circling chain,
Of swiftly passing days and years,
When every link gleams once again
In memory's light, life reappears;
We clasp it, but a moment's space,
To some departed blessing trace,

Grandsire, the future doth reveal
Through gathering shadows, light beyond,
Where heavenly bells new glories peal,
Of joys grown pure and hearts grown fond;
Where errors fade before the truth,
Where eyes shall find eternal youth.

An artist was present throughout the day, and took photographs of the centenarian, of the family, of the grounds, &c.

REGATTA. The fiftieth regatta of the Dorchester Yacht Club took place on Saturday last, off Commercial Point. The first gun for the first class centre-boards and first class keels was fired at 3.30, and the start effected five minutes later. The third and fourth classes, all centre-boards, started at 3.48. The course for the first class was the Sculpin ledge course, nine and one-half miles, and that for the third and fourth classes the Half-Tide rock, seven miles long. The Holden and Nattie lost their bearing and considerable time. All the boats under twenty feet sailed for the championship flag, presented by Mr. G. H. L. Sharp. The Rocket took the prize. The summary is as follows:—

Red Ribbon Reform Clubs.

MR. EDITOR:—Will you allow me a space in your columns to give a true idea to the citizens of Quincy of the status of the Reynolds Red Ribbon Reform Clubs of Massachusetts, and the reasons for the withdrawal of clubs from the meeting at your town on the 23d inst.

Within a few months after Dr. Henry A. Reynolds began his great temperance reformation in this State, an attempt to centralize the several organizations was developed. Dr. Reynolds, with that wisdom which has characterized all his movements, immediately called a convention of all Reform Clubs he had organized, at Lowell. The result of an earnest discussion of the whole matter, was the adoption of a resolution stating that the clubs deemed it unwise to form a State organization, and the clubs voted unanimously, never to recognize any governing power higher than themselves. A few of the schemers, so thoroughly defeated at this meeting, soon after called a convention at Tremont Temple, Boston. The attempt to commit the Reynolds Clubs to a political movement ended in a withdrawal of the clubs, and a breaking up of the convention. Another attempt at Fitchburg and one other disgraceful affair at Boston ended the matter of mixed conventions. Two years and a half ago the Waltham Reform Club issued circulars to their brother Red Ribbon Clubs in the immediate vicinity to meet them in Rumford Hall to enjoy a reunion and interchange of courtesies. The reunion was held and was so thoroughly enjoyable it was decided to hold another one in three months, and to extend the invitation to a larger number of Red Ribbon Clubs; but the invitations have always been restricted to clubs working under Dr. Reynolds' peculiar plan, and composed only of males over sixteen years. Ten of these gatherings have already been held.

Owing to other engagements I was not able to be present until the afternoon session of the meeting at Quincy. The general appearance of the audience at once aroused my suspicions that all was not right, and I immediately asked the Secretary to allow me to look over the credentials presented. I found ten of the credentials were from organizations that have not a shadow of right to participate in a Red Ribbon Reunion, and several others bearing unmistakable evidence of having been filled up with names of persons present without authority from any competent source, so their control of the organization was by fraud. The vote on Mr. Faxon's motion showed there was a majority of persons in the hall in favor of doing the men whom Dr. Reynolds rescued from the curse of strong drink, a great wrong. There was only one course left, and that was to withdraw.

In closing I desire to impress on the citizens of Quincy the fact that the twenty-two clubs that withdrew have a bona fide existence and a large and active membership. That the men who controlled the meeting represented nobody but themselves. Several of the clubs claimed to be represented ceased to exist months ago, and with one or two exceptions the remaining clubs departed from the original Reynolds plan by admitting ladies to membership.

The bolters acknowledged their indebtedness to the W. C. T. Unions with the deepest feelings of gratitude; have not a word of fault to find with other departments of temperance work; do not criticise any form of pledge used that compels total abstinence. All they ask is the privilege of holding a reunion of their own peculiar organization whenever and wherever they see fit. This right they propose to maintain.

Yours respectfully,
CHAS. S. PARKER.

Great Spring Blessing!

DR. BLISS' CATARRH BITTERS. This is the best Spring medicine you can take. It will remove that all-gone feeling you have, for it puts new vigor into the blood, thoroughly cleansing and purifying it, thus striking at the very root of the troubles to which so many are subject in the SPRING TIME, such as CATARRH, HUMORS, SORES, LIVER TROUBLES, &c., all of which come from IMPURE BLOOD, or inaction of the LIVER. Some of the Herbs in these bitters are Mandrake (for the Liver), Yellow Dock, Burdock, Prickly Ash (for the Blood), Rhubarb and Boneset (for the Stomach). Then we add something that works especially in the blood for CATARRH. Large bottles, over one hundred doses, 75 cts. GEO. C. GOODWIN & CO., Boston.

For the Patriot.

The Woman Question,
AND
THE REFORM CLUB CONVENTION.

Henry Wilson wrote of Anti-slavery: "Its history is full of lessons of warning and instruction, that cannot be wisely or safely ignored or forgotten." More than forty years ago, when Abby Kelly, now Mrs. Foster, and Sarah and Angelina Grimke began to lecture in favor of anti-slavery, the General Association of Massachusetts Clergymen, acting under the influence of Drs. Adams, Blagden and others, issued the famous "Pastoral Letter," which gave the churches to understand that the time "had come for pastors to take a positive stand against encroachment on their office," and that there was danger at that time "of women assuming the place and attitude of men as public reformers and itinerating lecturers." Two years after this, thirteen ministers seceded from the Norfolk Anti-slavery Society when the chairman decided (sustained by a majority vote,) that the constitution admitted women as members with equal privileges with men.

And now within a few weeks, no less than three women have been admitted to lecture on different subjects in Orthodox pulpits in towns which were then in Norfolk County.

About the time of the above mentioned meeting, a large number of the clergy and others withdrew from the Massachusetts Anti-slavery Society, and formed the "Massachusetts Abolition Society," no women being admitted.

In a few years this society found itself getting in debt and disbanded. A few years later, another society was organized, the "Church Anti-slavery Society." We think this society was not long able to keep a single lecturer constantly in the field.

While the Massachusetts, the American, and the Pennsylvania Anti-slavery societies, which admitted women on equal terms as men, and sustained them as lecturers, kept their organizations active in the work until the Proclamation of Emancipation was issued by Abraham Lincoln; the other societies that excluded women, dwindled away, and it was difficult to tell when they held their last meeting.

We regret that the Neponset delegates were among the seceders at the recent Convention, for we think they have been very much assisted in their reform meetings by the ladies. H. W. B.

ENFORCE THE LAW. At a regular meeting of the Granite Temple of Honor of this town, held June 6, 1879, the following resolution was passed:—

Voted, That the Selectmen of the town are most respectfully asked to enforce the law against all unlicensed places where intoxicating liquors are sold, and also require those to whom licenses have been granted, to conform to the requirements of the laws bearing on that subject.

Poetry.

Mother's Way.

Oft within our little cottage,
As the shadows gently fall,
While the sunlight touches softly,
One sweet face upon the wall,
Do we gather close together,
And in hushed and tender tone,
Ask each other's full forgiveness
For the wrong that each has done.
Should you wonder why this custom
At the ending of the day,
Eye and voice would quickly answer,
"It was once our mother's way!"

If our home be bright and cheery,
If it hold a welcome true,
Opening wide its door of greeting
To the many—not the few;
If we share our Father's bounty
With the needy day by day,
'Tis because our hearts remember
This was ever mother's way.

Sometimes when our hearts grow weary,
Or our task seems very long,
When our burdens look too heavy,
And we deem the right all wrong,
Then we gain a new, fresh courage,
As we rise to proudly say,
"Let us do our duty bravely—
This was our dear mother's way."

Thus we keep her memory precious,
While we never cease to pray
That at last when lengthening shadows
Mark the evening of life's day,
They may find us waiting calmly
To go home our mother's way.

Agricultural, &c.

Budding.

New varieties of plants and trees may be propagated by budding, which is, in fact, a kind of grafting. Some trees do not take grafts kindly; the stone fruits particularly so; and these are usually budded. To bud a tree a slit is made in the bark in the desired place, of the shape of a T. A dormant or new bud is cut from a tree, the bark and a thin slice of the underwood being taken at the axil of a leaf, where a new bud is found. The piece of bark cut off with the bud is trimmed to fit the upper cut of the T exactly, and to lie smoothly under the other part of the bark, which is loosened by being raised with a blunt, smooth instrument. The bud with the shield of bark is slipped under the loosened bark of the stock, which is bound by a figure of 8 bandage of bass-wood bark or linen. That is all. The barks unite, and the inserted bud grows and becomes attached to the wood of the stock just as with a graft. Budding may be done from this time until September. New York Times.

To Protect Animals from Flies.

The plague of flies has come down from historic times, and re-appears annually. These pests are nearly everywhere. They worry the horses in the fields, deprive them of rest at night, and keep them stamping so violently in the stable, that to sleep with an open window if the house is not far off, is nearly impossible; they trouble the cows, and render the milking laborious, and in the house they are intolerable. They most abound in filthy places, and where the scent of decaying matter invites them. Attention to cleanliness would mitigate their attacks upon horses in the field and stable. Washing the sweat from animals, plentiful use of water and plaster in the stables, or diluted carbolic acid scattered about, and darkened windows, will drive them out of stables. A linen or cotton covering for the horse when at work, will save him and the driver from annoyance. A clean darkened stable for the cows, will have but few flies.—American Agriculturalist.

☞ The second beet sugar factory in New England is being built at Northampton, Mass., and over 300 acres of beets are growing in the neighborhood for its use. Good beets, closely worked, will yield about ten per cent. of sugar, and it is thought that with improved machinery twelve or fourteen per cent. may be realized.

CABBAGES. Set out for late crop. They need rich soil, and must be kept clean and watched for worms. Catch the white butterflies early in the morning, when they are slow in moving.

Anecdotes.

"Well you'll own she's got a pretty foot won't you?"

"Yes, I'll grant you that, but then it never made half as much of an impression on me as the old man's."

"Clara, did poor little Carlo have a pink ribbon round his neck when you lost him?"

"Yes, yes, the poor little dear; have you seen him?"

"No, not exactly, but here is a piece of pink ribbon in the sausage."

Visitor:—"Can I see Dr. Jones?"

Servant:—No, sir—he's not at home, sir!"

Visitor:—"Could I see—er—his deputy?"

Servant:—"Please, sir, you'd better wait till master comes home, as I don't know where it is, and he don't like his things meddled with?"

Mrs. Dipper (to Jonesy, who is deeply in arrears for board):—"Mr. Jonesy, won't you step into the parlor for a moment? I wish to speak with you."

Jonesy:—"Really, Mrs. Dipper, I should like to accommodate you; but what will the boarders say at seeing us alone? Think of the scandals going through the papers, madam. Oh! no; excuse me."

Two young attorneys were wrangling for a long time before a Judge in Virginia, over a point of law. His Honor rendered his decision, and the sprig who had lost imprudently remarked:—

"Your Honor, there is a growing opinion that all the fools are not dead yet."

"Certainly," said the Court with unruffled good humor. "I quite agree with you, Mr. B——, and congratulate you upon your healthy appearance."

Quincy, Jan. 5.

If you feel dull drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR OR MEDICINE.

The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the World! AN EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen. Regulate the Liver and prevent CHILLS AND FEVER MALARIOUS FEVERS, BOWEL COMPLAINTS, RESTLESSNESS, JAUNDICE AND NAUSEA.

TAKE SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

BAD BREATH.

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath, and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be so easily corrected if you will take Simmons' Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your Appetite, Complexion, and General Health.

PILES!

How many suffer torture day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering from Piles. Yet relief is ready to the hand of almost any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR, is no drastic violent purge; but a gentle assistant to nature.

CONSTIPATION!

SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulation from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

Thoughts on the Lord's Supper.

BY REV. F. C. BAKER.

"This do in remembrance of me."—Luke XXII, 19.

I've gathered round thy table Lord;
But have I dwelt upon thy word?
And have I really felt and thought,
The blessings it to me has brought?

I've drank the consecrated wine;
But did I think of thee, the Vine?
And pray my heart and life might be
More closely grafted into thee?

The broken bread I've eaten too;
But did I then thy body view?
And realize that it for me,
Was bruised on the accursed tree?

O Lord I pray thee bless to me,
This feast that I have had with thee,
And may thy love so freely given,
Still draw me nearer Thee and Heaven.

Newry, Maine, July 28, 1879.

Receipts, Wit, &c.

ROCHESTER JELLY CAKE. Two cups sugar, two-thirds of a cup of butter, three cups flour, three eggs, one cup sweet milk, one teaspoonful cream tartar, one teaspoonful soda mixed with the milk. Put two-thirds of the above mixture in two oblong pans, and to the remainder add one tablespoonful of molasses, one of flour, one cup of raisins, one cup of currants, a little citron, one teaspoonful of clove, allspice and cinnamon, and a little nutmeg. Put it together when warm, with jelly, and press it together.

COTTAGE BREAD. One quart of flour, one large spoonful of sugar, one of butter, one egg, one teacup of yeast; put to rise and bake as biscuits.

☞ To perfume clothes, take cloves in coarse powder, one ounce; cassia, one ounce; lavender flowers, one ounce.—Mix and put them into little bags, and place them where the clothes are kept, or wrap the clothes around them. They will keep off insects.

☞ Clothes moths are always worse in the summer than at any other time of the year. But there is nothing the moths have such an aversion to as brown paper. It is said that if furs, or any kind of clothing be carefully sealed in it, moths will never attack them.

☞ "Mamma, is the ridicule very bad to have?" "What do you mean, Georgie?" "Why, mamma, Rosy Green says Dora Dow was exposed to it three weeks ago, and it's high time it broke out!"

☞ "Did you ever know such a mechanical genius as my son?" said an old lady. "He has made a fiddle out of his own head, and he has wood enough for another."

SETTLED. "Landlady," said he, "the coffee is not settled." "No," she replied, "but it comes as near it as your last month's board bill does," and that man never spoke again during the meal.

☞ A paper describes a young lady with hair "as black as a raven's." The ravens weren't wearing any hair to speak of last summer, but we suppose the style has changed this year.

☞ "What are you looking for?" asked one of the widow Bedott's two daughters, who were entertaining their young fellows on the piazza rather late one night last summer, of their mother, who seemed to be hunting for something around the front door yard. "The morning papers," answered the widow. The young men left.

☞ "Mother sent me," said a little girl to a neighbor, "to ask you to come and take tea with her this evening." "Did she say at what time, my dear?" "No, ma'am; she only said she would ask you, and then the thing would be off her mind—that was all she said."

☞ Trying to do business without advertising is like winking at a pretty girl in the dark; you may know what you are doing, but nobody else does.

☞ "What are you doing there with that basin of water? Don't you know you'll wet your clean waist?" said his mother. "That's all right," said six year old, as he threw a lucifer into the water. "I'm only watching a swimming match."

A BRAVE GIRL.

"What a beautiful face!"

I spoke involuntarily, and a lovely old lady sitting near me on the broad piazza of the Clarendon, knitting some white wool, smiled as if well pleased at my outspoken admiration.

"She is indeed beautiful, and as true as she is lovely."

Then we silently watched the pair on horseback until they disappeared; but the pure, pale high-bred face with the dark eyes filled with love-light as they gazed upon the proud, manly figure of her escort, remained fixed in my memory. I instinctively felt that I had seen a woman who would dare, and I longed to know more of that life which I was sure had been no common one.

"Do you know the young lady?" I asked of the tiny, silver-haired lady by my side.

I had arrived in Saratoga but the night before, and had risen early this lovely June morning, and had been rewarded by the sight of that perfect face.

"Very well. Her mother was my dearest friend." And while the pair of whom I have spoken pursued their way to the Lake, I sat and listened to as sweet and tender a love-story as it has ever been my lot to hear.

"Yes, Elaine is very beautiful; very like her mother when she married lawyer Foster. He was a stern husband, and mourned little when his wife died, leaving the little Elaine to his care. I do not think he ever loved the child, but he was proud of her beauty. Three months of every year he allowed her to spend with me, in accordance with her dying mother's wish.

"In my large, breezy house in the country, the little girl spent the summer months in a perfect abandonment of delight at her escape from the sombre restraints of her father's in the city. Having no children of our own, my husband and I loved her as if she had been our very own.

"Three years ago, shortly after Elaine's coming to us, I was seized with a low nervous fever. My darling hung over my bed with all the loving anxiety of a daughter. Dr. Ray, a young physician, who had been settled in our village for about two years, came to see me every day. I might have known that there could be but one result to unrestrained daily intercourse between two young people so fitted to each other in all respects save of wealth; but my illness, I suppose, made me careless of anything except my own suffering.

"One evening in the latter part of August when I was sufficiently recovered to sit in my easy chair, I had been watching the sunset, and must have fallen into a little doze, when I heard my darling come quickly into my room, felt her throw her arms about my waist and drop her head in my lap, murmuring, "So happy! so happy!"

"What is it, dear heart?" I said, smoothing her golden hair.

"Then the answer came, which I, in my illness and blindness, had never suspected.

"Auntie, Philip loves me, and I am the happiest girl in the world!"

"I sat a moment, unable to speak. Then at last I faltered:

"O Elaine! Your father!"

"The girl shrank back frightened for the moment from her happy dreaming. Then the divine hopefulness of youth and love asserted itself, and she replied:

"Dr. Ray will go to New York and speak to father, shortly after I go back; and when he sees Philip and knows how we love each other, he cannot refuse to make us happy.

"The following week my little girl went back (she never called it "going home," 'twas simply "going back." She came home in June, she used to say) and a few days after Dr. Ray also left for New York.

"Then came a heart-broken letter from my darling. Her father had laughed at Philip's love for her; ridiculed his poverty, and told him to make a fortune before he aspired to Elaine's hand. At the close of the interview the Judge had said:

"Young man, don't let me hear from you again on this subject for two years, and see that you hold no communication with Elaine during that time. Then, if you still think you love each other, and you have made enough to support a wife respectably, I will hear what you have to say."

"With this they were obliged to be content."

"Then Philip Ray came to me. His eyes glistened, and his hand was feverish. He was altogether unlike his old self. He was going away. He couldn't make money fast enough there, and money he must have, or he could never see his darling again. He would go West."

"The next two summers were lonely ones to me. Judge Foster would not let my little girl come home. He said I had deceived him. Perhaps I had, but I did not mean to do so. Elaine wrote often. Sometimes the letters were hopeful; more often they were sad with the weariness of hope deferred. Occasional mention was made of a certain Dilkes Ramsey, a gentleman whom her father had taken into partnership. Mr. Ramsey, she wrote was very polite to her, but she did not fancy him: She didn't want to drive with him; she didn't care to see his beautiful home. But her father seemed to wish her to accept these attentions, and then it would not last so long, for the two years were nearly over."

"September came, and with it a wild, piteous letter from my darling. She had heard nothing from Philip. Perhaps he was dead; certainly he loved no longer, or he would come and claim her. Her father had waited until the two years were up, then told her it was his will she should marry one who loved her, and not waste her life sighing over the unfaithfulness of one who cared nothing for her. She told me she had written Mr. Ramsey a note begging him to cease persecuting her with his attentions, but that he came next day as smiling and determined as ever.

"Then she wrote again. She had ceased to rebel against fate. The marriage had been arranged for the third week in December. All she had stipulated was that I should come to her and spend the last week before the wedding in her father's house.

"I went. Though my poor girl's face lighted up with joy at seeing me, she soon fell into a listless, despondent way, sadder to see than any tears or reproaches. Once I mentioned Philip's name. She started as though she had been stung.

"Do not speak of him," she said wildly; "he does not love me—no one does!" Then more calmly, "Forgive me, aunty, dear, I am not strong, I think," and she subsided into her usual downcast state.

"The evening before the day set for the wedding, a servant entered the room where we were sitting, and handed Elaine a casket. As she slowly opened it, even I gave a cry of surprise at the sight of the rare jewels it was Dilkes Ramsey's wish his bride should be adorned with. She pushed them wearily aside.

"Strange that anyone should marry for such things," was all she said.

"The next morning as, with my old eyes blinded with tears, I had finished fastening the white veil over the still whiter brow, I attempted to clasp the necklace of brilliants about her neck. She pushed them aside with a flash of her old spirit, and said bitterly:

"Don't Auntie! For another half-hour at least I am my own property."

"I said no more, and we descended to the parlors."

"As Judge Foster's eyes fell on his daughter he said sternly:

"Where are the groom's jewels?"

"Ordering them brought, he clasped them himself about his daughter's neck and arms. She submitted, listlessly."

"We had entered the church. We had taken our places before the altar. The last strains of the Wedding March had died upon our ears. The brilliant assembly was hushed as the minister began to speak.

"Dilkes Ramsey's answer 'I will,' sounded clear and firm. I raised my eyes; who was it that I saw leaning against a pillar, his sombre eyes filled with a contemptious scorn of the woman who was selling her soul before his very eyes? Elaine raised her eyes to my agitated face. Her glance followed mine. Then she did what I think no woman but a brave as well as a loving one could do. The congregation was still waiting for her answer. As she caught Philip Ray's glance a burning flush suffused her face, then died, and left her cheek as pale as marble. Her eyes lighted with a sudden resolution. Turning from the altar, she passed the wondering group of bridesmaids, and in the face of that gay crowd, went and stood before Philip Ray."

"Philip," she said, in a low, suppressed tone, "why did you not come for me?"

"Disregarding the strangeness of the proceedings in the wild hope that had sprung up within him, he answered, hurriedly:"

"I did go to you; I wrote to you; I went to your house every day for a week, but was refused admittance. This is what you sent me."

"As he spoke he took from his breast-pocket a note worn with many readings.

"There in the presence of that wondering crowd Elaine read the note. It ran thus:—

"If you have any pity for me, cease to annoy me with your presence. Do you not see that I can never love you, that my heart is another's.

ELAINE FOSTER."

"There is some mistake," she faltered; "I did not know you came. I sent this note to Dilkes Ramsey."

"A light flashed over his face. His eyes shown with love and triumph."

"Come," he said tenderly; "you are of age; let us not risk another separation!"

He took her hand in his, and together they stopped before the astonished minister. Raising her hand with a swift gesture, the diamonds fell to the floor. There was nothing theatrical in this; she had been, to outside appearance, singularly calm through the entire scene. "I felt as though they were choking me," she said to me afterwards.

"I looked around for Judge Foster. He had left the church. Ere I could recover from the fright in which this offence against all the conventionalities of life had thrown me, Philip Ray and Elaine Foster were man and wife.

"Just as the minister was closing his benediction, in rushed, white and breathless, a servant from Judge Foster's. We followed the man quickly. Even Dilkes Ramsey recovered enough from his chagrin to accompany us. As we entered the door we beheld, lying on the floor dead, Elaine's father. He had fallen dead with heart disease as he reached his own door.

Elaine and Philip never speak of his treachery; he was her father, and he is dead.

Of all that remained, Elaine received nothing. Dr. Ray had wedded a portionless bride, but I do not think either of them has ever realized it, or indeed, given a thought to the matter. House, furniture, horses, plate, everything was mortgaged to Dilkes Ramsey.

Philip and his bride came to live with us, and Dr. Ray is still our village doctor. They came with me here to spend a few days because a poor, foolish, old woman could not bear them out of her sight for many hours at a time.

Whenever I think of that eventful day, and see again my darling in her trailing white robes, with those hundreds of curious eyes bent upon her, I am tempted to exclaim: "Dear heart how could you face those people?"

Her answer is, "Say rather, Auntie, how could I hesitate with two lives at stake."

"But, dear," I urged, "suppose Philip had ceased to love you?"

Then she answers, "I should have been free from that odious marriage, for Mr. Ramsey would never have married me after that. But I did not run so great a risk after all; the moment his eyes met mine, my heart told me that he still loved me."

Think a Moment, Boys.

Boys do a great many thoughtless and foolish things "for fun," that mortify them very much in the remembrance. To have been caught in somebody's melon patch, or stealing a neighbor's choice fruit, or taking a gate off its hinges, or crawling under a showman's tent, or playing any kind of a trick to the injury of another, and that has to be accomplished in a sneaking way, won't seem very smart if you ever grow to be a man of sense. You will hate it, and wonder that you ever have thought it sharp.

Don't flatter yourself that the worst thing about a mean act is in being caught at it or found out. You can't be low, or vicious, or tricky, without somebody knowing it, and it does not take long for a good many to find it out. It takes extraordinary talent and deception to have a good reputation concealing a bad character, and it is never worth trying for. The way to seem to be trustworthy is to be trustworthy. There was never yet a boy who was manly, honest, and worthy of confidence, that people did not find him out and give him his due.

You can't afford to trifle with your reputation. If you descend to indecent or immoral conduct, it will spoil your character and hurt your prospects, no matter what your friends may do for you, or how you may try to conceal from good people that you do these things. Just so long as you allow yourself to practice the habits that are condemned by pure, upright, straight-forward people of integrity—whether you do it openly or on the sly you will make no progress in the formation of a fine character, or in building a good reputation. So when you are tempted to any low, tricky, dishonest, mean or unworthy act, stop long enough to think what the effect is going to be upon your own soul, your own mind, your own reputation, and if that is your strongest motive, don't do it.

A Denver Horse Trade.

An honest miner sat in a contemplative mood before the door of a saloon in one of the thoroughfares of Denver.—He had "taken sugar in his'n" several times, and now cast a wistful look at intervals toward unprospected regions in the foot-hill, where he hoped to strike a tellurum lead, now that "the placer-diggin's was played out." Slowly down the street came a "solitary horseman," ill-mounted, poorly clad, meagrely equipped, and stopped in front of the sitter.

"Stranger," said he, "I want to sell yer a horse."

"Stranger," was the reply, "I don't want him."

"Stranger," rejoined the wayfarer, "yer reely must buy him. Yer never see a better horse for the price."

"What is the price, stranger," asked the contemplative man.

"One hundred and fifty dollars, and dirt cheap at that."

The inquirer meditated a few moments and then blandly remarked, "Stranger, I'll give yer five."

The stranger dismounted, saying with eagerness, "Stranger, I won't allow one hundred and forty-five dollars to stand between you and me and a trade. The horse is yours."

Remedy for Hoarseness.

Horseradish will afford instantaneous relief in most obstinate cases of hoarseness. The root, of course, possesses the most virtue, though the leaves are good till they dry, when they lose their strength. The root is best when green. The person who will use it freely just before beginning to speak will not be troubled with hoarseness.

Ammonia.

For medicinal purposes, ammonia is almost unrivalled. For the headache it is a most desirable stimulant, and frequently inhaling of its pungent odors will often entirely remove a catarrhal cold. There is no better remedy for heart-burn and dyspepsia, and the aromatic spirits of ammonia is especially prepared for these troubles, and ten drops of it in a wine-glass of water are a great relief. The spirits of ammonia can be taken in the same way, but it is not palatable. In addition to all these uses, the effects of ammonia on vegetation are beneficial. If you desire roses, geraniums, fuschias, etc., to become more flourishing, you can try it upon them by adding five or six drops of it to every pint of warm water that you give them, but don't repeat the dose oftener than once in every five or six days, lest you stimulate them too highly. Rain water is impregnated with ammonia, and thus it refreshes and vivifies vegetable life.—So be sure and keep a large bottle of it in the house, and have a glass stopper for it, as it is very evanescent and also injurious to corks, eating them away.

A Business Boy.

One of the orange sellers on the Campus Martius yesterday found a bad specimen among his fruit and carelessly tossed it away. It struck an old woman in the eye, and she made such a fuss over the accident that the man gave her a dozen good oranges to go her way in peace. She had scarcely left, when a sharp looking boy about twelve years of age slid up to the fruit seller and said:

"Say, are you going to hit any more old women to-day?"

"Why no—not if I can help it," was the reply.

"If you are, give me a chance," continued the lad. I'll bring my mother down here and you may hit her in both eyes for half the oranges you gave that other woman, and if that isn't fair you can have a shot at dad and me."—Detroit Free Press.

Water Contaminated by Sewage.

No one could doubt the great importance to the health of families, of a proper disposal of town and house sewage, who had opportunities of becoming acquainted with the character of well and spring waters brought to chemists for examination. It is certain that waters are used in hundreds of families in the cities and towns of this country, which contain the germs of some of the most distressing and fatal diseases. Waters have been brought to us for chemical examination, during the past year, which were found to be loaded with impurities resulting from defective sewerage, and the cause of sickness in the families was unsuspected. We have for many years persistently urged this matter upon the attention of medical gentlemen, and we again place it before them. Our journal is read by more physicians, probably, than any other published in the country, and therefore we should fail in our duty if we did not endeavor to awaken the attention of this large army of men who do battle against disease, to the agencies which cause disease.—Journal of Chemistry.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 9, 1879.

Short communications and items of news earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.

☞ Anonymous communications are not published.

A Hazardous Voyage.

Wm. Van Cott arrived at the Great Hill House, Houghs Neck, on Wednesday last, at 4 P. M., in his wonderful craft, the City of Boston.

This little boat is only 4 feet 11 1-2 inches long, 2 feet deep and 30 inches wide; it has no sails, and looks on the water like a tub with a blunt bow, above which the head and shoulders of Mr. Van Cott alone are visible.

The weight of the occupant with a few pounds of gravel, an umbrella, a two quart jug of water, and a seat made of seaweed, brings the gunwale of the boat to within a few inches of the water's edge. In this tiny craft, Mr. Van Cott left New York City, on the 2d of June last, with the agreement on the part of those who are wagering money upon him that he should row the entire distance to Boston, without limit as to time. He eats and sleeps on shore. During his stay at the Great Hill House, he was well and kindly cared for by the proprietor, Mr. James Mears.

At 11 A. M., on Thursday, he started for Boston, where he arrived about two o'clock, thus ending a long, tiresome and dangerous voyage.

During his stop at Houghs Neck, he probably answered over a thousand questions, for nearly every woman on the Neck asked him at least twenty. Several hundred people were on shore when he started, and wished him bon voyage to Boston.

Mr. Van Cott is fifty-three years old, and is used to being upon the water.

A FINE BUILDING. The old filthy buildings, in the rear of the Coddington School House have been removed. Many complaints were made last season against them; and some of our citizens believed diphtheria, which raged a little in this district was produced by the foul privies erected near the school house. These now have been removed, and a large, handsome building has been erected by Joshua D. Rollins of Wollaston, about sixty feet in the rear of the school house. It is a double house entirely separate; and the yard leading to it is divided by a high board fence. There is a large ventilator on top of the building and the roof is painted red. The vault is made of brick, and in fact everything connected with the building appears to be well done. It has cost upwards of $400. A building of this kind, used by several hundred need careful attention particularly through the summer months.

It is more essential to look after it, than even the school room, and not a day should be allowed to pass without fresh dirt, lime or some other purifying ingredient, being sprinkled into the vault. It matters little how costly a a building you erect if proper attention is not given to keep it pure and sweet.

CONCERT. Last Monday evening the guests of the Campbell House, on Squantum Heights, and a large number of visitors, were musically entertained by the full Maplewood Band of Boston, of twenty pieces. Several parties from Atlantic and the neighborhood drove over to the heights, and but for a slight sprinkling of rain, the number would no doubt have been larger. The Maplewood musicians were in full uniform, and presented a very fine appearance. Their playing was in excellent time and extremely spirited. The parlors of the Campbell House were gay with dancing couples, and as they were brilliantly lighted the scene was most inspiriting. Landlord Campbell prepared a handsome supper for his guests and visitors at the close of the evening. The band, after first serenading Mr. G. F. Burkhardt, at his well-known residence on the crown of the hill, paid a late flying visit to the Jenkins House, at Atlantic, where landlord S. W. Jenkins welcomed them. After playing a few selections they departed with "three times three, and one cheer more," for Boston.

GREATLY IMPROVED. The house owned by Mrs. M. E. Green, on Hancock street, has been enlarged and the entire premises greatly improved, the present season. The worked was planned and done by Mr. Henry G. Pratt, and we know of no person in this vicinity who is more capable or competent to model an old building or plan and build a new one, and give perfect satisfaction. The grounds around the house have been graded and the place presents a very pleasant appearance.

ALMOST A FIRE. Last week, Friday, smoke was seen issuing from a window in the large three-story wooden building, on the corner of Phipps and Water streets, built by Mr. Thomas Hayes, and occupied by some five or six families.—Mr. George Cahill, who lives near by, entered the building and discovered a feather bed on fire, which he immediately threw out the window. But for the promptness of Mr. Cahill, a large fire might have taken place, as the buildings are very closely packed. Damage slight. Cause unknown.

IMPROVEMENTS. The beautiful residence of Edwin B. Pratt, Esq., on Hancock street, has for a number of weeks been undergoing improvements. The main house has been enlarged by a westerly L, while large piazzas grace the front and sides. The upper portion of the house has had some fashionable touches, more for style, probably, than beauty.

BEING MOVED. The large barn at the head of Canal street, owned and occupied by William A. Hodges, was moved from its foundation into the street on Thursday. The rain yesterday prevented its further progress. Mr. Henry H. Faxon has bought it and will place it on the land adjoining the bakehouse.

☞ "Billy Smith," who was recently elected Captain of the Tiger Engine Company, was discharged on Monday evening, and Thos Williams was chosen to fill the vacancy. The engineers held a meeting on Tuesday evening and decided the Company had acted hastily, and not according to the by-laws of the Company, and therefor decided that Smith was Captain.

☞ A large amount of labor is to be laid out on Granite street this season in straightening and widening the same. Workmen are now engaged in filling in the hollow in the street on the east side of Veazie's hill to the depth of two or more feet, with rough granite blocks, which are to be covered with gravel. The grade at this hill after the work is completed, wiil be very easy of ascent.

Wollaston Items.

O, temperature! O, mosquitoes! Where shall comfort be found? This is the language of some who have tried "a cottage by the sea," White Mountain breezes and "Adirondack Midgets." All, come back to these Heights to rest. Mosquitoes who feed on the poor badgered mortals below, are usually too fat to rise to our bed-chambers, so we rest without screens.

John Sherman's resumption and contraction policy is producing a marked effect on business all around here. The juvenile traffickers in huckleberries and clams, say with the Boston Journal, that "there is a marked improvement." "Contraction" in the former, owing to the dry weather, is producing a decidedly healthy state in the trade. People don't overbuy.

The annual "summer grubbing" of weeds (good soil) and raking off the pebbly portion of some of our streets has commenced. Our summer company pronounce them beautiful. But Mr. Surveyor, how will this help our coal teams and our pedestrians next February and March?

Two pleasure parties have recently gone from here to try the "briny deep." No aggravating cases have been reported. A two hours' roll off Cape Ann, succeeded by an offer of a bowl of hot clams, is an awful test for the stomach. Try it, if you doubt it.

⁂

A BEAUTIFUL SIGHT. On Monday evening last, a night blooming cereus, belonging to Capt. Phineas H. Glover, who resides on Souther's Hill, opened six magnificent flowers. A number of citizens had the opportunity to see this somewhat rare sight, and enjoy the exceeding beauty and fragrance of this singular plant. The blossoms bear a resemblance to pond lilies, but are much larger.

GLASS BALL SHOOT. Merry Mount Club held a glass ball shoot at Quincy Woods, on Saturday last. We give below the score that was made by the participants:

	Single 18 yds.	Rotary 18 yds.	Double 15 yds.	Total.
Thomas Curtis,	9	9	7	25
Albert Keating,	9	7	7	23
George Curtis,	6	6	8	20
C. Cummings,	8	6	6	20
E. B. Souther,	7	3	4	14
Chas. L. Prescott,	4	7	2	13
Myron Clark,	3	6	4	13
Perez Chubbuck,	3	3	3	9

EAST MILTON. The regular weekly shoot of the East Milton sporting club took place at the East Milton range Saturday afternoon. Ten balls were thrown from a rotary trap for each man at eighteen yards distance. The score is as follows: F. Badger, 6; J. Bunton, Jr., 4; C. Prescott, 4; G. Badger, 3; G. H. Bent, 5; G. Hollis, 8; J. Smith, 6; J. Pierce, 6; H. E. Sheldon, 8.

NORMAL SCHOOL. The 40th year of the Bridgewater State Normal School will begin on Sept. 26th, when candidates will be examined.

BOAT RACES. There will be two boat races at Lovell's Grove next week, by the Costello and Shields crews. The one on the 13th will take place at 5.30 P. M.: and the other on the 16th, at 11 A. M.

☞ In the letter of a Tourjee excursionist last week we should have said the party arrived at Moville on the Irish coast instead of Morilla.

☞ The Republican State Convention will be held in Mechanics' Hall, Worcester, on Tuesday, Sept. 16th.

Summary of News.

Teledo, Ohio, estimates its receipts of wheat this season at 25,000,000 bushels.

Ohio produced 39,000 tons of butter and cheese in 1877.

East Tennessee sends a million dollars' worth of chickens to market annually.

In New York city there 102 wholesale and 4,180 retail grocers.

At Rye Beach is to be seen a carriage driven by a Chinaman and closely followed by a young pig.

It it estimated that twenty-five thousand persons visited Nantasket Beach last Sunday. The steamers of both lines were crowded, and thousand of persons went to that place in carriages.

Our Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, AUGUST 7, 1879.

Some say the Public Debt is increasing, others that it is slowly growing less. A memorandum of the financial operations of the Government has been issued lately from the Treasury, showing a reduction on the interest bearing debt from the highest point, August 31, 1865, to July 1, 1879, amounting to $583,886,594.96 and the reduction in the annual interest charge, when the present funding operations are completed (August 1st, 1879) will be $67,203,419.37 The total debt has been reduced to the sum of $729,224,315.06. The bonds refunded under acts of July 14, 1870, and January 20, 1871, will amount to $1,396,022,000, on which the annual interest charge was $81,613,487. It is too apparent that like Great Britain, our public debt is to be perpetual, unless we have wiser financiers than at the present day.

Since my last the hot weather has given an unfavorable turn to business, which may be set down as very inactive, notwithstanding the continued plethora of the money market.

Summer disease is on the increase and no wonder from the fact that large quantities of crude fruits and unhealthy food, exciting causes of disease, are daily and incautiously used or gobbled down by tons. X

Our Evening Sky.

During these days of August six planets are visible in the evening sky, though not all at the same hour. A rare opportunity is offered to the amateur astronomer or to any lover of the wonderful in nature, to notice by the aid of a glass of moderate power, with ease and with much clearness, even through the misty atmosphere of the dog-days, some of the most beautiful objects in the whole heavens.

Mercury, the smallest and nearest the sun of all the planets, the rapidly-moving body which eluded the gaze of the great astronomer Copernicus, who regretted on his death-bed having failed to see it during his life, shines soon after the beginning of the twilight, close to the western horizon, with a clear, brilliant lustre, and appears through the telescope like a half moon. Venus, queen of the evening, burns like a silver lamp until nearly nine o'clock. She is now slowly approaching the sun, assuming the form of a crescent, and has nearly attained her greatest brilliancy, as she comes nearer us in her sweep westward. Uranus, the far-away wanderer, almost on the uttermost verge of our solar group swinging slowly around the vast pathway which, with its six moons, it is eighty-four years in traversing, shines dimly a little nearer the horizon, setting not long after eight o'clock. Jupiter, the mightiest of the planets, shows to the glass of moderate power his broad belts and four starlike companions, circling around his huge globe in perpetual change of position. He rises towards nine o'clock, a brilliant object in the east. Saturn follows about ten with his magnificent telescopic vision of rings and moons, shining with a clear, white radiance. And Mars, the fiery representative of the ancient god of war, comes lastly with his lurid light, about eleven o'clock, accompanied by his single minute satellite, visible only to the most powerful instruments.

The last three are really morning stars but should be observed with the others as including, without considering Uranus, all that were anciently considered as belonging to the system over which the sun presides.

REUNION. The Association of the Thirty-second Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers, held its annual meeting and reunion at Downer Landing, Wednesday, some 150 comrades, and nearly as many ladies and children, composing the party.

Mr. Freeman Field of Charlestown, who is perhaps the oldest man in Massachusetts who saw active service in the war, was in the party. He is seventy-six years of age and served all through the Rebellion as a musician. Though fifty-eight years old when he enlisted first, he was always up with the youngest in the performance of duty, and consequently was a great favorite in the three regiments in which he served.

They left Boston at 9.15 A. M., and on their way down the harbor, made a stop at Fort Warren, where they were politely welcomed by the commandant and shown over the works. On arriving at Melville Garden its facilities for amusements were freely drawn upon until the hour for dinner. After this repast had been served and eaten the business meeting was held, with the following results: President,—Capt. C. C. Bumpus of Quincy; Vice Presidents,—Dr. W. Lyman Faxon of Quincy, Hosea Hyde of Newton, Dr. Z. Adams of Framingham; Secretary and Treasurer,—Capt. E. F. Phinney of South Framingham; Executive Committee,—Gen. James A. Cunningham, Col. I. F. Kingsbury, Maj. T. McCartney, Sergeant T. H. Pike and Sergeant C. E. Rahr.

TALL OATS. Mr. Geo. W. B. Taylor of Wollaston, showed us one day this week some handsome oats that stood 4 1-2 feet high; also herd grass of the same height. For an amateur farmer it is certainly very creditable, as it gives evidence of high cultivation, which is one of the sure roads to successful farming.

FOUND. Last June Mr. Henry Newcomb, the tax collector of Holbrook, and one of the most respected citizens of the place, was reported missing, and as a defaulter. Last Wednesday he was found in an insane condition, and his insanity has probably been growing since the death of his wife, over a year ago. It is said that he has enough money to make good all the deficiency in his accounts and to pay all his debts. Last winter, it is reported, he would spend whole days wandering around his wife's grave and the places where he had been with her, neglecting his business and even his food and sleep.

PERSONAL. Mr. Jesse Bunton, of East Milton, for many years a smart, active, business man, is now quite feeble.

Letter from Newport.

AUGUST 5th, 1879.

DEAR PATRIOT:—As a letter from a famous watering place within three hours ride on the railroad from Quincy may have some interest for your readers, I send you a short account of some of the attractions and amusements of the city of Newport.

In the first place, Newport consists of two distinct portions; the business portion of the city, with narrow streets and houses all huddled together, and the fashionable quarter, which contains the summer residences, and is entirely deserted during the winter. Most of the handsome villas are situated on Bellevue avenue, a fine street which extends in a straight line for more than two miles, and then is continued for several miles further along the shore of the sea by a road which is known as the "Ocean Drive." The avenue is the fashionable place for driving, and in the afternoon between five and seven o'clock presents a very gay appearance, as it is alive with turnouts of every description.

There is certainly no street in America which can present such an array of handsome country-houses. Some are of brick or granite, and present more the appearance of castles than of villas. Nearly every place has a lawn in front of it, some of them very extensive ones. These lawns are kept in beautiful order by the constant use of mowing machines, and seem more like velvet than grass.

To the south of the avenue, extending along the edge of the ocean, are "the Cliffs," along which runs a walk, from which a fine view can be had of the waves as they come in from the broad Atlantic and break upon the rocks. On Sunday afternoons a large number of people walk here, as very few drive on that day.

Not the least among the attractions of Newport is its climate. A day which is oppressively warm is quite a rarity here, and even then the evenings are always cool. The air is deliciously soft and moist, owing to the vicinity of the Gulf Stream. Very often the sky is overcast during the whole day, thus affording a pleasant shelter from the heat of the sun.

Among the chief amusements here are boating and bathing. The harbor is nearly always smooth and there are numberless points of attraction within easy distance on the shores of Narragansett Bay. There is plenty of good fishing a short distance off for those who are fond of that sport.

The bathing beach is about half a mile from the Ocean House, the principal hotel, and is a fine long stretch of sand where the surf comes directly in from the sea. Those who have never enjoyed surf-bathing have no idea what fun and excitement there is in it. The water is never uncomfortably cold, as it is at many of the resorts on the Massachusetts coast, and yet a bath is just as exhilarating and refreshing.

Newport is undoubtedly an expensive place to spend the summer, but some prices are very reasonable. A bath at the beach costs fifteen cents; good catboats can be hired for twenty-five cents an hour, and carriages can be found everywhere which will take you anywhere within the limits of the compact part of the city for twenty-five cents. Not a bad showing, certainly, for such a fashionable resort as Newport. X.

MELONS. This delicious fruit, when perfectly ripe, is now very plenty. To decide when watermelons are ripe, press upon them with the hands. If ripe they will yield, and give out a slight cracking sound. Muskmelons are at perfection when the stem will cleave from the fruit.

The farm barn of Mr. J. W. Brooks on Milton hill was entered Friday night of last week, and a valuable pup stolen. A reward of ten dollars has been offered for the pup, and $100 for the conviction of the thief.

DISTRICT COURT. The following criminal cases have been disposed of this week, before the District Court held in this town:—

Peter Welsh, of Quincy, for keeping a liquor nuisance. After hearing numerous witnesses he was discharged for want of evidence.

Montough Lyons, of Quincy, for an assault on John H. Gardner. The complainant acknowledging satisfaction, the defendant was discharged on payment of cost.

Robert Curran, of East Weymouth, being drunk. Fined $3 and costs.

Letter from Neponset.

FRIDAY MORNING, AUG. 8.

A fire was discovered in the baggage room of the Old Colony depot, at Neponset, last evening about sunset. The cause of the fire is unknown. The fire department was promptly on hand. The damage is estimated at $150.

Miss Emery, of Atlantic, mentioned as the first lady in Quincy, who had registered as a voter, has for many years been a successful teacher in the Minot school of Neponset; and no doubt fully realizes the importance of women taking an interest in voting for competent school committee. B.

THE PRESS EXCURSION—V.

In our last letter, week before last, we endeavored to give the readers some idea, at least, of coal mining, as we saw it in Pennsylvania. There are a few facts, connected with mining, which we did not have room for at that time, and will give them now.

Coal mines are not of necessity located in the woods, nor far from cities or villages. The one we visited was on good, smooth, clear land, with houses near by, and a pretty village within a mile, and a city of 40,000 within five miles. The miners as a class are composed of Welsh, Swedes and Irish. Many are quite intelligent, and taken as a whole, they compare favorably with workmen of a similar class in different states.

Coal companies are required by law to have two openings to each mine; one by the elevator, which we mentioned in our last article, the other by an incline plain. By the latter opening the mules are driven into the mines, and are there used in drawing the cars to and from the elevator. There are stables in the mines where the mules are fed and lodged; and sometimes are kept for months without seeing daylight. The inclined path or road into Pyne mine is 800 feet, while by the elevator it is 300.

After leaving the mine the party took the cars for Scranton, and dined at the Wyoming House, and soon after left for Delaware Water Gap, one of the most delightful places in this country, and much visited by citizens of Philadelphia and New York.

Before leaving Scranton, however, we must say a few words about this remarkable city and its people. In 1853, it had a population of 3000; about one-half as many as Quincy had at that time; now it numbers over 40,000. No city in the Middle or Eastern States has grown so rapidly; and only a few of the western cities can compare with it. Good order, however, is maintained, and only a small police force, fifteen men, including the chief, are employed.

Underlying this region is what is known as the Northern Anthracite Coal Field, comprising 198 square miles, or 126,720 acres of this valuable deposit, which is variously estimated to contain from 50,000 to 100,000 tons to the acre. These enormous figures are conclusive evidence of the stability and the development of the future, as this great resource would appear to be almost inexhaustible, and for all practical purposes of calculation the career of development has only just begun.

The Press Excursionists are indebted to Hon. Lewis Pughe, President of the Board of Trade, and others, for the many courtesies shown them while in the city.

On leaving Scranton we went direct to Delaware Water Gap, where we left for good, the new and beautiful cars furnished us by Gen. Burt, which had accompanied us so far on our journey. At the depot we found omnibuses and carriages ready to convey us to the Water Gap House. It is kept by L. W. Brodhead, a gentleman who delights in pleasing his guests. The hotel is built on the top of Sunset mountain, 400 feet above the river, which offers a grand view for miles around, and has cool and invigorating breezes. The hotel grounds are beautifully laid out. The woods between Water Gap House and Mount Minsi, one to two miles in extent, have shady paths, which have been made at a cost of from $1000 to $2000; which tempt visitors to the cliffs, ridges, grottoes, ravines, cataracts and dells within its borders. Columns might easily be written of the pleasures this beautiful spot offers to tourists, but enough, we think, has been said to induce those who have time, money and a convenient opportunity, to visit this cool and delightful spot.

The party stopped at this haven of rest from Saturday until Monday noon, —a longer time than they had at any other place, still they left with reluctance; although homeward was the course. After a pleasant ride of four hours the party arrived in New York City, and after an hour's visit in Gotham, started for Boston, by one of the palatial boats on the Fall River line. An excellent supper was served on board the steamer and the sail through the Sound was delightful.

The excursion as a whole was one of the pleasantest and most attractive of any ever taken by the Press Association, and many thanks are due President Horton, of the Salem Gazette, and all others who helped contribute to the enjoyment of the trip.

Letter from Worcester Co.

"Crows Nest," Dana, Aug. 6th.

To the Publishers of the Patriot:—

We left Quincy, on Monday morning last, and, on arriving in Boston, took the 11 o'clock express for Worcester, arriving about 12. Having a few hours to spare, we took a look around the city.—At ten minutes of 4 o'clock, we started on the Boston, Gardner & Barre road for Hubbardston, and from thence by stage to Barre, where we arrived at about 6 1-2 o'clock and remained over night.—The next morning we started for the "Crows Nest," at Dana; procuring a team for our use during our stay. We had a nice ride of about seven miles, and arrived at the Nest about 2 o'clock. Everyone in town knew we were coming, and gave us a warm welcome. A number of the young ladies of the town called to see the young ladies of our party, and arrangements have been made for a dance next Friday evening, at which thirteen couple are already engaged to be present, and we intend to have a regular old-fashioned kitchen dance. Our first meal at the Nest was more relishable than artistic.

In want of a table, we unshipped the front door, laid it on the grass, and spread our eatables on it. Rubber blankets and coats took the place of chairs. At about 10 o'clock we retired; and all was quiet at the Nest for the night; so ended our first day at the "Crows Nest."

Fishing, gunning and other sports are in anticipation for the coming week.

THE COAL REGION.

The first idea the writer can remember respecting anthracite coal was associated with "Lehigh." To New England people, it is an interesting sight to witness all through this region the excavations, made by human hands, into the "bowels of the earth," in search for this fuel. And if the statistics could be known, we should probably be somewhat surprised to find what immense quantities of this mineral are transported, not only into Canada, but throughout all the Eastern, the Middle, and some of the Southern and the Western states. I have seen trains here, loaded for Canada, which I should judge to be nearly or quite the sixteenth of a mile in length. And hereabouts this article costs, for home consumption, only $3.50 per ton, which is probably somewhat below what you will have to pay this winter for it.

THE LEHIGH MOUNTAIN.

From this far-famed mountain I have but just descended. A custom has long prevailed among the people here, soon after harvest, in visiting two huge rocks which rise fifteen feet above the ground on the top. A thousand at one time make this ascent. Upon the summit of these rocks, upheaved in ages of the past, it affords a sublime panoramic view of all the surrounding country that comes within the range of human vision. The height is one thousand three hundred feet above the ocean. And here we see, near and far, the villages, villas, farms and fields dotted with trees and shocks of golden grain. The "blue" and other mountains are seen in the distance.

THE GERMANS.

The people, the names of the towns, the houses, the farms, the fields, all German. The chimneys, the shutters instead of green blinds; the barns built of stone, or built of wood and plastered outside; the dwelling houses built of stone, or when of wood, plastered with lime outside; the stone walls, with a wood covering on top. In their farms there is evidence of thrift and taste. Trees are set along the bounds of each, and along the highways and fences. The fields are large and perfectly smooth. Between this and Philadelphia I have seen numerous farms, tastefully laid out and symetrically set with ornamental forest and fruit trees, such as I never saw in my own New England.

I have long had a high estimate of the German element in our population, and easily perceive how its progressive tendencies promise well for the American idea of human government.

MINES AND FURNACES.

In this county there are twenty iron furnaces, all of which are now "in full blast." All through this part of the State there is an immense amount of this industry done. But it would swell this letter beyond my limits to undertake details of this business.

THE MORAVIANS.

When, fifty years ago, I was myself a theologian, I became familiar with the history of this sect. They have two churches here, and yesterday my friend, Dr. John A. Helffrich, took me to see one of their burial grounds. It covers an acre, and the smooth, wide paths run north and south. The graves are square and raised eight inches above the surface, the feet to the east. Instead of a head or foot-stone, there is placed nearly flat, in the centre, a square stone or marble slab, lettered with the name and date. Some of the dates I noticed extend back to the early part of the seventeenth century. Some of the slabs (the oldest) were not a foot square. Each grave is constantly attended to and kept square in due form. Monuments for the dead, I suppose, are put up by the well known laws of association, which predominate in the human mind. Hence the Quakers seem to me to follow the analogies of nature, by burying their dead indiscriminately, without monuments.

Letter from New York.

The weather and the death record. Vigilance of the Health Department. Summer resorts.—Religious services. An aged journalist.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 6th, 1879.

During the past week or two, this part of the country has suffered from a Torrid wave of unusual severity. For a few days however, the weather has been tolerable, and the number of sunstrokes has been small. Two or three cases of yellow fever have occurred at quarantine and the sanitary authorities are exercising great care in the examination of vessels and merchandise coming from suspected ports. Several drowning accidents have occurred in this vicinity lately One of the saddest was the death of the Rev. Dr. John Graham, of London, who was seized with cramps while bathing, soon after his arrival in New York city

The sultry city weather has occasioned a grand rush to the watering places.—Many prefer to spend their vacation near home, and the suburban resorts are numerous and very popular. Within two years, Coney Island has grown wonderfully in public favor, and promises to eclipse Long Branch and Newport. A daily paper states that, "at Manhattan and Brighton beaches at least 1000 applications for rooms and suites of rooms, received by telegraph and otherwise, were refused" last Saturday. On Sunday it was estimated that more than 80,000 visited the Island.

A majority of the city clergymen are absent from their charges, and many have gone for a tour in Europe. The churches are supplied mostly from out of town, and a few will be closed during August for repairs. The Rev. Dr. John Hall, Wm. M. Taylor, E. S. Porter, T. DeWitt Talmage, R. S. Steele and Prof. E. P. Thwing are among those traveling in Europe. Dr. Cuyler will recreate as usual at Saratoga, and Dr. Scudder at Shelter Island. Mr. Beecher spends the summer at the White Mountains. Special Sunday trains bring him large audiences at the Twin Mountain House. While many are there resting themselves and their religion, others are making special efforts, as in Dr. Tyng's Gospel Tent, N. Y., and at the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. Pavilion.

Last week Mr. Alexander Brady, an aged and well-known printer died at his residence after a brief sickness. It has been stated that he was he oldest practical newspaper man in the country. For many years before William Cullen Bryant was editor of the Evening Post, Mr. Brady was foreman in the composing room; and when Horace Greeley first came to New York, he earned his first wages at the Post building, under Mr. Brady. The deceased though over eighty, was a well preserved man, and only a short time before his death, had retired from active life.

Poetry.

Have Been Thinking.

"A word fitly spoken how good it is!"

I've been thinking, I've been thinking,
What a glorious world were this,
Did folks mind their own business more,
And mind their neighbor's less.
For instance, you and I, my friend,
Are sadly prone to talk
Of matters that concerns us not,
And others' follies mock.

I've been thinking, if we'd begin
To mend our own affairs,
That possibly our neighbors might
Contrive to manage theirs.
We've faults enough at home to mend—
It may be so with others;
It would seem strange if it were not,
Since all mankind are brothers.

Oh! would that we had charity
For every man and woman;
Forgiveness is the mark of those
Who know to "err is human."
Then let us banish jealousy—
Let's lift our fallen brother;
And as we journey down life's road,
"Do good to one another."

Agricultural, &c.

Salt to Prevent Garget.

"O. W. W.," Sterling, Mass., writes: "A friend having a herd of cows was considerably troubled with garget. A portion of the bag would become inflamed and hard, the milk from that portion thick and ropy, and finally the inflamed portion would become useless. Four or five years ago he commenced giving to each cow, in her stall, a small handful of salt, every morning before milking, and has not had a single case of garget since he commenced the practice. He says he does not know that the salt prevents the garget, but is inclined to think it does. His cows seem to be anxious for their salt the first thing in the morning. Not long since he omitted to give the usual ration of salt before milking, and the first cow he sat down to was so uneasy that he was reminded of the neglect, and gave the cows their salt, after which there was no trouble. The reason he commenced to give the cows salt in their mangers was, because when he put salt in any receptacle where the cows had it in common, only the stronger of the herd would get any, these driving away the weaker ones, which would soon learn that the salt was not for them, and cease all attempts to get any.

PRUNING ROSES. If every one does not know, every one ought to know that now is the time to cut back the hardy Roses which have just done blooming. Perhaps, also, it is not known to every one that only in this way can a second series of flowers be obtained of any value on the so-called Hybrid Perpetual Roses.

☞ Borers' eggs are laid on the bark near roots of peach trees in early Summer, when they soon hatch, and the worms find their way into the bark. In August, they are easily found, and easily removed. Coal ashes, or anything else thrown around the trunk that will tend to protect it from the borers, may do some good, but it is much easier to destroy the insects when first hatched than to build mounds for keeping them away.

☞ All milk vessels should, in their last rinsings, have boiling water or hot superheated steam applied, as nothing short will destroy the putrefaction which is abundant in milk vessels not thoroughly cleansed.

MONEY VALUE OF ASSORTING. Let him try it with pears, early apples, or peaches, sending some packages of fruit as it runs, and the same number of which the fruit has been separated into two qualities, rejecting from the second grade all that is imperfect and absolutely poor. He will be astonished to find that there is but little difference in the returns from his second quality and the unassorted parcels, while the returns from the first quality will show that there is no more remunerative labor than that he has given to them. Recollect that.

☞ Maine's hay crop is the greatest she has ever had.

Anecdotes.

Grandma. "Yes, children, when I was young as you are I used to walk in my sleep."

Tommy, (eagerly) "Say grandma, what time did you make?"

"Why is the sun masculine?"

"Cos sons allus is."

"And the moon feminine?"

"Cos it's so changing."

"This bill is soiled," said a lady to a butcher's boy who had presented "this bill" for the fifth time.

"Yes, marm," replied the lad, "boss thought he would grease it to make it go easy with you.

Sympathetic sister, "Don't be so cross, Billy. What's the matter with you?"

Billy, "Why, Tommy Stubs has got the measles, and I ain't."

Sympathetic sister, "Never mind, there'll be plenty of measles left when he's done with 'em; be a good boy, and mind all that Sunday school teachers tell you, and perhaps you will have 'em, too some day."

Teacher to little boy, "Well, my boy, do you know your tables?"

Pupil, "Yes, ma'am; breafast table, dinner table, and supper table." The boy goes to the head of the holiday class.

"You want a flogging—that's what you want," said a parent to an unruly son.

"I know it, dad, but, I'll try to get along without," said the independent hopeful.

An old bachelor, who particularly hated literary women, asked an authoress if she could throw any light on kissing.

"I could," said she, looking archly at him; "but I think it's better in the dark."

The Horse Problem.

Last May we published in the PATRIOT, the following problem:—

A sells B a horse for $90. Soon after he buys it back for $80 and then sells it for $100 to C. How much money did A make as the result of both transactions? Of course the answer is plain enough if you stop to think, but some say $20 and some $30.

We have received the following answers; the latter one we consider correct:—

1st,—A sold his horse to B for $90.—Soon bought it back for $80. We will say he gained $10 by this trade; add his gain to his $90, and he has $100. He sells to C for $100, neither gaining or losing. Result,—He gains $10 by both transactions.

2d,—A sells his horse to B for $90. He buys him back again for $80. The result of his two trades is, that he has his horse and $10, being a gain of $10.—He sells his horse to C for $100. As a result of his three trades he has in hand $110, and no horse. Supposing that the first sale was at the true value of the horse, $90, A has made the difference between $110 with which he winds up, and the $90 horse with which he began, being a gain of $20.

C. W. GEORGE, PROPRIETOR.

If you feel dull drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR OR MEDICINE.

The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the World!

AN EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen.

Regulate the Liver and prevent.

CHILLS AND FEVER MALARIOUS FEVERS, BOWEL COMPLAINTS, RESTLESSNESS, JAUNDICE AND NAUSEA.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

BAD BREATH.

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath, and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be so easily corrected if you will take Simmons' Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your Appetite, Complexion, and General Health.

PILES!

How many suffer torture day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering from Piles. Yet relief is ready to the hand of almost any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR, is no drastic violent purge; but a gentle assistant to nature.

CONSTIPATION!

SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulation from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

A Silent Hour.

BY DR. Ç. A. MCFOSSIL.

Closed was the page of the busy day,
In a silence deep as death,
The Goddess of night breathed on the hour
Her cool and fragrant breath;
Like diamonds dropped from Angel wings,
Fluttering on pinions bright,
In a silver rain the dew-drops came,
Baptizing the holy night;
Rising and falling through the night,
Came a restful melody,
I seemed to hear ringing sweet and clear,
The plash of the Jaspar Sea.

The voiceless song of the long ago,
Singing of joy and of tears;
Swinging its air castle to and fro,
Sweet echoes of vanished years;
It came like old time minstrelsy,
A sad and solemn lay
A presence was there we feel in the air,
When the spirit leaves the clay;
Like a cadence of heavenly music,
Like a Dreamland symphony,
It seemed not a song as it floated along,
But the throb of the Jaspar Sea.

Deeper and deeper the darkness grew,
A holy calm was there,
My soul went up to the mercy seat,
On the pure white wings of prayer;
A spirit guest from the land of rest,
Kept a vigil there with me,
Breathing a balm o'er the holy calm,
Of blessing and purity;
And I know in the golden hereafter,
Where the many mansions be,
I shall hear again the sweet refrain,
On the shores of the Jaspar Sea.

Receipts, Wit, &c.

LEMON MINCE PIE. Squeeze out the juice from a large lemon; boil the outside till sufficiently tender to beat to a mash; add to it three large apples (chopped), and four ounces of suet, half a pound of currants, four ounces of sugar; put in the juice of the lemon, and add candied fruit, the same as for other pies. Make a short crust and fill the patty-pans in the usual manner.

☞ A Brooklyn clergyman, who is very fond of dogs, bought a couple of pups of rare breed, and left them with a dog fancier to train. On returning home one day, he found his wife abetted by her mother, preparing to quit the house and apply for a divorce, on the ground of the following telegram from the dog fancier:—"The little darlings are doing well, and looking lovely. Send money for their board."

☞ "I never yet heard a woman much abused that I was not inclined to think the better of her, and to transfer my suspicion or dislike to the person who appeared to take delight in pointing out the defects of a fellow-creature.

☞ The class in Natural History were being put through the facings, and to show their knowledge the pedagogue went a little aside from the text-book and asked where down came from. There was an awful pause for a few minutes, which was finally broken by a little four-foot-nothing with, "They get it in the ground." "In the ground! How's that?" "Why down in a coal mine, sir."

☞ "Are the Smiths back?" inquired Mrs. Stayby, who hasn't been out of town this season. "Yes'm," replied the cook, "and Mrs. Gaby got home from Conway last week." "Then Mary, you may open the front shutters and let it be known that we've got back too."

☞ If Noah had forseeen the future, and killed the two mosquitoes which took refuge in the ark, he would have rendered some of the strongest words in the English language unnecessary.

☞ "Why, Jennie, you look good enough to eat," said a loving husband to his wife one morning at breakfast. "Well, I'm eating as fast as I can, ain't I?"

☞ The cry of the chiropodist—"I came, I saw, I corn-cured."

☞ Female compositors are continually setting their CAPS for the editor.

☞ "This," thought a boy while being trounced by his fond papa, "is very like a whale."

☞ The misery felt by the child who couldn't go to the picnic, is nothing to that of the one who has been to it.

"Flies," remarks a facetious writer, "are excellent in their regular line of business, but to have them continually in your food, as at —— (we omit the name of a popular resort out of delicate regard to the feelings of all concerned,) becomes an annoyance. Every thing, from soup to milk, is served there with flies, and it is not optional whether you have them alive or dead. A deceased fly in milk is not bad to take, but a live fly in butter is very irritating."

☞ Talking matches are very popular in the parlor on Sunday nights.

☞ A nice little boy calls himself Compass because he is boxed so often.

☞ An Oswego man calls his wife Poor Excuse because she's better than none.

☞ Perspiration is about the only honest thing that emanates from a mean man.

☞ Willie asked his mother where the stars came from. Her reply was: "My son, I do not know." "Well, I do," he said; "the moon laid 'em."

Miscellany.

THE NEW GIRL.

"Now, Charley, you'll be sure to remember?"

"To remember—what?" said Mr. Meredith, with a hopeless expression of inanity on his countenance. Kitty Meredith dropped both hands despairingly at her sides.

"Charles!" she exclaimed, "you don't mean that you have forgotten already?"

"My dear," said Mr. Meredith, fumbling in the deeps of his overcoat pockets for a missing glove, "I may not have forgotten——but I don't seem exactly to remember?"

"The oysters!" suggested the wife.

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Meredith, "the oysters."

"And two ounces of double zephyr-scarlet wool!"

"Exactly."

"And the depot-hack to be waiting at two o'clock for your cousin from Chicago."

Mr. Meredith slapped one hand on the table.

"She is coming to-day, I declare to goodness!" he ejaculated.

"And a dozen Havana oranges for dessert and two pounds of white grapes, and some of those delicious little Naples biscuit and maccaroons, from Saltaselli's—oh, and let them send me up a girl from St. Char's!"

"A—which?"

"A girl, you goose!" For general housework. Phœbe went home this morning with the face-ache, and I can't be left alone with company coming and all. Mind she's a good cook and understands waiting at table!"

And Mr. Meredith rushed off to catch the nine-thirty express with a kaleidoscopic confusion of grapes, zephyr wool, depot-hacks, oysters, and servant-maids careering through his brain, which boded ill for Mrs. Meredith's domestic plans.

While that lady, clasping both hands over her forehead, in a sort of tragic despair, rushed down into the kitchen, where a very good-looking young man of some two or three-and-twenty was on his knees in front of the range, trying to coax a most unwilling fire to burn. The good-looking young man glanced up with a comical sparkle in his eyes, and a smear of soot traversing the bridge of his nose.

"Well?" said he.

"Tom," said Mrs. Meredith, hysterically, "can you make a lobster salad?"

"Like a book!" said Tom.

"And coffee.

"I learned in Paris!"

"Good," said Mrs. Meredith. "And I can make buttermilk biscuit—and, between us, we'll get up a decent lunch for the young lady from Chicago! As for dinner—"

"Well?" again remarked the young man with the soot-besmeared nose.

"Providence must provide!" sighed the matron.

"There's an old chintz-colored rooster in the barnyard," said Tom, hopefully. "If I could catch him, I'd have a chicken stew."

"Tom," said Mrs. Meredith, "did you ever make a chicken stew?"

"No."

"Then you don't know what you're talking about," said the lady, with some asperity.

"Yes, I do, too," maintained the amateur Soyer. "Onions, potatoes, celery, pearl barley, with a pinch of salt, and—"

"Nonsense!" interposed Mrs. Meredith. "Do pick that lobster out of its shell, and leave off romancing! You're a deal better at poetry and newspaper sketches than you are in the kitchen; though to be sure," with a twinge of conscience "goodness knows what I should do without you just in this particular emergency, you dear old darling."

The lobster was only half picked out of the shell, the buttermilk biscuit was still unmixed, and Mrs. Meredith, with a pocket-handkerchief tied around her pretty brown hair, was dusting the little drawing-room when there came a ring at the door-bell. She put her turbaned head out of the window after a most unceremonious fashion.

"Who's there?" she demanded, in a high contralto.

"Does Mrs. Meredith live here?" retorted a woman's voice. And at the same moment the young matron caught sight of a neat black leather bag, a black alpaca dress, and a shawl of the plainest Highland plaid.

"It's the new girl, thank Providence!" said Mrs. Meredith; and she flew down stairs, thanking honest Charley, in her heart for his unexpected promptitude. "Come in," said she, opening the door wide. "I am glad you are so punctual, my good girl. From St. Char's Intelligence Bureau, I suppose? No, don't take off your things up here—the servants' room is below stairs; you may as well come directly down into the kitchen."

She led the way down, followed by the new girl, whose countenance bore rather a bewildered expression.

"What's your name?" she asked patronizingly.

"My name? Oh, its Martha," answered the stranger, in some confusion.

"Martha?" critically repeated Mrs. Meredith. "What an ugly name! I think I shall call you Patty. Have you references?"

"I—believe so."

"I think," said Mrs. Meredith, surveying her from top to toe, "you are a little over-dressed for your station, Patty; but of course you have some plainer clothes in your trunk when it comes?"

The stranger lifted a pair of grave blue eyes to the tall form, girded around with a towel, who was vigorously wrestling with the claws of a stupendous lobster at the table beyond.

"Do you keep a man cook, ma'am," said she.

Mrs. Meredith drew herself up. "Certainly not," said she. "This is my brother, Mr. Selwyn, who is kindly assisting me to make a salad."

"But he is not doing it right," said the new girl. "He'll never get the meat out of the shell in that way. Let me show you, Mr. Selwyn."

And with deft fingers she loosened the lucious white fiber from the scarlet shell in a manner that made Mr. Selwyn cry "Bravo!"

"And now, Patty," said Mrs. Meredith, I will show you where the things are and leave you to get up a nice lunch as you can for half-past two o'clock; we are expecting my husband's cousin from Chicago, and I want everything in perfect order."

"I'll finish the salad," said Tom, who had secretly been observing the pretty face and trim figure of the new domestic, "now that I've commenced it. But you needn't look so perturbed, Patty, if that's your name. I'll be careful not to get in your way. And you can ask my sister if I'm not a handy sort of a fellow around the kitchen."

Kitty shook her head surreptitiously at Tom behind the screen; Tom resolutely affected not to perceive the warning gesture.

"Half an hour afterwards he came up to the dining-room, where Mrs. Meredith was arranging her best lilac-and-gold china.

"Kitty," said he she's a jewel! A gem of the first water! Depend upon it, she's not always worked in the kitchen! I quoted Shakespeare apropos of something or other, I don't remember what, and she recognized the grand old words at once—her eyes brightened, and you should have seen the color come into her cheeks!"

"Quoting Shakespeare!" cried out Mrs. Meredith. "To a common kitchen girl?"

"But I tell you," roundly asserted Tom, "that she's not a common kitchen girl."

"I don't believe in high life below stairs," said Mrs. Kitty, disdainfully.

The lunch came up at half-past two, in perfect order, but no cousin from Chicago arrived—no depot-hack rolled up to the door.

"How provoking!" said Kitty. "Miss Meredith must have missed some essential connecting train. Charley will be so vexed! But however, I don't so much mind company coming in at any time now that I have such an excellent girl!"

The dinner of daintily-roasted quails and rabbit fricassee, with a dessert of custard and jelly, was duly served at precisely seven, at which hour Mr. Meredith himself bounced in, hot and flushed with the haste he had made.

"Where is she?" cried he.

"Where is who?" said Kitty.

"My cousin from Chicago!"

"Oh!" said Kitty. "She hasn't come!"

"Not come?"

"No!"

Mr. Meredith drew a long sigh of mingled regret and relief.

"Then, after all," said he, "Its not so unlucky?"

"What is not so unlucky?" petulantly demanded his wife. "My dear Charles, you are expressing yourself altogether in riddles."

"That I forgot all about the oysters, and the zephyr wool, and the servant girl."

"Forgot?"

"Yes—forgot. Isn't that plain English enough?"

"But you didn't forget," remonstrated Mrs. Meredith. "You sent her. She's here now in the kitchen."

Mr. Meredith started. I've sent no one," said he. "Never thought of the girl from that moment to this, I give you my word of honor!"

"Then," slowly ejaculated Kitty, "who did send her?"

"Ring the bell!" said Mr. Meredith. "Let's have her up! Who knows but she's one of those regular confidence-women, with an eye to the forks and spoons!"

And as he spoke he jerked the bell-cord with some energy.

In a minute or so the new girl came up, smiling and courtesying. Mr. Meredith uttered an exclamation of amazement.

"Why, it's Martha Meredith!" shouted he. "It's my cousin from Chicago!"

And he clasped her in his arms, with a shower of kisses which made honest Tom's hair stand on end.

("I wish she was my cousin from Chicago," uttered he, in a stage aside.)

Kitty turned as scarlet as a pepper-pod.

"Oh, good gracious!" she cried, clasping her little hands nervously, "and I took her for the cook!"

"And I am a cook—when occasion requires, Cousin Kitty!" said pretty Martha Meredith, making her peace with a kiss. "Don't be vexed with me for humoring the joke—indeed, indeed, I couldn't help it. And I'll show you how to make those meringuees glaces, and the Neapolitan creams, to-morrow!"

And they all sat happily down together to the roast quails and fricasseed rabbits—and Kitty and Martha went together to the Intelligence bureau on the morrow and established a Milesian damsel in the kitchen, who was not at all incongruous to her surroundings!

And Tom, leaning over his sister's shoulder, whispered, waggishly:

"Didn't I tell you she was a gem of the first water!"

Notes from Abroad.

BY PROFESSOR E. P. THWING.

The voyage from shore to shore was a pleasant one, occupying but ten days, and, though the north winds obliged the wearing of winter clothing, we were spared any feeling of sea-sickness, experienced by many on crossing for the first time. After signalling adieu to our friends on the wharf, Dr. Steele and myself dropped into our new surroundings on board the "Queen," as easy as if we had been wont to sail the seas, and calmly looked on the shores of America sinking below the horizon. The only incident that interrupted the pleasure of our voyage, was the suicide of a steerage passenger, unknown to all, who, having paid his passage and delivered his ticket, remained concealed for several days, and one evening leaped from the stern into the darkness and was lost.

A TOUR IN IRELAND.

After landing at Queenstown we proceeded to Cork, where we were entertained by a brother of the author of "The Bells of Shandon." In a party of twenty I visited the Lakes of Killarney, stopping on the way at Blarney Castle, where, by special favor, I saw the magic stone.

"Like a magnet, its influence such is,
Attraction it gives all it touches;
If you kiss it, they say, from that blessed day,
You may kiss whom you please with your Blarney."

At Limerick I rowed on the classic Shannon, climbed the tower of the ancient cathedral, and struck the bells of far famed sweetness, with the music of which the spirit of its maker passed away in 1559. I heard also the mellow vesper peal of the newer chimes on Mt. St. Vincent, attended the service of the Dominican monks, and rode and walked amid the wealth of old time glories and the rain and mud of the present day.

In Dublin I saw progress since my visit in 1855. "Tram cars" may now be seen in the streets; they are large arks, with an iron stairway—like a huge shairing—at either end. Here I spent my first Sabbath on shore, attending the same churches as twenty-four years ago. By invitation I assisted at the sacramental service in Dr. Eccles' Baptist Church, in the afternoon, and addressed the Y. M. C. A. in the evening. This association owns a building worth $70,000, and has a seaside home at Llandudno, in the north of Wales. Having seen much of Ireland's want and misery in other places, it seemed very pleasant to be where Protestants have a rallying ground in this association, just thirty years old.

A very pleasant excursion was that to Arklow, fifty miles south of Dublin. It was a charming supplement to my "Cook's Tour." I have long read of the picturesque beauty of and the "Sweet Vale of Avoca," immortalized by Moore's "Meeting of the Waters," and I have not been disappointed. For miles the train ran by the rocky shore, with foaming breakers on one side, and beautiful meadows, brilliant with emerald and scarlet on the other; while mountains, 3000 feet in height, ruined monasteries and castles, with other objects diversified the landscape, and added interest to a scene not soon to be forgotten.

Returning to Ireland's busy capital, I took the train for Newry; passing on the way the river Boyne and Drogheda, where, nearly two hundred years ago, was fought a bloody battle in the interest of Protestantism. At Bessbrook, July 2, I lectured to an attentive audience, on "American Life," and, at the close answered questions concerning the Chinese problem, the Negro exodus, female education, and relation of college life to teetotalism, with kindred topics of recent agitation. At Gilford I stopped a few days at the "Moyallon House," the house of the leading linen manufacturer of Ireland, Mr. J. G. Richardson. His wealth and influence are devoted to noble educational and philanthropic works. The Fourth was spent at "The Glen," Newry, where I visited the ruins of castle and abbey, and plucked a branch of yew from the parent tree near the residence of the monks, 700 years ago. My chamber was warmed by a coal fire in the grate and a hot jug in my bed. The mercury has been among the fifties, and the weather has been damp and rainy much of the time.

Can Any One Tell?

Can any one tell why men who cannot pay small bills can always find money to buy liquor, and treat when among friends?

Can any one tell why men who are always behind with their landlords, can play billiards night and day and always be ready for a game of cards when money is at stake?

Can any one tell how men live and support their families who have no income and no work, when others who are industrious are half-starved?

Can any one tell why four-fifths of young women prefer a brainless fop under a plug hat with tight pants and a short-tailed coat to a man with brains?

Can any one tell why it is that some mothers are ready to sew for the distant heathen, when their children are at home ragged and dirty?

Can any one tell how a man who is always complaining that he cannot afford to subscribe for the village newspaper, and from week to week borrows it of his neighbors, can afford to visit every entertainment given in the town hall?

For the Patriot.

A Card.

Oh, that it were in my power to make the people understand the shameful neglect and wicked cruelty I have witnessed at the many prisons, alms and work houses I have visited during the last eight years. Good people will not believe that in any part of this nation, men can be found in a stone and iron cell chained to the floor. One gill of water and a few ounces of bread allowed them each day and no more.—Who will believe that a paddle, made of wood perforated with holes so as to blister each time it strikes the flesh, is used on human beings in any part of America? What would Boston people say if they should see a human being stripped and tied up to be paddled?

Prisoners are often treated wickedly; often beaten badly, and when they resent, or resist, a one-sided investigation is had, and long unreasonable time is added to their sentence. Massachusetts has men in her State Prison to-day, serving out additional time, who would be honorably acquitted if they had been fairly dealt with. Their cries and groans are going up to God who hears, and in his own good time will answer. Oh, that the people were allowed to see the inside workings of all institutions where human beings are confined. Vengeance is mine, says many prison officers.

The people desire a change, and will have it. I find many good persons who are greatly pained at the management of many of our public institutions.

Treatment of the Sick.

The London Spectator contains an article on the use of "Stimulants in the treatment of the sick poor." It is based on a recent report from the Guardians of the London St. George's Union. It seems that in this union it was a short time since determined to try a non-alcoholic method of treatment of the sick. The opening of a large and new infirmary gave a fair chance for trying a new system. The patients in this new hospital were gradually educated in the principle that alcohol was a medicine rather than a food; and no startling result following the absence of such food even when the infirmary contained 670 people living from day to day without beer or brandy as an article of diet, and without any deterioration of health due to deprivation, established the system on a firm basis. The comparison of non-alcoholic hospital with others where stimulants are freely used is favorable. In the Poplar and Stepney sick asylum, with an average number of inmates of 450, the cost of ale, wine and spirits is nearly thirty shillings per head, and the mortality is nineteen per cent. In the St. George's union infirmary, where the expenditure for stimulants is only about three pence per head per annum, the death rate was twelve and a half per cent. It is right to say that the physicians in the later hospital do not rigidly exclude alcohol in their treatment of the sick. For example, the doctor in his report says that if a patient in the last stage of consumption, who could take or retain but little food, expressed a desire for alcohol, it would certainly be prescribed, or if a person seriously ill suffered from fatigue of removal, brandy would be given as a palatable medicine. Without taking either the alcoholic or non-alcoholic view of the question, we think the facts quoted in the Spectator's article are well worthy of attention.—Boston Globe.

Pompey's Answer.

Pompey hired himself as a laborer to a farmer who was very fond of laying out the work, so that there was always something pressing when Sunday arrived. When haytime came, he would sometimes cut down a lot of grass on Saturday that would require turning over in the morning.

One Sunday, at daybreak, he called his new servant.

"Now, Pompey, get up!"

"Don't want to get up. Sunday morning, massa."

"But you must get up and get your breakfast!"

"Don't want no breakfast, Sunday morning, massa; rather lay a-bed than have breakfast, massa."

"But get up and help shake the hay."

"Don't do work on Sundays, massa. I didn't hire out to work Sundays."

"Oh! but this is a work of necessity."

"Don't see dat, massa, at all; don't see dat; its no work of necessity."

"Well, but would you not pull your ox out of the pit on the Sabbath day?"

"Oh! yes, massa; Oh! yes; but not if I shoved him in on Saturday night!"

Robbery on Franklin Street.

The boot and shoe manufactory of Thomas Curtis & Co., on Franklin street, was entered early yesterday morning, and goods to the value of $100 were carried off. The rogues got in by a window on the first floor, and burst in the door at the head of the stairs. Constable Locke was notified soon after sunrise, and immediately went to the Quincy Adams station and took the first train for Boston. On passing through the cars he noticed two valises which attracted his attention, and he asked a person near by if they were his, and he answered in the negative. The constable passed on through the remaining cars, but seeing nothing that looked suspicious returned to the car where he saw the carpet bags. On returning he found the bags but the rogue had flown; the train was starting from the Quincy depot at that time. Constable Locke continued to Wollaston, where he had the baggage locked up. He then returned to Quincy, by Newport Avenue in hopes of seeing "his man" on the track but the thief had taken leg bail, and there are grave doubts of his being brought to the bar of justice. Fortunately for Messrs. Curtis & Co., the stolen goods were found in the valises.

This is the second time this manufactory has been broken open, but in both instances the stolen property has been recovered.

Persons visiting this town to commit robbery have not for the past year or two earned their salt; nearly every instance we can remember, the property has been recovered and the rogues lodged in jail.

The rogues in this last case carried the property to Braintree, and put it aboard the cars there, and if Constable Locke had not started on the first train, doubtful if it would have been recovered.

Surprise Party.

On Monday evening last about eighty young ladies and gentlemen from this town gave Miss Claudine Vogel a very pleasant surprise at the summer resort of her father, at Houghs Neck. After the congratulations, the enjoyment of the evening commenced, consisting of singing, dancing, etc., which was heartily indulged in by those present. About 12 o'clock the surprisers were notified that supper was in readiness and to which justice was done. Everyone was heard to exclaim, when the first dish was brought on, "Ain't these ham sandwiches good!" "Who made them?" and if they had known who the manufacturer was, either male or female, they would have received a vote of thanks from the guests. After satisfying the wants of the inner man, the enjoyment was continued until the wee hours of morning, at which time the surprisers bade the surprised an affectionate adieu, and hoping life would be as pleasant to her as that evening had been to them.

The music was furnished by Messrs. Elliott and Fuller.

VALUATION. The Assessors of Quincy have so far completed their labors as to be able to give us the following figures:—

Total valuation for 1879,	$7,280,155
Personal estate,	1,758,635
Real estate,	5,521,520
Loss on valuation from 1878,	167,335
Loss on real estate from 1878,	218,680
Gain on personal est. from 1878,	51,345
Rate of taxation for 1879,	13.20
Rate of taxation for 1878,	9.00
Number of houses,	1713 1-2

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC. Wednesday was a gala day for the children of the Catholic Sunday Schools of this town. Early in the morning, large teams assembled at the different churches, and the children to the number of about seven hundred were conveyed to Lovell's Grove. On arriving the children soon made the place ring with their merry shouts and laughter. Base ball, bathing, boating, dancing and other amusements were indulged in, and about one o'clock the children were gathered in the large hall in the grove, and supplied with a feast of good things.

The most attractive event of the day was the boat race between the famous General Shields and Costello crews for a silver cup valued at $50, which took place shortly before six o'clock, and was won by the latter. It was a three mile race, and the time for the Costello crew was 22 minutes; Shields, 22 minutes, 15 seconds. The referee and starter was Mr. Charles H. Porter; timekeeper, P. H. Gavin; judges at stakeboat, William Reagan and James Malone. The same crews will row the decisive races in the series on Saturday next, at the same place.

After the boat race the teams were quickly filled up, and soon the happy children were rapidly driven home. It was one of the most successful picnics ever held by the society.

LIFE BOAT. We are pleased to learn that the Massachusetts Humane Society has furnished for our coast a life boat, and through the exertions of William H. Mears, a suitable building has been erected at Quincy Great Hill for the storing of the same. Still we are sorry to know that Mr. Mears has been obliged to put his hands into his own pocket to be able to pay for the labor on this building,—only about three-fourths of the amount required has been subscribed. It really appears as if the time and labor spent by Mr. Mears on this humane object is his share; and that we ought to have gentlemen and ladies enough in Quincy, abundantly able to give a few dollars to help along a noble object like this. The cost of the building is $100.

☞ The question at Leadville, Colorado, is not how to get rich but how to get home. Warren, knew how to do it.

Local Items.

☞ There are 1510 single poll tax payers in Quincy.

☞ If you want a good five cent cigar try Veazie's Best. They are immense.

☞ John C. Randall and family have gone to Maine for a few days' recreation

☞ A neat girl is wanted to do general housework.

☞ A grand parade and trial of the Quincy Fire Department, will occur sometime in September.

☞ Edwin W. Baxter and family are enjoying a pleasant visit at Steven's Plains, Deering, Maine.

☞ Warren D. Higgins has raised the frame of Mr. W. A. Hodges' new house on Hancock street, this week.

☞ Miss Mary A. French is spending a few weeks very pleasantly in Maine.

☞ Mr. Patrick Buckley is having erected a new blacksmith shop near the West Quincy depot.

☞ Mrs. William A. Hodges and her son and daughter are visiting at Petersham.

☞ Joseph W. Lombard sells at auction on Wednesday next, house, stable and land on North street.

☞ George Rose, the Quincy Post Office clerk, has been to the White Mountains this week.

☞ We are sorry to learn that our esteemed physician, Dr. Joseph Underwood, is on the sick list.

☞ Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Clapp have been enjoying themselves the past week in Marshfield.

☞ The Merry Mount Shooting Club will try their skill at a glass ball shoot this afternoon at Quincy Woods.

☞ Mr. Frank Jacobs of the Boston Branch store has been enjoying himself at the sea-shore the past week.

☞ A party of ladies and gentlemen from the west part of the town paid a visit to the Ridge Hill Farm, Wellesley, on Saturday last.

☞ Messrs. Thomas & Owens have recently erected a new stone shed opposite the one now occupied by them on Granite street.

☞ Delegates from St. John's and St. Mary's Temperance Societies attended a reunion at Rockland on Friday of last week.

☞ A party of ladies from the west part of the town enjoyed a pleasant time on Friday last, at Elmwood Cottage, Rock Island.

☞ W. M. French Hose Company had a grand clam-bake at Mears' at Houghs neck, yesterday afternoon. The day was delightful, and a good number turned out to enjoy the occasion.

☞ Last Monday, Mr. John Cavanaugh brought the large barn which he was removing last week, to its stopping place on land of Mr. H. H. Faxon, quite near the bakehouse.

☞ A handsome barge drawn by six horses furnished by Joseph T. French, carried twenty granite contractors on Thursday to Kimball's hotel, at Pleasant beach, Cohasset.

☞ Among the entries for O'Leary's seventy-five hours' walk, at Providence, we noticed the name of James Bailie, a young man of the west part of the town.

☞ Many wells in various parts of the town are dry; rain water cisterns are empty and many bitter complaints are being offered to the Clerk of the Weather. What can Old Prob do to help our citizens out of their dilemma?

☞ The W. M. French Hose Company and a few guests were pleasantly entertained on Friday evening, by Mr. Richard Newcomb, Jr., and his new bride, at their father's residence, on Washington street.

☞ A new freight traffic, at reduced rates, on the Old Colony road went into effect on the 1st instant. Some of our citizens, who do a large freight business by this road, will be pleased to learn of the reduction.

☞ It continues very dry. The vegetables, the garden, the lawn are all suffering severely. We have had scarcely enough rain at any time for the past four weeks to lay the dust, and it has been extremely hot during that time.

☞ A grand union picnic of the Catholic Total Abstinence Societies of Holbrook, Weymouth, Braintree and Quincy, is held at Lovell's Grove to-day. Three bands of music have been engaged to enliven the occasion.

☞ A dozen or more of our citizens enjoyed a fine sail to Provincetown on Tuesday, on board the Empire State.—Another lot went on Wednesday, on the same steamer, to the Isle of Shoals, and had a delightful time.

☞ Soon after noon, on Wednesday, flames were discovered issuing from a small wooden building in the rear of John Q. Adams' block on Hancock street. Fortunately they had gained but little headway when discovered, and a few buckets of water did good service.

☞ The Dedham Transcript says,—"Mr. Geo. W. Penniman, of Quincy, addressed the Temperance League last Wednesday evening, in the Baptist Church, Sharon. His address was to the point and well received. He is an earnest speaker, and eloquent in delivery.

☞ The patent medicine team of J. H. Zeilin & Co., of Philadelphia, attracted considerable attention on Thursday last, as it stood in front of the Robertson House. The carriage resembled an old-fashioned chaise body on immense wheels. The horse was a splendid animal.

☞ Quincy has been fortunate in her selection of Superintendent of Almshouse. Mr. Ordway is a perfect gentleman in his manners, and everything around the town farm is looking in a flourishing condition. He is ably assisted by his wife, who possesses a tender heart, and is respected and loved by the inmates of the home over which she presides.

☞ We received yesterday an interesting private letter from Mr. Alonzo Furnald, a Quincy boy located in Central City, Colorado, and the owner of some good mines in that State. We shall not be surprised one of these days to shake hands with a millionaire.

☞ St. Paul's Lodge is beginning to receive the good effect of the revival of business. The attendance since the new board of officers were installed last month has been on the increase, and the best of feeling prevails. Many of the old brothers, who have been absent for months, are coming in, and their smiling faces even make the "goat" more frisky than ever.

Taxation.

The following is the rate of taxation on a thousand in many of the towns in this County, for 1879:

Milton,	$7.50	Brookline,	$12.60
Cohasset,	7.50	Quincy.	13.20
Medfield,	8.00	Medway,	14.00
Braintree,	9.60	Stoughton,	14.00
Dedham,	10.00	Holbrook,	14.00
Foxboro,	11.50	Hyde Park,	15.20

In Nahant it is $5.00 on a thousand, which is probably the lowest in the State. In Boston it is $12.50; Newton, $13.40.

It will be noticed that the rate in Quincy is higher than in most of the towns in the County. While Milton and Cohasset are the lowest. Still we think our citizens will not grumble if they know the money is well expended. One-third of the whole amount to be raised, goes for support of our schools, which are a credit to the town and an honor to the State.

Then our highways are costly. Ten to fifteen thousand dollars are used each year in keeping our streets and bridges in repair and in building new ones. Still we have the satisfaction of knowing that but a few, if any towns in the County can boast of better streets.

About ten thousand more goes each year to make our poor comfortable, but who will begrudge this, or say that it is not needed.

Then five to ten thousand dollars are expended to protect us from the ravages of fire. This is a necessity which we cannot do without, and as the money seems to be well expended by a careful Board of Engineers, and our losses by fire quite small, we see but little chance for grumbling on this score. Still, there are many who honestly think that most of this money is wasted, as it only benefits the Insurance Companies. But what should we do without our efficient fire department? Fifty to seventy thousand dollars would have been destroyed at the Post Office fire last year, if it had not been for the department, when really the loss was but a few hundred. The year before another big fire would have raged in the Square, when the court room was on fire, if it had not been for our firemen. The loss this year so far has been very small,—probably less then $2000.

ATLANTIC HOUSE. The following jovial party from New York, is registered at the Atlantic House, North Quincy:—Mr. George Foster, of the Pacific Mail S. S. Co; Mr. Jas. Buchan, Jr., son of the wealthy soap manufacturer, whose magnificent country seat at Westchester is so well known to New Yorkers; Mr. Wm. B. Duncan, architect, of London, connected with the extensive art firm of Messrs. Cottier & Co.; Mr. Gibbons Foster, of the Metropolitan Elevated railroad; Mr. Wm. J. Underwood, Jr., attorney, confrere of Judge Birdseye; Dr. S. H. Neergaard, son of New York's eminent chemist; Mr. Wm. M. Wright, champion amateur velocipede rider, and S. Conant Foster—the last named having come east to visit his lady love and drink clam water. These gentlemen indignantly deny the current report that they have come our way to witness the peregrination of Mr. Moseley's new watering cart, and assert their sole purpose is to get a sniff of salt air and partake of the substantials of Mr. Moseley's table. We wish them joy.

SPEAR PICNIC. The annual gathering of the Spear family was held on Wednesday, at Downer Landing. About one hundred persons were present and of that number, fifteen were among those who were at the first gathering, nearly fifty years ago.

It was voted to hold their next picnic at Houghs Neck,—Samuel S. Spear was chosen President and Charles Breck and Edward A. Adams Vice-Presidents. E. A. Spear, 2d, was chosen Secretary. The Committee for three years are Samuel H. Spear, Mrs. Charles L. Pierce and Mrs. Warren Veazie. Treasurer, Miss Lucretia Pierce.

☞ The Braintree Observer says:—"The Old Colony Railroad Company are constructing a track starting at a point on the track which was built some time ago from the Braintree depot to West Quincy. The purpose of the track is to reach a large gravel bed, comprising twenty acres, which the company bought from Caleb S. Hollis, and for which they paid $4,000. The depth of the deposits is said to be forty feet, and of the best quality. The length of the track is about a mile."

SHIPPING. Arrived at the Point, Aug. 8th, Schooner Nellie Brown, Capt. L. I. Young, from Philadelphia, with white ash coal to D. Howard Bills.

Sailed, Aug. 11th, Schooner Plymouth Rock, Capt. Barker, for New York, with granite from Granite Railway Company and others.

Arrived, Aug. 13th, Schooner Hector, Capt. Daniel Higgins, from Philadelphia, with Lehigh Valley Franklin coal to Cyrus Patch, and bringing as passengers Misses Dorcas C. Higgins and Ella G. Higgins of this town.

GOOD TIME. About one hundred members and friends of the Granite Club sat down to an excellent supper in Granite Hall on Thursday evening last which was highly enjoyed. The repast consisted of cold meats, clam chowder, etc, and after justice was done to the eatables, the evening was spent in singing, games, &c., until a late hour, when the party departed for their homes highly pleased with the evening's festivites.

The Quincy Y. C. Regatta.

The third championship regatta of the Quincy Yacht Club occurred Saturday afternoon off Quincy Great Hill. The Muriel and the Dandelion had already won the season championship, in the first and third classes, respectively, and in the second class the Elf and Wildfire had each won a race. In the second championship regatta the Thisbe led the Elf 1m. 30s. actual time, but, as their corrected time figured precisely the same, neither yacht was given the second prize in that race, and Saturday's contest settled the award. The yachts got away very late, owing to the light breeze, and the consequent "wait" for it to freshen.

The first prize in the first class is to be presented by Mr. John Quincy Adams, and the first prize in the third class by Vice-Com. W. H. Nicholson. The second prize in the first class was a set of silver salt cellars, and the Thisbe took the second prize in the second championship race by her victory on Saturday—a gold compass charm. In the third class the second prize was a silver pitcher.

Visit to Wellesley.

A merry party from the Neck and Point visited Wellesley on Wednesday. As the ladies predominated, they took the precaution to take with them a spear, not knowing what they might have to encounter while going through the grotto in Baker's Garden.

It was a delightful day, and the long ride took all the heaviness out of the lunch baskets; in fact, though they were so full in the morning, in the evening there was not enough left to have "fed-er-hen."

After seeing all there was to be seen, and enjoying everything, about four o'clock the new(s)comes "Prepare to start;" then "Home Again" was struck up. We could have done little in the line of music on our way home if we had not had our barry-tone; as it was everything passed off well, and it was a happy day for all who were so fortunate as to be of the party. ONE OF THEM.

Braintree.

The Butcher Boy engine has been taken to Boston. New brakes are to be put on in place of those broken at the late trial at Danvers. The Butcher Boys have wisely determined to use the prize won at that trial in putting their machine in such order that they may be ready for any general fireman's muster, and make their record in the future correspond with that of the past. The fire engine known as the Spigot is to be used in case of fire, whilst the Butcher Boy is being repaired.

On Wednesday afternoon the Butcher Boys attended the funeral of Mr. Patrick McMannus, one of their number; a young man much respected by all who knew him. He had attended a meeting of the company on Monday evening, and at 11 o'clock on the same evening died,—it is supposed of heart disease.

The Horse Problem.

To the Publishers of the Patriot:

The horse problem excites much interest in town. Permit me to dissent from the conclusion recorded in last PATRIOT.

Obviously what A makes on his trades depends upon the first cost of the horse. The only record we have of the horse costing anything is where it says, he bought the horse for $80. And as the money at the conclusion of the trades in his pocket was $110 it seems to me the true answer, is a profit of $30. TURF.

Quincy, Aug. 9, 1879.

☞ We have received from friends this week two problems which are considered to be very difficult to figure out. One on eggs and confederate money; the other a hat and counterfeit money. Whether they will puzzle the readers of the PATRIOT as much as the horse problem, or the ride on the cars, remains to be seen. We will give one next week, and, perhaps, the other the week following. We should be pleased to receive problems from any of our readers.

NEPONSET. The efficiency of the fire department at the mill of A.T. Stearns at Neponset was put to the test last Tuesday, when a fire was discovered on the roof of the mill over the boiler. As a matter of precaution the fire alarm was rung in from box 343, but the fire was extinguished without the assistance of the steamers. The damage was about twenty-five dollars.

DISTRICT COURT. The following criminal cases have been before the Court this week:—

Elbridge G. Tirrell, Jr., of Weymouth, for being drunk. Plead guilty and fined $3 and costs.

James Gallagher, of Quincy, for being a common drunkard. For contempt of Court he was sent to Dedham for ten days and the case was continued for that time.

Barney Doonan, of Holbrook, for an assault on Gaavan P. Jordan. Plead guilty and fined $5 and costs.

John McCarty, of Weymouth, for keeping a liquor nuisance. The evidence was deemed insufficient by the Court, and the defendant was discharged.

John Collins, of Milton, for keeping a liquor nuisance. He plead guilty and the Judge believing he told the truth, fined him $50 and costs. The defendant being short of cash was taken to Dedham.

John Cahill of Randolph, for an assault in a cucumber patch. Found guilty and sentenced to the House of Correction for two months. He appealed and gave securities in the sum of $300 to prosecute his appeal.

Prominent Women of New York.

One of the most remarkable women of the city is Miss Mattie Morgan, who does the singular work of reporting the cattle market for the Times and other leading papers. This is work from which, by reason of the constant exposure, and other disagreeablenesses required, the majority of male reporters shrink—yet Miss Morgan performs it daily and does it better than her competitors of the stronger sex. Then again she goes as a paid emissary to the races at Saratoga and elsewhere, writing descriptions for influential papers which gladly employ so able a correspondent. For her duties in the city, she arrays herself in appropriate attire. A short skirt (short here has a real significance, and means a length reaching not below the ankles) of dark, durable material, devoid of female nonsense of any kind, a sacque, plain, dark hat with sometimes a veil, and you have her ordinary outfit. Note book in hand she looks the thorough business woman she is, for she fairly beats the men on their own ground, doing work especially adapted to them, so much more intelligently that they are completely distanced. Yet Miss Morgan was bred a lady, and in the evening when her day's work is ended, she is gladly welcomed by a limited circle of refined families to whom she has brought letters of introduction, on her coming here some years ago, and who value her companionship, listening with pleasure to her conversation varied by experience of the world, combined with native wit.

She is of Irish extraction; the daughter of an Irish country gentleman. During her father's life time her chief amusement was to follow the hounds in those spirited chases, some idea of which may be derived from Scott's account of the exploits of Diana Vernon. After her father's death, the property devolved upon the eldest son, and refusing to lead a life of dependant idleness, Miss Morgan came to New York to try her fortune; bringing letters of introduction to some of the best families. Previously, however, so great is her knowledge of horses, she had been employed by Victor Emanuel, King of Italy, to choose some of his most valued hunters, and so well did she execute the commission that some handsome decorations were bestowed upon her by her royal employer, to say nothing of an elegant watch and chain presented as a mark of his especial esteem. These of course she preserves with care, regarding them as some of her most precious possessions. Yet strange to say Miss Morgan expresses herself emphatically as "down on woman's rights"; thus being all the more singular as she herself is a striking illustration of the fact that a woman may enter successfully a field of labor hitherto monopolized by men and drive them out by her superior qualifications for the work.

Another remarkable woman living here is Miss Susan King, who started in life with a fortune consisting of a round 0, has by intelligent speculations in real estate amassed a large fortune which she liberally dispenses for the advancement of relations not so fortunate as as herself. Then as a shining light stands forth Dr. Mary Putnam Jacobi, whose ideas in medicine are gladly listened to by the most eminent physicians of this place. Everybody has heard of the Drs. Elizabeth and Emily Blackwell, and of all three of these distinguished women, I may send you some future anecdotes and personal description.

FIRE COMPANIES. The Advance says "the Actives of North Weymouth entertained the Vultures of Quincy at their house last Monday night with a fine chowder. The engine was taken from the house to the reservoir at the corner of Athens and Sea streets, a distance of about three hundred feet, laid two hundred and fifty feet of hose, and got water through the same in two minutes and thirty seconds. After trying the machine a few times, the two companies and invited guests returned to the house and sat down to one of Jim's best chowders which we venture to say was thoroughly enjoyed by those present."

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, D. C., AUG. 12.

From the latest reports received here as to the political prospect in Maine, I select two expressions of opinion. Senator Blaine says, Davis, Republican candidate for Governor, will receive 70,000 votes, electing him. Congressman Ladd, Greenback Democrat, who is especially familiar with affairs in the Eastern section of the State, writes under date of the 8th, that there will be considerable gains from last year on the part of the opposition to the Republican ticket.—Last year the Republican candidate failed by several thousands of an election by the people.

The same variety of reports comes from usually well-informed gentlemen in Ohio, as to the prospect in that State. How much of this, in either case, represents the real belief of these prophets, and how much their hopes, the reader may determine for himself.

The chief of the bureau of statistics reports that there arrived at the port of New York during the month of July, 1879, 16,432 passengers, 12,710 of whom were emigrants. During the corresponding period of 1878, the total number of passengers arrived at the port was 12,650, of whom 8,689 were immigrants. The revival of business in many parts of the country, of which there is no doubt, and great business depression in Europe, will no doubt further increase the tide of emigration, and also bring us a superior class of emigrants.

There were 34 new cases, and 6 deaths from yellow fever at Memphis yesterday. The disease continues spreading in all quarters of the city, and is nearly equally divided between the white and colored inhabitants remaining. It is stated that the executive committee of the sanitary council of the Mississippi Valley will meet the members of the National Board of Health at Cairo, Ill., Friday, to consider measures to prevent the spread of the fever outside of Memphis. But it is spreading, and to an alarming extent in various sections.

All the members of the Cabinet except Sec'y Sherman, are now away. He leaves in a few days for Ohio. The President remains here and probably will not leave before the 1st of September.

One of the greatest enterprises of the world is that of constructing a suspension bridge across the East River, between New York and Brooklyn which has no parallel in any similar structure in the world. Your correspondent has just been kindly furnished by one of its Engineers with a detailed description of it, from which we note a few facts which will give an idea of the immensity of this stupendous work. The total length of the bridge is 5,989 feet; width of bridge, 85 feet; length of river span, 1,595 feet; length of each land span, 930 feet; length of Brooklyn approach, 931 feet; length of New York approach, 1,562 feet; length of each single wire in cables, 3,578 feet; height of towers above roadway, 159 feet; depth of tower foundation below high water, 78 feet. The construction was commenced Jan. 2d, 1870, and will probably be completed in 1880, and its total cost exclusive of land will be $9,000,000. MERRILL.

BY WILLIAM S. PATTEE, M. D.

"This well-printed volume is an important contribution to the local history of our State, and adds one to a class of books which can hardly be too numerous—those preserving the details of local history, in which posterity is said to delight. Every department has been well and patiently prepared, special attention having been given to its industrial history, the accounts of its stone quarrying, iron and glass works being very full. The volume is creditably illustrated, and has a good index."

MILTON. The weekly glass ball shoot of the East Milton sporting club took place Saturday evening at the East Milton shooting range. Each man shot at ten balls thrown from a rotary trap at eighteen yards, with the following result:—T. Hollis, 8; F. Badger, 8; G. H. Bent, 7; J. G. Smith, 7; G. Badger, 6; A. R. Gardner, 6; H. E. Sheldon, 5; J. Pierce, 5.

DEDHAM. Value of real estate, for 1879, $3,527,177; personal, $1,830,611; Dedham stockholders in the Dedham National Bank, $131,890—total, $5,489,678.

Town grants, $54,895; State tax, $1,065; County tax, $4,371.63.

Number of polls, 1,569; school children, 1,115; soldiers, 729; horses, 571; cows, 902; oxen, 18; dogs, 322; no sheep; dwelling houses, 1137; acres of land taxed, 12,403 1-2.

Amount of exempt property, $112,029. Amount of public property in town, $46,500. Number of steam boilers, 21, with an aggregate of 850 horse power. Rate, $10 per thousand. The town is free from debt.

HINGHAM WATER COMPANY. The first meeting of the Hingham Water Company was held on Saturday evening last. Hon. John D. Long was chosen temporary chairman, and Starkes Whiton, secretary. The first business done was to accept the act of the Legislature incorporating the company, and the capital stock was placed at $80,000. A committee was chosen to draft a code of by-laws, nominate a list of officers, and solicit subscriptions of stock, and report at an adjourned meeting. It was stated at the meeting that about $65,000 of the capital stock had already been taken.

ANOTHER DEFALCATION. Walter Paine, 3d, treasurer of the American Linen Mills, Fall River, is a defaulter to the amount of over $100,000. The large mills in Fall River seem to be institutions where treasurers go largely into speculation, and the poor short-sighted mortals are sure to come to grief.

Letter from New York.

Camp meetings and other religious services.—Rapid transit. Coal for the poor. The "Benedict." Immigration of foreigners. The Southern scourge.

BROOKLYN, AUG. 14, 1879.

Out door services are now in order. A large number of camp meetings are being held throughout the State, and are well attended. Church and Sabbath School workers are greatly refreshed and enlivened by such gatherings and return with new ideas and willing hands for the duties of fall and winter. The N. Y. City Young Men's Christian Association holds five open air services each Sabbath afternoon in various parts of the city. In Brooklyn the Association of young men have several meetings each week at the Gospel Pavilion, near Prospect Park. The song services and temperance meetings are equally attractive.

A benevolent merchant in New York has purchased a large quantity of coal which he proposes to deliver during the coming winter to the poor in small amounts at whole sale prices. Heretofore those who bought in small quantities have been obliged by retail dealers to pay exorbitant prices. If the plan of the gentleman is successful, he may retail other necessities in a similar way.

The "non-explosive steam motors" have been successfully used by the Third Avenue Horse Railroad Company. The engines are under perfect control, and a high rate of speed may be obtained even in a crowded thoroughfare. No accidents have occurred, and the neighbors appear to be well satisfied with the experiment. The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Companies are doing but little at present, though much is expected for the future.

A handsome Home for Bachelors is being completed in Washington Square. The exterior is handsome and its apartments are to be elegantly furnished. The edifice will be called the "Benedict," and many of the rooms and studios have been already engaged for unmarried journalists, teachers and artists.

A large number of foreigners are continually arriving at this port and many proceed to western territory. On Monday last, six hundred and thirty-five immigrants arrived from London, Liverpool, Glasgow and Antwerp, and during July nearly 1100 landed from foreign countries.

The plague in the South continues unabated. Thirty to forty new cases are reported at Memphis every day and many are fatal. But I will not enlarge, the daily papers contain particulars and my postal card is full. CLARE.

Our Boston Correspondence.

Growing Correspondence of the Patriot. Auspicious Omen. The Right of Women to Vote for School Committee. A Reform in School Expenditures needed. Retrenchment demanded.

AUGUST 14th, 1879

The Quincy PATRIOT of last Saturday was unusually interesting to its patrons, containing letters of correspondence from five different places, embracing much information and many good ideas. We earnestly hope these letter writers will continue their effusions, which we venture to say will be received with much gratification by the thousand readers of your valuable hebdomadal. Keep on brother and sister correspondents in your good work to the columns of the Quincy PATRIOT. The prosperity of the leading newspapers of our country is much indebted to their letter writers.

An act of our Legislature passed April 16th, 1879, is the subject of much comment at the present time, giving women the right to vote for members of the School Committee. We are glad of its passage and hope it will be practically carried out. The first section of the Act reads thus :—

"Every woman who is a citizen of this Commonwealth, of 21 years of age and upwards, and has the educational qualifications required by the twentieth article of the amendments to the Constitution, excepting paupers and persons under guardianship, who shall have resided in this Commonwealth one year, and within the city or town in which she claims the right to vote, six months next preceding any meeting of its citizens either in wards or general meeting for municipal purposes, and who shall have paid by herself or her parent or guardian, a State or County tax which within two years next preceding such meeting has been assessed upon her in any city or town, shall have a right to vote at any such town or city meeting for members of School Committees."

This must be attended to on or before the 15th of September next, giving notice in writing to the assessors of any city or town, accompanied by satisfactory evidence that she was on the first day of May of that year an inhabitant thereof, and that she desires to pay a poll tax, and furnish under oath a list of her estate both personal and real.—Walk up ladies and get your names on the voting lists in season.

It is in the power of the cities or towns to appoint a separate day for the election of School Committees, but it must be held in the same month of the annual town meeting or municipal election.

While in many cities and towns a wholesome retrenchment in school appropriations has lately been adopted, in many places, (not excepting Quincy) they remain undiminished, as the tax bills of 1879 will soon develop ; a reform is needed. X.

TREMONT TEMPLE IN RUINS. About half past ten o'clock on Thursday evening fire was discovered in the large building on Tremont street Boston, known as Tremont Temple. The immense height of the building and the tall structures surrounding it, made it impossible to subdue the flames and the Temple with its contents was left a mass of smouldering ruins. The loss is estimated at over $150,000, on which there were insurances of $100,000, divided among twenty-eight offices. The Quincy Mutual and the Dorchester Mutual offices had each an insurance of $5000 on the building.

☛ The Rev. Ada C. Bowles, of the First Universalist Church, in San Francisco, married a pair the other day, and was the first woman to do so on the Pacific coast.

HARPER'S. Harper's Magazine for September presents many striking novelties, and in excellence of illustration is superior to even the August Number. In fiction, this Magazine is now remarkable for its three serial novels by Miss Mulock, William Black and R. D. Blackmore. The editorial departments are full of interesting matter. In the Editor's Drawer is a very amusing burlesque operetta, entitled "Il Jacobi," by Mrs. E. T. Corbett, with six illustrations. For sale at Souther's periodical store.

THE RURAL NEW-YORKER. Our readers interested in farm or garden are invited to send for the Fair Number of the Rural New-Yorker, (78 Duane St., N. Y.) which will be mailed to them without charge Aug. 30th, 1879. This number will have twenty-four pages and a substantial cover, many original engravings, and articles by the best writers in the land. The special feature, however, will be the announcement of the Rural's great free seed distribution which is claimed to be worth more than the subscription price of the paper.

Poetry.

Hot Weather.

Too hot to read, too hot to write,
Too hot to even be polite;
Too hot to sew, too hot to knit,
Too hot to be "mosquito bit;"
Too hot to sleep, too hot to wake,
And far too hot to brew or bake;
Too hot to think, too hot to talk,
Too hot to ride, too hot to walk;
Too hot to lecture or to preach,
Too hot to scold, too hot to teach;
Too hot for mantle, veil or glove,
Too hot to dream of making love;
Too hot to laugh, too hot to cry,
Too hot to live, too hot to die;
Too hot to whistle and to sing,
And oh! too hot for anything!

Agricultural, &c.

Soapsuds and Shade Trees.

To a question from "S.," Addison Co., Vt., asking our opinion as to the propriety of feeding soapsuds from the wash room to cows, we should say unhesitatingly it is both a filthy and dangerous practice. Cows which are not properly fed and cared for, may acquire a morbid appetite so they will drink almost any kind of dirty, filthy water. Sink water containing salt, may, if exposed to cattle needing salt, get them into filthy habits. Better give them their salt pure, than force them to drink kitchen slops to obtain it

Recent investigations tend to prove that the seeds or germs of typhoid fevers and other diseases, may be carried from the kitchen or wash room, through the bodies of cows and returned in the milk to again develop in the human family.—Much of the trouble experienced by cheese makers is caused by the milk coming to the factory in a tainted condition. And this tainted condition is produced by allowing cows in hot, dry weather to drink poison, stagnant water. If we would have pure, wholesome milk from our cows, we should provide them with pure water and good, clean food.—They should also be kept cool and comfortable, should be protected from the hot sun by sheds or shade trees if running at pasture. Shade trees, where already growing in pastures, should by all means be protected.—Mass. Ploughman.

Lightning Rod Pedlars. We hear of the lightning rodders in all directions; it reminds us of the old negro song:—

> "Some come in June, some in July,
> But August brings de Blue-tailed-Fly."

but the species of the genus Humbug, known as the Lightning (rod) Bug, knows not months. It comes with the early showers of April and buzzes about, stinging when it gets a chance, until frost comes. We can add nothing to our advice to let these rodders and their rods alone. If lightning rods are needed there are makers of skill and reputation who can supply them. A correspondent in Wayne Co., Ind., writes that the rodders have been in his town and "swindled several people out of their money." American Agriculturist.

Check for $1000. At the July meeting of the Farmers' Club of Franklin, E. Metcalf offered to give S. W. Square a check for $1000 if he would give a bond to furnish 100 tons of sugar beets per day for four months, commencing October 1st, 1880. The offer was accepted.

☞ A correspondent of the New York Tribune gives the following method of killing off the green cabbage worm: "Dissolve one teaspoonful of saltpetre in a common pail full of warm, not hot, water, and sprinkle the cabbages therewith on the appearance of the worms. Two or three applications will suffice for the season. The water, besides, acts like a charm in promoting the growth of the plant.

☞ Cows need exercise as well as men or any other animals. The practice therefore of soiling constantly in close quarters is evidently a bad one.

☞ The largest wheat farm on the globe is along the Red River, in Dakota, near the town of Fargo. It contains 40,000 acres, and gives an average yield of 25 bushels per acre. The owner does not walk over it before breakfast.

Anecdotes.

A smart scholar had this question put to him by an inspector.

"Well, my boy, do you know what "syntax" means?"

The child of a teetotaller answered, "Yes, sir—the duty upon spirits."

Student (to a clerk in a bookstore), "Have you Homer's Odyssey?"

Clerk, (reflectively, after looking through his stock), "Well, no, we haven't any of Homer's latest works in just at present."

This is the kind of boys they have in Dover. A resident who reached that place by a noon train the other day, after an absence of two weeks, was met at the depot by his eight-year-old son, who loudly welcomed him.

"And is everbody well, Willie?" asked the father.

"The wellest kind," replied the boy.

"And nothing has happened?"

"Nothing at all. I've been good, Jennie's been good, and I never saw ma behave herself so well as she has this time!"

"How much are we paying that salesman?" asked the senior of his junior partner.

"Fifteen hundred dollars a year, sir," was the reply.

"Ah, yes, fifteen hundred—hadn't we better, as a matter of economy, take him into the concern?"

Scene at a church, after the clergyman's peroration.

Julia to Xantippe,—"What a beautiful close!"

Xantippe, who has been spitefully eyeing a well-dressed lady before her—"Beautiful clothes! Yes, but I know she didn't get them in a beautiful way."

A Happy Medium.

"Where's mamma?" cried blue-eyed Bessie, running breathlessly into the room the other morning. "Never mind, you'll do, aunty, I only want to know something. Is my pa rich?"

"Not very. Why?"

"Oh! 'cause Benny Bond and May Monk and Kate Kinsley are out here telling about their pas, and I didn't know about mine."

"Well, Bessie, I'll tell you. Your pa is not too rich, and not too poor; he is just comfortably well off."

The child stood for a moment, looking thoughtfully, then repeated over and over to herself, "Not weddy rich, not weddy poor, jest comferble," and went out.

Presently her mother came in, Bessie followed her. "Well, Bessie," said she, "Have you been a good girl to-day?"

"No, mamma."

"Why, Bessie, I hope you have not been a bad girl?"

"No, mamma," said the little thing. "Not weddy bad, not weddy good, just a comferble little girl."

Quincy, July 26.

If you feel dull drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR OR MEDICINE.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the World! AN EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen. Regulate the Liver and prevent. CHILLS AND FEVER MALARIOUS FEVERS, BOWEL COMPLAINTS, RESTLESSNESS, JAUNDICE AND NAUSEA.

BAD BREATH.

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath, and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be so easily corrected if you will take Simmons' Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your Appetite, Complexion, and General Health.

PILES!

How many suffer torture day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering from Piles. Yet relief is ready to the hand of almost any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR, is no drastic violent purge, but a gentle assistant to nature.

CONSTIPATION!

SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulation from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails.

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

Man's History.

BY LAROY SUNDERLAND.

And this we find is man's true history,
Born yesterday, to-day dying!
His fate in the nature of things to be,
Over antagonisms flying.

And, like the green buds on the trees, his birth,
Soon unfolded by the warm sun;
Hard labor, or hilarity and mirth,
And, 'ere noon, all his work is done!

As leaves in the Fall, from the trees are blown,
Driven by the furious blast!
Then, all alive in youth, but now, are gone,
So death sweeps all away at last!

So, families and nations disappear,
Fading at Time's destructive tread!
As we are to-day, so once they were here,
Now they are blotted out, and dead.

And still, the Truth, Eternal Truth, remains,
And Justice, in the whole of things;
Goodness for all, Eternal Goodness reigns,
From which all true happiness springs.

These elements eternal, the wronged,
Must surely be avenged at last,
For, although the period be prolonged,
Justice shall hold its victim fast.

But the heart of flesh cannot always beat,
In hopes and fears, joy and sorrow,
In this battle it must endure defeat,
And cease throbbing on the morrow.

Here too soon the scene is overclouded,
The shadows gathered overhead;
Too soon, all its purest joys enshrouded,
And all the sweet in life has fled.

Too soon, alas! its beating will be o'er,
Its throes of sadness, and of pain!
When this warm heart of flesh shall throb no more,
And never, never ache again.

This living faith inspires and lifts us up,
It is our Humanity's trust!
And, with this hope, we drink the bitter cup,
And mix again with parent dust.

The past inevitable—why complain?
And the future—still unknown!
Yet, sleeping we sleep to revive again,
Till the old error is outgrown.

Instructed from the past, we thrive and grow,
Till Nature's laws are understood;
Laws the most important for man to know,
On which depends his greatest good.

Gratitude and hope, for the present hour,
Guests for every human mind,
A living source of never failing power,
For you and for all human kind!

Collegeville, Pa., Aug. 16th, 1879.

"Patrimony." "What is patrimony?" Something left by a father." "What would you call it if left by a mother?" "Matrimony."

☞ A religious old lady, when asked her opinion of the organ of a church, the first time she had seen or heard one, said: "It's a very bonny kist fu' o' whistles; but, oh sir, it's an awful way o' spending the Sabbath day."

☞ "Do you like codfish balls, Mr. Wiggins?" Mr. Wiggins, hesitatingly, "I really don't know; I don't recollect attending one."

☞ "I think I have seen you before sir. Are you not Owen Smith?" "Oh, yes, I'm owin' Smith, and owin' Jones, and owin' Brown, and owin' everybody."

☞ What would you do when first employed to bring an action?" asked the examiner of a young candidate for the legal profession. "Ask for money on account," was the prompt reply. He passed.

Miscellany.

MATHILDE.

Miss Carlyle found her crying in an intelligence office one day, and in a spasm of philanthropy brought her home.

"What do you mean to do with her?" said Nic, caressing his chin.

Nic always broke in on his cousin's little enthusiasm in that way.

"Save her!" said Miss Carlyle magnificently.

"From what!"

"From her friends, of course; just what every pretty woman needs salvation from."

"Her friends? Didn't know she had any. Who are they?"

"Men."

"Oh!" said Nic, innocently.

Miss Carlyle had a genius for benevolence. A kind of breezy, contagious benevolence, that made every one she talked with swear he would go the next day and commit some rash act of generosity. Every one but Nic Somerville. His genius, if he had any, lay entirely in the region of painting and idleness.

Nic himself had some faint glimmering on the subject of his dormant ability and ventured to question his cousin one day.

"Do you really think I have any talent, Nez?" he had said with astonishing meekness.

"Yes, for going to the dogs," said Inez, cruelly, and the conversation dropped.

Nevertheless Miss Carlyle contrived to furnish him with luxurious apartments and artists' materials, and Nic lounged on his way rejoicing. Privately, Inez had a great deal of faith in her cousin's genius.

By and by, when he should accomplish something worth while, she ment to send him abroad. In the meantime no amount of dependence could crush Nic's spirit. He sat in Miss Carlyle's chairs with his feet on her mantle, and ridiculed Miss Carlyle's fondness for picturesque beggary. Yesterday it was a blind musician; to-morrow it would be a penniless poet; to-day it was Mathilde.

"I mean to make her a tidy, industrious servant, Nic; she is just the kind of a girl to pick up foolish notions, and I mean to prevent it."

"But it will never do, Inez. There is something deucedly impertinent in the mere fact of a servant being handsome.

It's an insult to one's friends. What woman wants to be overshadowed by a maid?"

"Nonsense! Mathilde shall wear a cap—something dainty and subdued. The poor child is not to blame for her beauty."

"Certainly not: what reason under heaven is there for hiding it under a cap? What is the boasted freedom of this republic if every man with fine eyes must put on spectacles, and every woman with a pretty foot wear wooden shoes?" You astonish me, Inez!"

"Nonsense!" repeated Inez.

Nevertheless Mathilde wore a cap. The merest suggestion of lace and Paris muslin, very dainty and subdued in itself, but developed a demure coquetry on Mathilde's Swedish gold hair. Miss Carlyle contemplated the result, and told Mathilde she need not wear caps, they were bad for the scalp.

"You see, I was right, Inez, the girl will never make over into a servant; might as well try to make a lady of Biddy Ryan in the kitchen. You can't smother a lot of pale yellow hair and a rose complexion with a square of muslin and a yard of Valencinnes. It's a reform against nature."

"What would you have me do then?" demanded Miss Carlyle; "the poor child must work or starve."

"Of course it's none of my business, Inez, but unless you can make a lady of her it seems to me there would be a poetical propriety in letting her starve. If I were a girl, with big sky-blue eyes and long lashes, I'm sure I'd rather die in a tragic, horrible way, and be made over into poem, than have my beauty snuffed out with a cap. It's barbarous. Why not try making a companion of her."

"A companion: Don't mention it! When I am thoroughly tired of my own society I will poison myself. Besides she can't read or write. Women do not make companions of pretty idiots; they leave that for men."

"Oh!" said Nic, with the most densely innocent air.

"The fact is," pursued Miss Carlyle, Mathilde is a happy biddable little thing, who doesn't know she is pretty, and will make an excellent servant if no one tells her."

"She doesn't know she is pretty! Of course then, my dear cousin, I take back everything. I have been laboring under a monstrous error. I supposed Mathilde stuck those little blue bows in her hair, and hung those bits of coral in her ears from some grovelling spirit of vanity. No doubt there is a severe utility in such things, beyond my ken. Excuse me. What an ass I have been making of myself!" and Nic sauntered lazily out of the room.

Mathilde certainly was a handy little thing. She flitted about Miss Carlyle's dining-room like a domestic humming bird, blushing in the rarest way when anyone spoke to her. They all became accustomed to her beauty after a while. Miss Carlyle grew a little proud of it, taking it quite as a matter of course that people should remark Mathilde along with the china and port.

Later, Inez forgot that Mathilde was remarkable. Forgot it, that is, as a matter of ever present consciousness. As a matter of fact it lay dormant in her brain until something made it unpleasantly alive.

"You have an exceedingly pretty servant," said Clavers Lorraine, when Mathilde had opened the door for him one day; "one does not often see that pure oval in blondes."

Miss Carlyle was a brunette, but then she was in love with Clavers Lorraine, and flushed a little.

"Yes, Mathilde has a dollish prettiness, she is a good girl, neat and industrious. When are the McVeighs expected?"

"In September, I think. About this girl—Mathilde, did you call her?—she certainly has good blood in her veins."

"O, I'm not so sure about blood. White lilies grow out of black soil, you know. One thing is certain, Mathilde has not enough good blood in her to make her lazy. Is Eunice McVeigh's engagement out?"

Miss Carlyle began to wonder if it paid to save Mathilde. Servants with purely oval faces night prove expensive. But that was a summer cloud. One day a rose dropped from Miss Carlyle's hair, and Clavers Lorraine picked it up and kept it. It was an amber rose, very rare, and very becoming, and Lorraine had it in his hand when he left the room. Five minutes later Inez went into the dining-room, where Mathilde stood by the open window, blushing daintily, with a rose in her hair—an amber rose, very rare, and very becoming.

"Did you open the door for Mr. Lorraine, Mathilde?"

"Yes miss." The girl drooped her eyes and colored exquisitely.

Inez went straight to her cousin, a carmine spot in either cheek.

"You met Clavers Lorraine at the door, Nic; did he have a rose in his hand?"

Nic yawned and stretched himself.

"A rose? Yes—no let me see. He had a lambent fire in his eye, and a tender pathos is his voice, and an elastic triumph in his step, and no doubt he had an intense yearning in his heart; but I don't think he had a rose in his hand. Why?"

"Are you sure?"

"Of course I am sure. Don't be savage, Inez; he may have put it in his pocket."

Miss Carlyle went back to the dining-room. She had put her hand to the plough. Mathilde must be saved.

"Who gave you the rose in your hair, child?"

Mathilde's long lashes fell and her lips quivered. Miss Carlyle had never seen her half so charming.

"A gentleman—I must not tell, he said. Are you angry, Miss?"

"No, Mathilde. This gentleman, has he given you anything but roses?"

"Yes, Miss; ribbons sometimes, and a necklace; but I never wore it," sobbed Mathilde.

"Has the gentleman ever told you he loved you?" Inez was remorseless. The carmine spots faded.

"Oh, yes, Miss, but I didn't believe it, I didn't know it was wrong. I—I—" Poor Mathilde broke down, sobbing piteously.

"Listen to me, child. You must forget this fine gentleman. He will bring you nothing but harm. You must send back everything he has given you. Do you understand me, Mathilde?"

"Yes, ma'am," whispered the girl through her tears.

The next day Clavers Lorraine asked Miss Carlyle to marry him. That lady surveyed him icily.

"This display is entirely unnecessary, Mr. Lorraine."

"So it seems. You are sure you understand your own heart, Inez?"

"Perfectly."

"Very well; so be it," and Clavers Lorraine went abroad.

Inez looked at her cousin through a veil of unshed tears.

"I have nothing in the world but you, Nic. You shall be a great painter, and I will be your patroness. You will never forsake me, will you?"

Nic dropped his cigar with an injured look.

"Don't be cruel, Inez. I'm sure I've never shown any disposition to desert you have I?"

"No, no, you have always been kind and good." Miss Carlyle spoke dreamily. "But men are so false—so very false, Nic."

"Exactly Inez. That's the reason I prefer women. I'd rather spend my life right here in your house than knock around among men like other fellows. I would indeed. There a beastly mob, Inez—most inhumanly beastly."

Miss Carlyle smiled a shadowy, tremulous smile.

"I don't mean to let you stay right here in my house, Nic. You must go abroad. When you are famous, and the world is better for your pictures, you shall come back, and we will grow silver haired together. It is a bleak sort of a world. Nic, don't you think so?"

"A regular Sahara. I wonder if it pays—this everlasting grind. If it were not for you, Inez; were you in earnest about sending me away? It goes through me like a two-edged sword. It does, indeed."

"Miss Carlyle was in earnest. She did not find it easy to forget fine gentlemen, and so she threw herself into Nic's future warmly, and was busy all day long. The night before his departure the young artist grew almost pathetic.

"You have been deucedly good to me, Inez. I have a fancy to remember you as you are to-night, flushed and beneficent. Don't trouble yourself to get up in the morning. Good-by."

When Miss Carlyle got up in the morning Nic was gone—and so was Mathilde.

"Forgive me, Inez," he wrote; "we are married and gone. Have you forgotten the war of the roses?" I took it from Lorraine at the door. It was a mute, inglorious fraud, but he went away so soon it was not necessary to explain. Did you dream you were saving Mathilde for your ungrateful Nic?"

Miss Carlyle forgave them instantly. She was in a forgiving mood. She wished the sins of the world had been committed against herself, that she might wipe them out with one magnificent gesture. Then she wrote to Clavers Lorraine.

"I have done you a great wrong," she said. "When you come back I will tell you about it."

Clavers Lorraine came back and forgave the wrong.

"I thought you were in love with Mathilde," said Miss Carlyle, humbly.

"Mathilde—who is Mathilde?"

"Don't you remember her? the girl with the purely oval face?"

"A yellow haired doll."

"She is Nic's wife now."

"Heaven be praised. I was always jealous of Nic."

When they were married Nic sent them a dainty bit of canvass from Dresden. An open window, a square of apple-green sky, and in the foreground a Swedish blonde with an amber rose in her hair.

Drying Flowers in Sand.

The Floral Cabinet gives the following directions for drying flowers in sand, which although not new, will be of interest to many of our readers. It says:

"There are many of our brilliant flowers, such as dahlias, pansies, pinks, geraniums, sweet williams, carnations, gladiolus, which may be preserved for years. White flowers will not answer well for this purpose, nor any succulent plant, as hyacinths or cactus. Take deep dishes, or those of sufficient depth to allow flowers to be covered an inch deep with sand; get the common white sand, such as is used for scouring purposes, cover the bottom of the dish with a layer about half an inch deep, and then lay in the flowers, with their stems downward, holding them firmly in place while you sprinkle more sand over them, until all places between the petals are filled and the flowers are out of sight.

A broad dish will accommodate quite a large number; allow sufficient sand between. Set the dish in a dry, warm place, where they will dry gradually, and at the end of a week pour off the sand and examine them. If there is any moisture in the sand it must be dried out before using again, or fresh sand may be poured over them, the same as before. Some flowers will require weeks to dry, while others will become sufficiently dry to put away in a week or ten days. By this simple process, flowers, ferns, etc., are preserved in their proper shape, as well as in their natural color, which is far better than to press them in books. When arranged in groups and mounted on cards, or in little straw baskets, they may be placed in frames under glass.

Post Office Puzzles.

Upward of 50,000 letters yearly are sent to the Dead Letter Office from the Boston Post Office alone, and want of proper direction is a large cause of it. The expert, who has become so by long years of practice, is called upon to tax his powers to decipher some obscure direction often found on letters. We will mention a few of them:

As written.	Should be.
Alk Embright,	Old Cambridge, Mass.
Teheguepic,	Chicopee, Mass.
Pina Cherry,	Point Shirley, Mass.
Pitchourk,	Fitchburg, Mass.

Incredible as it would appear these are actual directions that have been in the hand of the writer of this sketch.—Boston Herald.

All Heresay Evidence.

"I say, Mr. Smithers," says Mrs. Smithers to her husband "didn't I hear you down in the kitchen kissing the cook?" "My dear," replied Smithers, blandly, "permit me to insist upon my right to be reasonably ignorant. I really cannot say what you may have heard." "But wasn't you down there kissing the cook?" "My dear, I cannot really recollect. I only remember going into the kitchen and coming out again. I may have been there, and from what you say I infer I was. But I cannot recollect just what occurred." "But," persisted the ruthless cross-examiner, "what did Jane mean when she said, 'Oh! Smithers, don't kiss so loud, or the old she-dragon up stairs will hear us?" "Well," said Smithers, in his blandest tones, "I cannot remember what interpretation I did put on the words at the time. They are not my words, you must remember."

The South Shore.

From a lengthy article in the Boston Home Journal, on the South Shore, Martha's Vineyard, &c., we copy the following paragraph of Quincy and vicinity:—

"Not only are the "sea-girt" isles pleasant when you have reached them, but they have the added attraction of a pleasant journey in the foreground. Leaving the Old Colony depot one gets a breath of salt air as he skims over the flats of South Boston, by Savin Hill and Neponset to Braintree, where the South Shore division separates from the main line. One of the first pretty villages passed is Wollaston Heights, built on a bluff overlooking the bay and city, and commanding a fine view of the steamers and ocean shipping. The commercial growth of Boston has crowded the social world gradually up-town and out of town. Of this fact the steady growth of such suburbs as Wollaston Heights is a living index. The first house was erected so short a time ago as 1870, and now this village boasts over a thousand regular residents, and all the modern inducements of a first-class town. Just beyond this is the quaint, loveable old town of Quincy, replete with interest. It is here that the first railroad was built, to run on a down-grade from Quincy to the Neponset river, for the purpose of conveying granite from the quarries, a distance of three miles. The stone taken from here is of a fine quality, Quincy granite having a reputation of its own, and being well represented in our fine buildings all over the States. Among the men who have made Quincy proud, are John Hancock, whose bold signature of the Declaration of Independence will make his name familiar as long as our national pride exists, Josiah Quincy, Jr., and the two Adamses are also claimed by Quincy. There are many marks of the old puritan and revolutionary days in the quiet, shady town, which still boasts among its residents the descendants of many of the noble men to whom we owe our national prestige. In the solid, dark stone church, erected in 1828 at a cost of $40,000, is a fine monument to the memory of John Adams and his wife. The estate of the Quincy family, upon which still reside their decendants, is one of the finest in the State. It is strange how few people are really acquainted with our colonial landmarks, though living within an hour's ride of so many of them. Even the old-time custom of making pilgrimages to Plymouth is fast dying out."

A Cent in the Stomach.

Dr. Gibbs, one of the editors of Hall's Journal of Health, who is himself an educated physician and surgeon, while on a railroad the other day, was consulted by one of the employes on the cars in relation to his little boy, who had that morning swallowed a cent.

"What have you done for him?" asked the doctor.

"We gave him a dose of castor oil," was the reply.

"Good practice so far; as soon as you reach home give him the whites of three raw eggs daily, let his diet be bread and milk, and nothing sour."

The directions were followed faithfully, the whites of the eggs repeated every day, and the dose of castor oil at night, and on the fourth day the cent was discharged. It was one of the new copper coins, and considerably corroded by the action of the gastric juice.

Since fatal results often follow the swallowing of copper coin, the judicious treatment advised in this instance should be remembered by all who have the care of children. The essential points to be borne in mind are simply these:—Albumen, or the white of eggs, a bland diet free from acids, and castor oil.

Born in Him.

Old Sambo Jute, long since gone across the dark valley, was a worthy man in his way, and genial withal; but Sambo occasionally got drunk. One day his employer took him to task, and read him a lecture, at the close of which he asked him if he didn't think he would do better in the future.

"Dun'o mas'r," said the darkey, scratching his head.

"But what do you think?"

"Well, mas'r, I's afeard I think not."

"Sambo, what do you mean? Do you mean that you will not try?"

"'Twouldn't be no use, mas'r. Fact is 'twas born in me. Rum is my nat'ral drink. Yer see, afore I was born, my father and mother were boff bought on the coast of Africa, and paid for in rum."

☞ A teacher in the Port Jervis public schools was last week explaining to the children that usually all words ending with "let" meant something small, as streamlet, rivulet, hamlet, etc. Whereupon a smart boy asked if hamlet meant a small ham.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 23, 1879.

Short communications and items of news earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.

☞ Anonymous communications are not published.

Severe Gale.

The long wished for and much needed rain came on Saturday last and lasted till Tuesday morning. Monday noon the rain began to fall in torrents and continued through the afternoon and night. The wind blew a perfect gale and a great deal of damage was done among the pleasure boats at Houghs Neck, Blacks Creek, Squantum and other places in this vicinity.

At Houghs Neck Mr. B. F. Curtis' yacht Vision went ashore but fortunately received no damage; Dr. Dearing's sloop boat bilged and went ashore; his sail boat Maude was bilged and swamped. Mr. Hurst's boat was badly damaged by fouling with the Mignon. The Mignon, which is owned by George Mitchell, went ashore. The Wildfire owned by H. A. Keith was capsized and went ashore. A large boat owned by Mr. James Mears went ashore, while several small boats owned by the same gentleman shipped seas and were badly injured. The Rose owned by Mr. J. D. Taber went ashore.

A large floating stage seventy feet long, belonging to Mr. Mears broke its moorings and was washed ashore.

Mr. Taber's wharf was torn down and washed ashore. The tide was very high and a large number of bathing houses and sea wharves floated round quite lively. Fortunately there was no damage done to any of the cottages.

Dr. Wm. L. Faxon's boat, the Altaire, went ashore at Blacks Creek and colliding with the yacht Rocket, owned by Benjamin F. Bass, stove in one side of that boat.

At Squantum a great many boats were driven ashore. The steam yacht White Fawn was carried from her moorings off South Boston and driven by the gale to the Squantum shore where she was found high and dry on the beach. It was carried almost up to the roadway. Some of the cottages were flooded and the cottagers got very little sleep during the night.

The immense quantity of rain caused the brooks to swell and some damage was accordingly done. Two or three rods of the stone butment on Sea street, between the Hose house and Washington street was undermined and caved in.

A large number of limbs of the pear trees, many of them being heavily laden with fruit, were broken; grapevine trellises were blown over, and considerable fruit fell to the ground.

Narrow Escape. The Steamer Stamford, as it came up to Quincy Point on Wednesday, swamped a small row boat, containing six persons, five of whom were children about six or seven years of age, but fortunately none of them were drowned. In endeavoring to clear another boat the steamer struck the wharf on the Point side, and the rush of the waves caused the little row boat near by to swamp. The boat is owned by William Amory, Jr., of Braintree, and Mr. McNabb, a gentleman in Mr. Amory's employ, was giving five little orphans a sail. Fortunately Capt. John A. Packard, Joseph M. Glover and others were near by and rescued the little ones from a watery grave.

Boat Races. On Saturday last the second race in the series between the Gen. Shields and Costello crews took place at Quincy Point. It was a very close and exciting race from the start to the finish, and although the Shields crossed the line first it was declared a draw, owing to a claim of foul by the Costello crew, which the referee allowed. Time, Shields, 20 minutes, Costellos, 20 minutes and 8 seconds. On Tuesday the same crews again had another "pull," and as before the race proved to be one of the most exciting they have ever had. For the first mile the crews were bow and bow, and at the turning stake the Shields had a slight lead, which they maintained till within an eighth of a mile of home when the Costellos by a magnificent spurt succeeded in crossing the line first.

This decides the possession of the silver cup, which is valued at $30. Considerable interest has been taken in this amusement the past year, and it is hoped by another season those interested in this sport will give them a hearty support.

Excursions. Some of the most splendid excursions that have been enjoyed by our citizens this season, were those on the Empire State. This large and beautiful steamer takes nice parties daily out of Boston Harbor,—to the ever-popular Isles of Shoals, Provincetown, and other places of interest. The fare is low, and a sail of a hundred miles on the briny deep, these pleasant days, is delightful. The programme for next week's trip will be found in our columns.

The Adams School House. The work of enlarging this school house goes on bravely,—fifteen to twenty carpenters are hard at it daily. Mr. Shackley, the contractor, is in hopes to have it ready in another fortnight, although there is much to be done yet. It will give excellent accommodations,—airy and pleasant,—for from 500 to 600 scholars.

Real Estate Sales. The following real estate in this town and vicinity has recently changed hands.

James Morison of this town bought one acre of land on Washington street Quincy, with buildings of George B. Twitchell for $5000.

Catharine Ring bought three acres of of land with buildings on Washington street Quincy, of Mary E. Estes and others for $2,350

Annabella Forsyth bought 39 -1-4 rods of land and buildings on Lowell street, Weymouth of William Forsyth for $1600.

Ann M. T. Dyer bought ten acres of land with buildings on Washington street, also ten acres of meadow land on Monatiquot river, and one acre of wood land on Peach street, Braintree of Jadez T. Dyer for $4000.

☞ On Monday evening next the Tiger Engine Company have a meeting at their house to choose a new foreman. The one chosen May 1st having resigned.

☞ The new dining rooms at Quincy Point has been made outwardly very attractive by the painter, and we learn from those who have visited it, that the attractions within are very pleasing to the palate.

☞ An unknown woman deliberately walked on to the track at the Quincy Adams station, on Saturday last, barely escaping being knocked down by the 12.25 train, and on reaching the other side turned round and shook her fist at the fast disappearing train.

☞ Officers Locke and Furnald arrested a man in Somerville on Wednesday, supposed to be the one who stole last week $100 worth of goods from Messrs. T. Curtis & Co's. shoe manufactory. He was brought before Judge Pratt on Thursday morning, but there was not evidence sufficient to identify him and he was discharged.

☞ Mr. Hiram Prior, of Germantown while peddling clams and vegetables on Paines Hill on Thursday morning, was overset. His horse becoming frightened started on a run down the hill and when nearly opposite Mr. Hosea Ellis', overset the wagon and made a "chowder" in "double-quick" time. Mr. Prior was somewhat injured and was obliged to be carried to his residence.

☞ Mr. and Mrs. William W. Pratt, of Wollaston, have just returned from a five months' trip in the west. Mr. Pratt has been establishing agencies in the principal cities, for C. F. Bates & Co., the enterprising proprietors of the "kitchen and hand mineral soap." The article which is so popular in the east, is having a good sale through the western country.

☞ The Rev. D. M. Wilson is spending two weeks or so at Newport, Vermont, or thereabouts. On the 31st instant he will preach in Montreal, giving a "labor of love" to the Rev. J. B. Green, the retiring Unitarian minister who is moving his family and household effects to Burlington, Vt., where he is to be settled. Mr. Green has preached several times in Quincy and is well known to members of the First Church.

☞ Mrs. Moses Nightingale, an aged and respected lady, who has resided in this town over three-quarters of a century. will be buried this afternoon.—She was one of those who became attached to the open fireplace in her younger days, and has always maintained one at her home until the hour of death. When it was chilly outside her visitors always found a bright sparkling fire on her hearth.

☞ George W. Penniman of this town, the Old Colony correspondent of the Globe, and popular lecturer upon temperance and other practical topics, was united on Thursday last in marriage to Miss Kate S. Williamson of Wollaston Heights. The happy couple immediately started for the Cape to spend a portion of their honeymoon. The good wishes of their many friends will go with them. Good luck, happiness, and long life to them.

Presentation. The Knights of Honor on Wednesday evening visited Wollaston, and presented one of their brothers who has recently taken a "better half" to his bosom, with one of Holden's French clocks. The presentation speech was made by Chas. A. Foster, Esq., which was replied to by the recipient, Mr. Robert Josselyn.

Taxpayers. The following is a list of the heavy tax-payers in this town:—

Sixth Reunion. The Page Family Association will hold their Sixth Social Reunion at the residence of Mrs. Ruhamah Lane, Bedford, Mass., on Wednesday next, August 27. Should the day prove rainy, the reunion will take place the following day. Dinner at one o'clock, after which interesting remarks may be expected from various prominent members of the Association. Trains leave Boston at 8.25, 12.20 and 2.40; fare fifty cents.

☞ The Weymouth Advance says, a lively row took place in that town last Saturday, as parties were returning from the picnic which was held at Lovells Grove, where by John Viger, a resident of the Landing, received a severe kick in the lower part of his abdomen from the effects of which he died on Tuesday morning.

A Difficult Problem. We have given our readers on the fourth page today a hard problem, but we are in hopes of receiving a few correct answers, from our many readers.

Picnic. It is the intention of the temperance societies of Quincy, Weymouth and Rockland to hold another union picnic.

☞ Peaches "three quarts for a quartah!" is what causes the doctors and apothecaries to smile benignly upon the street hawker.

☞ Bedford will celebrate the 150th year of its settlement on Wednesday next. The event will be noted by a procession, dinner, speeches, concert, &c.

☞ In the Superior Criminal Court in Boston, recently, a man who stole $76 was sent to the State Prison for ten years, while M. Frank Paige, who embezzled $150,000, was given two years in the House of Correction. And this is what is called justice!

☞ Some youngsters caught stealing pears on the estate of Deputy Sheriff White, of Weymouth, gave as an excuse the stringency of the money market, the fruit being above their reach in a financial point of view.

Questions of Importance.

To the Publishers of the Patriot:

I notice in your issue of August 16th, under the head of "Taxation," you say, "It will be noticed that the rate in Quincy is higher than in most of the towns in the County. Still, we think our citizens will not grumble, if they know the money is well expended." Just so, Mr. Editor, you are right. There will be no grumbling if the money is only well expended, but allow me to call the attention of our citizens to a few expenditures and let them, or those who can, answer, has the money been well expended?

First,—Is not six or seven hundred dollars considerable money to expend for an out-house for a school-house?

Second,—Is not thirty dollars, (in this age of retrenchment and reform,) a pretty tall price to pay an architect for the plan of said out-house?

Third,—Is money well expended when it is paid to an architect who plans a school-house without making any arrangements for heating apparatus or chimney, and then when the mistake is discovered is allowed to substitute a drain pipe for a chimney, in a building where the lives of hundreds of children are to be placed in jeopardy thereby?

Fourth,—When so much is being spent for the health and comfort of our school children is it in accordance with good judgment and good taste to build a school house with but one small flue 8 inches by 12 inches, for the ventilation of thirteen rooms?

Fifth,—When our gallant Board of Engineers are constantly crying for more reservoirs and more water, to protect us from the ravages of fire, why is it they construct a reservoir holding only thirteen thousand gallons, when one holding fifteen thousand gallons could have been built for only ten dollars more?

These things may be all right when properly explained, but there are a considerable number of voters and tax-payers anxiously waiting for an explanation.

UNCLE JOE.

For the Patriot.

The Crow's Nest.

DANA, AUG. 18th, 1879.

On Monday evening occurred a very pleasant surprise to one of the young ladies of the town. This consisted of a sheet and pillow-case masquerade, participated in by about sixty of the young people of this and neighboring villages, and a very pleasant evening was passed. The entertainment consisted of singing, music and dancing, which was kept up until a late hour.

Wednesday, the 13th, I took a trip to Wendell, and spent a few hours with our former fellow townsman, Francis C. Ellis, who has a nice farm. His crops are looking finely, and he is making many improvements. My time being limited, I had no opportunity of calling on or our other old friend, C. Willard Perry, but hope to do so at some future time.

Thursday was spent by the male portion of the party in fishing on the pond in the village, giving us a very good catch. In the evening a party from the village again visited us, and we had another jolly good time. Friday was passed very pleasantly in various amusements.

Saturday being wet and lowering, we again went fishing, and succeeded in catching the largest pickerel taken from the pond this season, weighing two and one-half pounds, besides having very good luck otherwise.

Sunday being so wet and dull, we had few visitors, and the nest was very quiet.

Monday also, the rain fell steadily all day, thus preventing us from turning homeward as we anticipated, but the first pleasant day we must bid adieu to "the crow's nest," and return to our respective homes, hoping our whole party will be permitted to meet again at "the nest," the ensuing summer, and pass as pleasant a season of rest and recreation as has been enjoyed this year.

District Court. The business before the Court this week has not attracted large gatherings. Many of the "jury" appear to be absent,—off on summer excursions probably. The Judge does not think that mothers-in-law as a class, are highly esteemed, if he can judge rightly by the evidence of sons-in-law on the witness stand. But he knows, as the writer does, that all that is said under oath is not "the truth and the whole truth," if it were more of this class would be sent to the House of Correction. Fortunately for them we have an honest, kind-hearted son-in-law for a Judge.

Johanna Fogerty, of Weymouth, was arraigned for an assault, to which she plead not guilty, and the evidence not sustaining the complaint the defendant was discharged.

Edwin A. Wood, of Randolph, on complaint of his wife, for an assault. Plead not guilty but upon examination it appeared the defendant was guilty and the case was continued to Tuesday for sentence, when the plaintiff acknowledging satisfaction the defendant was discharged on payment of costs.

Patrick Lines, of Weymouth, for a second drunk. Plead guilty and was sent to the House of Correction for three months.

James Sweeney, of Braintree, for the larceny of $100, the property of Frank A. Penniman. The plaintiff acknowledging satisfaction the defendant was discharged on payment of costs.

James Gallagher, one of the old citizens of Quincy, whose years number more than three score and ten, was brought before the Court for being a common drunkard, on continuance from August 11th. The venerable old gentleman feeling repentant, and resolving to reform if he had another chance, the Court granted his request, and continued the case to Sept. 20th, 1879.

Edwin Augustus Wood, of Randolph, who appeared before the Court Tuesday, for an assault on his wife, and was discharged on payment of costs, amounting to $11.77, appeared again Wednesday on complaint for being drunk, and was fined $3 and costs, amounting to $14.40. In default he was committed to the House of Correction.

Notes from Abroad.

BY PROFESSOR E. P. THWING.

One by one the long-looked for hopes are realized. Londonderry was the point of all Ireland to me, and I cannot describe the rush of memories. Afterward the lovely region of Ayr, Scotland, feasted my mind and heart. It is useless to speak of the satisfaction. One must be saturated with poetic feeling, and inspired with historic instinct to know "this keenest of pleasure" as Milford calls it. I had a delightful interview with the venerable President of Queen's College, Belfast, who was in his eightieth year, and also with the wife and family of Prof. Wait. The acquaintance came from a "chance meeting," as we wrongly say, but proved very agreeable.

Three days were pleasantly occupied in visiting the Hebridean Isles. It is one hundred and twenty miles from Glasgow to Oban, and fifty more to Iona and Staffa. On the way thither I went to the birthplace of Christopher North at Paisley, and saw the ruined abbey where two queens are buried.—The costume and dialect of Highlanders, and the droning of the Scotch bag pipe reminded me of the distance from America. On the day that I visited the famous the weather was superb, and the scenery full of grandeur and grace; combining in one continued and gorgeous panorama, the loveliness of Lake George, the grisly and gloomy beauty of Mt. Desert, the glory of the castled Rhine, and the pastoral sweetness of the regions along the Connecticut or Saco. When we were rowed into the mouth of this earths grandest cathedral, and pushed our way into its solemn recess; where we silently stood within the "musical cave" as the Gaels call it, I struck up "Old Hundred" while a score of voices joined. I was much impressed with the harmony, so pure, deep and sympathetic, and which I never expect to hear again, this side of Heaven. Of this neighborhood, Prof. Wilson says,

> "Beauty nowhere owes to ocean,
> A lovelier haunt than this."

Edinboro' gave me a wet reception, quite unlike the warm sunshine enjoyed here in 1855. In this city I spent the third Sabbath on land, and the fifth since leaving Brooklyn. I heard the eloquent Italian preacher, Gavazzi, at Assembly Hall in the forenoon. It was a treat I had long anticipated, and which was very gratifying. I also listened to the Rev. Dr. Bonai, who is so widely known by his sweet lyrics and thoughtful writings. The beautiful hymn, "Calm me my God and keep me calm," he said was written at a time of mental turmoil.

A severe storm of wind and rain made sight seeing out of question, but that had been well done at my first visit.—The weather cleared, as we passed Cheviot Hills and entered England, and we saw a rainbow over the river Tyne.

As I passed Melrose Abbey I noticed that the ivy had grown richer and thicker the past twenty-four years. Cumberland and Westmoreland counties looked exquisitely beautiful. I saw the shores of Solway, and the hills near Windermere in the far distance. I stopped but a short time in Liverpool, visiting St. George's Hall and other objects somewhat familiar. One evening I spent at Llanduduo where, under the shadow of the glorious Welsh mountains, is located the seaside home of the Manchester Young Men's Christian Association.

The Sherwood House is a pleasant summer retreat for the hard working young men of the large English cities. The name of one town which I passed through near here, contains fifty-four letters incongruously mixed, yet the natives speak it daily. At Llanduduo is the cavern where the Romans worked in copper while Christ worked at the bench in Nazareth; their hammers and tools were discovered here in 1849. So in Chester, it was wonderful to think as I stood by the wall laid out by the imperial engineers of Augustus, how short a human life is, compared with the epochs of history. My trip to the Isle of Man was an enjoyable one, and about it you shall here next time.

Shocking Murder.

Mr. Joseph F. Frye, a respected hide and leather merchant of Boston, was found in the basement of his house, No. 13 Joy street, on Friday forenoon of last week, with a bullet wound in his heart and a number of wounds on his back and neck. He had been brutally murdered for purposes of robbery. The family and servants were away for the summer, and Mr. Frye was the only occupant of the house.

Through the efforts of the Boston Police the villians who took part in this cold-blooded affair were apprehended on Tuesday and the stolen property recovered. The parties are Nicolo Infantino, Antonio Ardito, sometimes called the Greek, and Saro Chivaro, alias Nino Antonio, alias Larry O'Neill, as principals, and Vicenzo Bandiera as an accessory. The chief conspirator, Nicolo Infantino, is a Sicilian lad, who had, until quite recently, worked in a barber shop at 33 Causeway street, and to whom Mr. Frye had taken a great fancy. The acquaintance commenced about six months ago at the barber's shop, and the pride which the lad seemed to take in trimming and dressing Mr. Frye's hair and whiskers so pleased the gentleman that he often made him presents and invited him to his house, where he had shown him his valuables. It seems that Mr. Frye invited this villian to his house to spend Thursday evening, and he communicated the fact to Neill Larry and they plotted together to rob him, and even murder him, if necessary to secure the plunder. These plans were carried out and the poor old gentleman fell a victim to misplaced confidence.

Our Boston Correspondent.

The railroad system as a science. Views and labors of Charles Francis Adams, Jr., late Commissioner of the railroads of Massachusetts, worthy of high commendation.

AUGUST 27, 1879.

Travel throughout the world may be said to have passed a complete revolution since the introduction of railroads in 1830. Distance and time compared to former periods are annihilated to mankind. In fact the railroad system at the present day has become a science if advancement in mechanical skill of a high standard can be ranked as a science. The transit by steam railroads is quick but fearful as to casualties, as history will tell, and as it is the universal pathway of land travel,—transporting millions of human beings daily in this country and Europe; he is a benefactor to mankind, who can point out measures that can lessen peril and render transportation still more safe than at the present time.

Your respected and talented townsman, Charles Francis Adams, Jr., Esq., has recently given a volume of valuable matter upon railroads from their origin in England to the present day, a period of thirty-nine years, under the head of the "Genesis of the Railroad System." Mr. Adams who has made the subject a specialty, his long experience as a Railroad Commissioner of Massachusetts, an office from which he has lately retired, and his extensive travel in this country and Europe, have enabled him to acquire a large fund of practical knowledge of the railroad system. In speaking of his valuable treatise under what he terms "Railroad Problems," he discusses, says a writer in Harper's Magazine, "the relations of railroad, the State and one another, and gives brief accounts of the railway system in various countries, in the development of the system, the evils and benefits attending it, the difficulties and complications besetting the management, operations, functions and control of railroads, the conflict of interest between the competing lines, with the plans that have been ineffectually extemporized for their adjustment and the absorbing questions of free trade, competition, amalgamation or consolidation and monopoly."

Mr. Adams is a talented writer on any subject he undertakes; candid, clear and straight-forward in his views, and deserves the praise and thanks of the body politic for his researches in one of the most important themes of the present age. As we have before remarked, he is a philanthropist who can devise measures for greater safety, economy and honesty in the management of railroads, the great highway land travel of the civilized world. ☞ We copy from the Brockton Enterprise the following on local history:—"In these days the study of history is becoming fashionable, there being a large sale for books of this character, and libraries are expected to be up to the times in this respect. We are glad to know that the Public Library contains a number of these books, some exceedingly valuable as references. Among them may be mentioned histories of Massachusetts, by Minot and by Hutchinson, and histories of Woburn, Dorchester, Watertown, Waltham, East Boston, Roxbury, Boston, Cambridge, Framingham, Plymouth, Quincy, Lancaster, Townsend, Abington, Dunstable, Hollis and other towns.

Our New York Letter.

Reply to your correspondent from the Hub. The office of a letter writer. The weather and its effects. Locust Grove conflagration. Special Gospel services. Brief mention.

BROOKLYN, AUG. 20, 1879.

In last Saturday's PATRIOT we read the kindly criticism of the Boston correspondent upon our debut two weeks ago, and in humble acknowledgment of his complimentary remarks we make our profoundest bow. We have always valued the PATRIOT very highly, and are greatly interested in its success as a people's newspaper; and we shall be much gratified if the "effusions" of our pen shall tend in any way to make this paper more attractive or increase its already extensive circulation. The work of a letter writer is not only that of communicating facts worthy of public attention, but also that of weaving them together connectedly and interestingly, so that they may have the appearance of a narrative written in an informal and conversational manner. What is written for the public must be written in a style the public will relish and assimilate.

The storm in the early part of the week, though quite severe along this part of the coast, was not unusually disastrous at latest reports. The long continued rain was occasioned by the meeting of two storms coming from the West and South. Many cellars in this and neighboring cities were flooded, and the corn and potato crops on Long Island considerably damaged. The lower sections of Jersey City were partially inundated, but no serious damage done. The streets were all quite effectually cleaned, something much needed. Last week the average temperature in New York city was 72 degrees, which is much lower than for several weeks past.

On Friday evening the sky for many miles was illuminated by the conflagration at Locust Grove near Coney Island. The large hotel and pavilion was totally destroyed, and four or five lives are known to have been lost. The fire originated in the oil room directly under the main portion of the building, and was due to carelessness in pouring petroleum oil near a lighted lamp. Several hundreds visited the ruins. It is estimated that the loss will be about $50,000. The property was only partially insured.

So much interest has been manifested in the religious meeting at the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. pavilion, that special services have been held every evening this week. They were conducted by Mr. H. B. Hudson, one of Mr. Moody's converts in Vermont, who is doing "the work of an evangelist." The exercises have all been well attended, and personal work in the after-meetings has brought forth good fruit. This Bethel is situated near the principal entrance to Prospect Park, has sittings for between five and six hundred, and is admirably adapted to summer evangelists work. The services are entirely undenominational, and mostly non-church goers attend.

The report of the Register of Vital statistics shows the population of Brooklyn to be estimated at 543,000. The number of deaths during 1878 was 11,075, of which nearly one-half were children under five years.

At the centennial anniversary of the battle of Paulus Hook, celebrated in Jersey City last Tuesday, the procession was one of the finest and most imposing ever witnessed in that locality.

Cooper Institute is to be enlarged to accommodate the large number of students. A fifth story, twenty feet high, will be added, and surmounted by a fine cornice and a lage dome. The plans are drawn, and work will be commenced soon. CLARE.

REUNION. The Thirty-ninth Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, will hold their thirteenth annual reunion at Taunton on Wednesday next. The entertainment on this occasion will be a regular Rhode Island clam bake. The price per plate will be only one dollar, and free return tickets will be given to all who come by the Old Colony railroad.

CONVENTIONS. The Republican State Convention will be held at Worcester on Tuesday, September 16th.

The regular Democratic State Convention will meet at Worcester on Thursday, September 18th.

The Butler convention will be held in Worcester also on the 18th instant.

Aug. 18th, Mrs. Bridget Barrett, aged 50 years.

Aug. 19th, Mr. William Dunkerton, aged 57 years, 8 months and 8 days.

Aug. 20th, Alfred S. Powell, aged 34 years, 7 months and 6 days.

In Braintree, Aug. 17th, Chas. F. Arnold, formerly of this town, aged 43 years and 9 months.

Special Notices.

G. A. R. The regular meetings of Paul Revere Post, No. 88, are held at Revere Hall, (over H. W. Gray's store,) on the 2d and 4th Wednesday evenings of each month, at 7 30 o'clock.

Another Boat Race.

Last Thursday, a crew consisting of Messrs. Edward Powers and Edward Frary of the Shields crew, and John A. and E. J. Costello of the Costello crew, all of this town, rowed a three mile race at Silver Lake, against the Hooper crew of the Lakeman Club of Boston, and the Haysheds of Cambridge, and a finer race was never rowed on the lake. The Quincy crew pushed the Lakemans hard to the stake, and turned one length behind them, and after squaring away for home spurted and gained one-half a length. On the way home it was spurt and spurt; first the Lakemans ahead, and then the Quincys. There was not more than fifteen feet between the two boats at any time during the race, and it was doubtful which crew would win.—When about ten boat lengths from the finish the Lakeman crew passed to the front, and won by a quarter of a boat length. Time, Lakeman's, 19 minutes, 50 seconds; Quincys, 19 minutes, 53 seconds.

The fastest time on record is 19 minutes, 30 seconds, made over the same course last year by the Faulkner-Reagan crew of Boston.

The Quincy crew rowed at a great disadvantage, as they have never pulled together before, and their boat was 75 pounds heavier than the Lakemans, whose boat was supplied with a rudder, which was a great advantage on account of the wind. However, the Quincys made a record which the boatmen of the town are not ashamed of, and proves that the town can send good crews to compete for aquatic honors, if boating is encouraged.

☞ Gov. Talbot's letter declining a re-nomination appeard in the Boston papers on Wednesday. He says his reasons for this step are entirely personal and entirely disconnected from matters of state or politics, and declares that his action is final.

☞ Citizens of the town of Weymouth have subscribed two thousand dollars, and this sum, with one thousand appropriated by the town, will establish a public library of creditable beginnings.

☞ The annual illumination at Martha's Vineyard will occur next Saturday evening.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

Again I wish to thank my numerous Customers for their very liberal patronage the past season, and to say to them that I shall endeavor to do for them the very best I am able to, so that my trade shall still increase.

I AM ABLE TO SELL AT LOWER PRICES,
Than can be bought in Boston or vicinity, as I
BUY MY GOODS FOR CASH,
And many of them
DIRECT from the MANUFACTORY,

I would give prices of some of my Goods, but you could not tell any better for that, the worth of them. Be sure to

COME AND SEE MY
BOOTS AND SHOES,
And I will be sure to sell you. I keep Ladies' & Gents' Hosiery, French Dressing, Paste Blacking, Shoe Findings
—AND—
A GREAT VARIETY OF GOODS,
Too numerous to mention.
I am selling all my Boots and Shoes AT VERY LOW PRICES,
And Warrant Them To Give Good Wear.
Those that buy my BROGANS, made to my order, find them to be of better quality than any others.
☞ Please remember that repairing is done at short notice.

NORFOLK, ss. PROBATE COURT.

TO the Heirs-at-Law, Next-of-Kin, and all other persons interested in the Estate of

WILLIAM STILES,

late of Quincy, in said County, teamster, deceased,

GREETING:

Whereas, a certain instrument, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, has been presented to said Court for probate, by William S. Pattee, of said Quincy, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him the executor therein named.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be holden at Quincy, in said County of Norfolk, on the second Wednesday of September next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this Citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the Quincy Patriot, printed at Quincy, the last publication to be two days at least, before said Court.

Witness, GEORGE WHITE, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this sixth day of August, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine.

Poetry.

Three Young Fishers.

Three fishers went cautiously out the back door,
In the morning gleam, while their mothers slept;
Each thought of his school-room deserted once more,
And the pious boys jeered them as downward they crept.
But boys will fish
While mothers are snug,
For fish-hooks are plenty,
And worms are a drug,
And the pond is full of gudgeon.

Three mothers rose up in their righteous wrath
As soon as they found that their offsprings were gone;
Each sought for her slipper, and followed the path,
Where the dear ones had vanished at early dawn.
But boys will "hook,"
While mothers are stern;
And in smiles they went forth,
But in tears they return,
Though the pond be full of gudgeon.

Three urchins lay supperless down in their beds,
And they sighed when their mothers had left them alone;
For their rods had been broken across their heads,
And the fish all eaten except the bone.
For boys will fish,
But mothers must "lick;"
And the fellow that stands
It the best is a brick,
And is apt to get most of the gudgeon.

Agricultural, &c.

Milking Pails.

After all the care bestowed on the animals to keep them clean the milk will still need straining. Hairs and bits of straw or chaff may be clean but they are out of place in milk or butter.

We prefer to have pails kept specially for milking, without any strainers, and each cow's milk as it is drawn is poured into a strainer pail, kept in some clean airy place in the stable. In milking always keep the same side of the pail towards the cow, and pour the milk into the strainer pails from the opposite side, where there is the least dirt or hairs.—The smaller the diameter of the milking pails, the less the risk of collecting hairs and dust in the milk.

Milking pails should be made of the heaviest tin, and bound with large sized wire to give them stiffness and strength, and, like all tin utensils designed for dairy use, should have all the joints and seams thoroughly filled with sodder, so there shall be no place for particles of milk to hide and lodge, and become tainted.

The Dalrymple Farms. The Chicago Times correspondent has just been through the wheat fields of the Dalrymple farms. They aggregate an area of 20,000 acres of solid wheat, and are estimated to yield an average of 20 bushels to the acre. A procession of thirty-five reapers and self-binders is tirelessly passing around the out-skirt of the last field we visited. A small army of harvesters is setting the wheat in shocks. Another detachment of laborers is running a steam threshing-machine, and the engine is run entirely by straw fuel, the straw being fed into the fire by an automatic stoker. The whole yield of wheat will be between 200,000 and 300,000 bushels. Already a large force of men and teams are delivering wheat from the fields into the cars of the Northern Pacific Railroad, and when under full headway, young Dalrymple says, as to threshing, that all these farms will send away twenty-five loaded cars each day until the entire yield is disposed of by shipment to the Chicago market.

☞ French feeders, it is said, find that feeding the fowls with boiled or steamed carrots, chopped into small pieces, rapidly fattens them and imparts an agreeable flavor to flesh, greatly relished by epicures, and that fowls thus fed sell more rapidly than others.

☞ Careful and detailed reports from all the cotton producing States give the assurance of at least an average crop, with a probability of better results even than last year, when the crop was larger except one than any before harvested.

☞ A Miss Sadie Kellogg of New Fairfield, Conn., is reported by the Vermont Mirror and Farmer, to have made last year three-quarters of a ton of butter, and to have carried it to market and sold it herself.

☞ Herman Porter has a splendid sample of the champion tomato growing in his garden, at South Braintree. The vines measures from the ground 5 1-2 feet.

Anecdotes.

Quack. "So you prefer my medicines to those of Dr. Pillsbury?"

Mrs. Mulligan. "Och, indade, docther, dear, ye're a deal better than the other old 'umbug."

"Have you got the lesson to-day?" a school teacher of a pupil whose head was bandaged up under a couple of inches of flannel.

"No, ma'am," replied the pupil.

"Have you got your catechism with you?" asked the teacher.

"No, ma'am,"

"Have you got anything?" again asked the teacher getting a little impatient.

"Yeth, ma'am," was the timid reply.

"What is it?"

"The mumpth, ma'am."

A clergyman was endeavoring to instruct one of his Sunday-school scholars, a ploughboy, on the nature of a miracle.

"Now, my boy," said he, "suppose you should see the sun rising in the middle of the night, what should you call that?"

"The mun, plase, sur,"

"No, but," said the clergyman, "suppose you knew that it was not the moon, but the sun, and that you saw it actually rise in the middle of the night, what should you think?"

"Plase, sur, I should think it was time to get up."

He Smelt Brimstone. A Universalist of Newburyport has a weakness for clams. His wife is a devout believer in the rule of "r," which forbids them in a reeking June, and lays down the law forbidding clams in her kitchen. So our lover of clams gets up like the Chickaleery bloke, "werry early in the mornin'," to fry a nice mess which he had procured. He went to the cupboard to get some meal to roll the clams in. There happened to be two paper bags, just alike, one full of powdered sulphur. The man got the wrong bag. He rolled his clams, put them on the fire, and whew! the vision which he saw of carcasses frying in burning brimstone gave a severe shock to his Universalist creed. Since then he has heard nothing but "brimstone" on all hands.

Industrious. Norwalk has a Swede who is the hardest working man in Connecticut. He is occupied in a foundry and every day does what is considered a fair day's work for two men. Commencing work at four in the morning, he keeps busy until after seven at night, not even stopping for his meals. When he goes to his work in the morning he carries with him a pail containing soup and black bread. This pail he places on a shelf over his bench, and when hungry he grasps the pail in his teeth, and throwing his head back, drinks the soup. While he is drinking his fingers are busy packing the sand into the mold, and when he stops for a bite of black bread it is for an instant. His day's work is always 200 molds, while 120 molds is considered a good day's work for a first class workman.

A Cat Story. Charles C. Hall, a New Haven, Conn., harness maker, has a natural curiosity in the shape of a cat without hind legs. Its method of walking is necessarily peculiar, as it is obliged to elevate its body in the air in order to establish an equilibrium. In this manner it is able to get around in lively style, and as a mouser can hold its own with many four-legged cats.

☞ A hen belonging to Burleigh S. Wells, at Great Falls, N. H., is eccentric. She left her nest of eggs on which she had been placed to set, and stepped into a barrel containing some kittens and hovered her wings over the little pussies, refusing to leave them. The old cat couldn't drive her, and man, woman or child couldn't stir her at last accounts.

☞ An intelligent Lewiston, Me., blacksmith took a contract to repair a wagon the other day. Lewiston is considered a temperance city and no one ever supposed that the man was cross-eyed, but he returned the wagon with both hind wheels on one side and the fore wheels on the other side.

If you feel dull drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR OR MEDICINE.

The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the World!

AN EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen.

Regulate the Liver and prevent CHILLS AND FEVER, MALARIOUS FEVERS, BOWEL COMPLAINTS, RESTLESSNESS, JAUNDICE AND NAUSEA.

TAKE SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

BAD BREATH.

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath, and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be so easily corrected if you will take Simmons' Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your Appetite, Complexion, and General Health.

PILES!

How many suffer torture day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering from Piles. Yet relief is ready to the hand of almost any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR, is no drastic violent purge; but a gentle assistant to nature.

CONSTIPATION!

SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulation from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails.

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache.

3—5—8.

Three men go on a foraging expedition and return with the following plunder:—

A—3 eggs.
B—5 eggs.
C—$8 in Confederate money.

Being very hungry C offers to give the money to A and B to be divided in just proportion, if they will divide an omelet made from the eight eggs, each eating one-third.

They agree—make and eat the omelet—but cannot decide on the division of the money. How should the eight dollars be divided? W. H. N.

Office of the Board of Health.
QUINCY, MARCH 5, 1879.

THE Board of Health issues the following notice:—That on and after MONDAY, March 10th, 1879, the following provisions of Chapter 26 of the General Statutes will be strictly enforced:—

SEC. 47. When a householder knows that a person within his family is taken sick of . . . . any . . . . . . disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the . . . . . . board of health of the town in which he dwells. If he refuses or neglects to give such notice, he shall forfeit a sum not exceeding $100.

SEC. 48. When a physician knows that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with . . . . any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the . . . . . . board of health of the town; and if he refuses or neglects to give such notice, he shall forfeit for each offence a sum not less than $50, nor more than $100.

The Board considers the above sections to apply to scarlet fever, small pox, diphtheria, measles and whooping cough.

Strength for To-Day.

Strength for to-day is all that we need,
  As there never will be a to-morrow;
For to-morrow will prove but another to-day;
  With its measure of joy and sorrow.

Then why forecast the trials of life
  With such sad and grave persistence,
And watch and wait for a crowd of ills
  That as yet have no existence?

Strength for to-day—what a pleasant boon
  For the earnest souls who labor,
For the willing hands that minister
  To the needy friend or neighbor!

Strength for to-day—that the weary here,
  In the battle for right may quail not,
And the eyes bedimmed with bitter tears,
  In their search for light may fail not.

Strength for to-day on the down-hill track,
  For the travellers near the valley,
That up, far up the other side,
  Ere long they may safely rally.

Strength for to-day—that our precious youth
  May happily shun temptation,
And build, from rise to the set of the sun,
  On a strong and sure foundation.

Strength for to-day—in house and home,
  To practice forbearance sweetly;
To scatter kind words and loving deeds,
  Still trusting in God completely.

Receipts, Wit, &c.

CLOVE CAKE. One pound flour, one pound sugar, half pound butter, one pound raisins, two eggs, teacupful sweet milk, one teaspoon saleratus, tablespoon cloves, tablespoon cinnamon, and tablespoon nutmeg.

COFFEE CAKE. One cup butter, one cup sugar, one cup molasses, two cups chopped raisins, one-fourth pound citron, one pound currants, one cup hot, strong coffee poured on the butter, three eggs, one teaspoonful soda, one-half teaspoonful cream of tartar, dark spices of all kinds.

FOR BOILS. The skin of a boiled egg is the most efficacious remedy that can be appled to a boil. Peel it carefully, wet and apply it to the part affected. It will draw off the matter and relieve the soreness in a few hours. Simple, but efficacious.

COAL ASHES. The best purpose to which coal ashes can be applied, in town or country, is in making garden walks. If well laid down, no weeds or grass will grow, and by use they become as solid and more durable than bricks.

☞ "Now, then, children," said a parish school-mistress showing her children off on examination day: "Who loves men?" "You, missus," was the unexpected reply.

☞ "Remember who you are talking to, sir," said an indignant parent to a facetious boy; "I am your father." "Well who's to blame for that?" said the young impertinence, "'taint me."

☞ "How many children have you?" asked a friend of an old acquaintance. "Well, I have five, but they were eating cucumbers when I left, and they may be all doubled up now."

☞ "Doctor," said a careful wife to the practitioner, who was cutting open her husband's shirt as he was in a fit of apoplexy, "cut, if you please, along the seam."

☞ A fashionably dressed woman entered a drug store the other day, and informed the clerk that her husband had overloaded his stomach, and that she desired to get an epidemic to relieve him.

☞ A little girl the other night said her prayers as usual, but happening to remember that there was another girl of the same name in town, added her own street and number, so that no mistakes should be made.

☞ A young lover who didn't understand the language of flowers was presented by his adored with a flower of the genus papaver. "Ah," he mused, after a few minutes' contemplation, "she refers me to her popy." But before he called again he consulted a floral dictionary, and when he learned that the poppy is an emblem of stupidity he—well, he didn't call on her again.—Norristown Herald.

☞ A Seymour, Indiana, man picked up a stick of cordwood the other night, and chased a cat across the back yard. He didn't catch the cat but he caught the clothes line between his teeth, and now when he smiles the corners of his mouth pass each other at the back of his neck.

☞ A Maine parson who announced from his pulpit that a circus was about to visit the town, and that if any of his flock should attend he would gladly give them a letter of dismission, was somewhat mollified in his wrath when a bright and bold little Sunday-school scholar of eight, presented himself at the pulpit with, "Please, sir, will you give me the ticket to the circus that you promised?"

☞ A northern minister was introduced to a Georgia minister, and inquires after his work. "I preach, sar, on Colonel Gordon's plantation." "How many colored people have you there?" "Well, sah, 'bout a hundred and seventy-five." "And how many have you in in the church?" "Dat 'pends, sah, altogether on de time ob de year. In de 'vival times deys all members. In de backslidin' times der's nobody's members, but Uncle Billy and old Aunt Katy."

Miscellany.

MISS DEXTER'S PUPIL.

"Teaching is a thankless calling," said a gentleman standing near me on the piazza of a popular sea-side hotel, last summer.

"That is true," replied his companion, "and so is the work of superintending a school committee. This dealing with ignorant and conceited parents who want to dictate what their children shall study, who often have some petty spite against the teacher or committee to gratify, and who will not stop to break up a school, could they carry out their miserable schemes, is utterly disagreeable. No, my friend, there is not money enough to tempt me to have anything to do with the management of the schools in our good old town of Marshton," and the two men descended the piazza steps and walked on towards the beach.

A lady near me with whom I had formed a pleasant little acquaintance, looked up and smiled. "The conscientious teacher, who loves her work," she said, "does not always look for immediate fruition of all her words and hopes. She is now sowing good seeds, knowing not just when or how the harvest will succeed. I taught school many years, and am far from calling it a 'thankless calling.' I meet my old scholars everywhere, and the thanks I have received from them, orally and by letter, are the pleasantest spots in my life's experience."

Just then the owner and proprietor of the great hotel, Landlord Strong, passed by the bluff before us, glanced up and smiled and raised his hat. Although he was a very shrewd business man, with great executive capacity, he was at the same time large-hearted, gentlemanly and courteous to every one, and a universal favorite. I knew that this charming woman, who had been known as Miss Dexter, had the best room in the hotel, was waited upon with extra attention, had the most stylish horses and carriages at her bidding, and that the landlord never passed her without raising his hat and bowing as if to a queen.

The gentle little woman by my side returned the bow and smiled, and then turning to me again said: "You are gathering facts all the time; let me tell you a story for your note-book, to be used at some future time—not here of course." I thanked her, and she went on:

"I began to teach when I was fifteen, with a great many enthusiastic ideas in my little head, in regard to my high and noble calling, which I have kept with me till this present hour. After teaching a number of terms, I was employed here in this town to teach the village school in the very same little building, around the corner yonder, now repaired and used for the primary scholars. I boarded at this hotel, a very small establishment then, but well kept by Widow Rugg.

"The committee had hired me entirely on my reputation as a teacher in an adjoining town, and when they came to see me face to face, and notice my youthful appearance, they evidently had some misgivings as to my ability to 'manage' the larger pupils of the school, whom they designated 'a hard set.' 'Now there was Tom Strong,' said they, 'we may as well tell you at the start that you had better let him alone; get along with him the best way you can. When you cannot stand it with him any longer, let us know and we will send him home. The boy cannot be taught anything. We have had conscientious, painstaking teachers, who declared that it was impossible to teach him to count, spell or write his own name even.'

"I found this lad to be tall and thin, blue and pinched, with hardly life enough to do anything but make grotesque faces for the amusement of the children. I put an end to that at once by making a rule that any scholar who laughed at Tom Strong's faces, should sit with the dirty ragged, unkempt boy, and take lessons from him as a facial contortionist, while the rest of the school looked on.

"It did seem as if the poor fellow could not be made to remember anything; but I said to myself, 'He is not an idiot and he shall be taught to read and spell easy words at first, and to write his name.' He had blundered along in an advanced reader, with a class of live, bright boys of his own age and size. Not wishing to humiliate the lad by putting him into the 'infant class' where he really belonged, I had him read by himself from my pretty red morocco-bound Bible, beginning with the Sermon on the Mount, and taking up the Parables in good time.

"I set him easy copies in writing. His indolent and rebellious conduct over this part of my labor with him attracted the attention of one of the older girls, who said to me one day at recess, 'I don't suppose Tom Strong has strength enough to learn to write or to apply himself to any thing. His folks are very poor and shiftless, and they never have any meat to eat, nor any good, nutritious food. He never brings any dinner or lunch to eat at noon, and never runs and plays with the boys. He is not strong enough, teacher.'

"That gave me the clue to the secret of the strange hungry look in the poor boy's eyes. I lay awake and thought about it all that night, and in the morning resolved to act. After breakfast I went down to the kitchen and made Mrs. Rugg give me two or three generous slices of roast beef and bread, some doughnuts and cheese, wrapped up in paper.

"Going early to the school-house, I found Tom there, as usual, the first scholar to be on hand always, although he lived the farthest off. Calling him to me and giving him the lunch, I said, 'If you will try to do as well as you can this term, and be a good, studious boy, I will bring you a nice lunch every day.' He looked at me wonderingly, at the same time involuntarily reaching out his long skinny hands for the coveted package.

"I be awful hungry, school-marm,' he said, 'and seein' there haint none er the children roun' ter larf at me, I'll take it sure enough, an' eat it now. I haint never had sich er great hunk er meat er cheese afore in mer life,' and he straightway fell to devouring the food like a starved dog. After it had all disappeared, even to the last crumb, he gave a little grunt of satisfaction, and looked up to me as if his appetite had only been sharpened and that a further installment of food would not come amiss.

"That night I made a bargain with Mrs. Rugg. Tom Strong was to come to her kitchen every noon for a hearty, wholesome, hot meat dinner, and I was to pay for it. I was in straightened circumstances myself, besides I was trying to pay my way through Vassar, but I deeply commiserated the lad, and then I was curious to see what good food, and enough of it, would do for his mental elevation.

"'The boy begins to show his keeping,' said Mrs. Rugg to me at the end of the week; 'but dear me! hasn't he an appetite! It takes a heap of victuals to fill him up!'

"Indeed, the metamorphosis, both physical and mental, that had taken place in the boy by the time the school-year had closed was something wonderful. Although he refused to take his dinners at the hotel after the first term at my expense, he continued taking them there during the year, paying for them by doing errands, pumping water, etc. He grew plump and sleek, learned to read, spell and write, and after a short time had little or no difficulty with the four fundamental processes of Arithmetic. All his old time nervousness, irritability and frequent fits of apathy were gone; he readily fell into studious ways and soon mastered whatever he undertook. His dogged persistence was remarkable. His deportment was also exemplary; he never gave me the least trouble, and tried to serve me every way in his power.

"In due time I entered Vassar, and graduated. Subsequently I taught here and there a year or two, and then married my husband, whom you have met here. Having heard nothing whatever of Tom Strong, or from this village for years, one day, just after I had begun housekeeping, I was surprised to get a letter with the familiar name of Marshton upon it as the postmark; here it is for I brought it down with me this morning, having determined to confide to you this, one of the pleasantest episodes of my life, some time during the day, were you at leisure and willing to grant me the opportunity."

I took the letter in my hand. Its chirography was plain but handsome, and it read:

"MARSHTON, APRIL 18, 18—

"Mrs. Rev. Dr. Andrew Knowlton:

"DEAR MADAM,—I saw your marriage in the newspapers the other day, and that is the first and only intelligence I have had of you since you taught school in this village. Are you really dear Miss Dexter, and do you remember poor stupid Tom Strong? Well, I am he. In short, I want to thank you for making a man of me. The first realization I ever had that I was a human being like the other boys of your school, with capabilities of self-improvement and future usefulness, came through your labors in my behalf in the school-room, and your charitable provisions for my bodily wants at good Mrs. Rugg's bountiful table. When you found me I was nearly starved, body and soul. I well remember just how those dinners, meal by meal, built me up, mentally as well as physically. Those reading lessons in the New Testament, too, built me up in a spiritual way. In every sense of the word I was 'born again' that memorable year under your kind care. I kept on staying at the hotel, doing chores for board and schooling. I crept up and up, until Mrs. Rugg died, when I became proprietor of the hotel myself. Our pleasant village here by the sea has grown to be quite a famous summer resort. To keep pace with the public demands, I have greatly enlarged the hotel, and have added many modern improvements. And now I beg leave to invite you and your distinguished husband to come and make me a visit whenever it shall be most convenient to you.

"Yours, most gratefully,
"THOMAS H. STRONG.

I handed back the letter to the sweet little woman, the eyes of both of us suffused with tears, while she said: "The July following the receipt of this letter, when my husband's annual vacation began, we accepted the invitation, and have been here every year since. We have our old rooms newly furnished this season, and we are proud to count as one of our best friends our genial Landlord Strong, who is a friend to the whole world, and who will take off his hat when he meets me, because he says: "I made a man of him."—New England Journal of Education.

COSTUMES.

Genteel poverty finds nothing so convenient just now as bunting. Rich people wear it freely, and just for that reason the tired schoolmistress, or the clergyman's wife may freshen up in a bunting costume without the feeling that they are assuming a "badge of any kind. The pastor's young daughter too in her toilette of bunting may try her small coquettish airs unfettered by the thought that Mrs. Grump over the way is calling her extravagant, or that Miss Muggins is whispering awful things to Deacon Sparse. Then too, bunting unites so well with the varied silks and ribbons of the day; can be made grave or gay just as one wishes, and is suited to morning or evening; rainy weather, or sunshine. And as it has been said, it is worn by rich as well as poor. Mrs. Marshall O. Roberts appeared the other morning at Saratoga in a costume of white bunting combined with yellow and black striped satin. The same evening, Mrs. Edwin Booth wore a pale ecru bunting adorned with black velvet bows, and Marie Letta as in the recesses of her room at Congress Hall she ran scales to her Weber piano, preparatory to her evening concert, wore a charming morning toilette of white bunting trimmed with blue satin bows. The Weber indeed seems a favorite instrument at Saratoga, for I have observed it in the leading hotel parlors; and it is selected for concerts given by prominent musicians.

BELTS.

Fancy a delicate young lady strapping around her waist a surcingle of coarse canvas, red, white, blue or yellow, fastened with yellow leather thongs, and you have what is regarded as sweet at the present time. The wider, the more stylish. An epidemic of belts has certainly broken out and is spreading. Exclusive houses are making up more refined specimens in silk of various colors, which are fastened by expensive straps of alligator skin. For alligator skin is one of our rages and permeates the entire world of satchels, pocket-books belts, bags and the like; nothing being thought so lovely as the crinkled yellowish, mottled surfaces.

FALL DRESS GOODS.

Of course it will be quite a while before these are shown, but I have had admittance to a sanctum where only a few of the chosen are allowed to enter, and so I can prophecy. Striking novelties appear. What is called "silk shot" effects are very noticeable. Here the goods, which often are wrought in small armure squares, diagonals, or straight rows, show stitchings of bright colored silk at regular intervals, or again, the silk mixtures are thickly scattered with no regularity whatever. Jacquard goods displaying bright silken flowers on a dark ground, are largely imported, but in opposite style, many fabrics are woven with dark, invisible stripes half obscured by grayish cloudings. The bandana ideas of the summer are repeated in very bold bright plaids, with satine, Scotch cheviot, and twilled surfaces, and these are in great numbers. But the chief novelty is the introduction of fine soft dress goods, having cashmere and broche effects. Fancy an Indian shawl, striped or otherwise, reduced down in pattern to less than a dozenth part of the original size, and you have an idea of what these novel and very beautiful materials resemble.

LUCY CARTER.

About Advertising.

A correspondent in the American Newspaper Reporter has the following about advertising:—

The man who says he doesn't believe in advertising, is doing just what he deprecates. He hangs coats outside of his door, or puts dry goods in his windows—that's advertising.

He has printed cards lying on his counter—that's advertising.

He sends out drummers through the country, or puts his name on his wagon—that's advertising.

He labels his articles or his manufactures—that's advertising.

If he has lost his cow, he puts a written notice in the post office, or tells his sister-in-law—and that's advertising too.

He has his name put up in gilt letters over the door—what is that but advertising?

He paints his shop green or red; or if a tailor, he wears the latest style; if a doctor, he has his boy call him out of church in haste; if an auctioneer he bellows to attract the attention of passers by; if a heavy merchant, he keeps a pile of boxes on his sidewalk in front of his store—and all for advertising.

A man can't do business successfully without advertising, and the question is whether to call to his aid the engine that moves the world—the printing press with its thousands of messengers who are working by night and by day, the steam engine adding to its repeating capacity untold power and miraculous speed; or, rejecting all these, go back to the days when newspapers, telegraphs and railroads were unknown.

☞ A five-year old youngster, seeing a drunken fellow, said: "Mother, did God make that man? "Yes," she replied. "I wouldn't have done it!" was the young innocent's answer.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, D. C., AUG. 28.

Hon. A. S. Hewitt, of New York, takes this hopeful view of affairs.—"There is no doubt that we are beginning an era of healthful prosperity. Nothing can check it. We are the granary for the world. Our crop this year is enormous. Industries thrive. Last year we put down over 3,000 miles of railroad. This year it will be 4,000. The only question is whether the prosperity will continue. It is bound to continue, I think, but we shall have no era of high prices, simply a healthful, remunerative business, with moderate prices, that will enable consumers to go on with their enterprises. This is true prosperity. High prices check progress. We have got to that stage when everything will go on without an era of high prices.

It is noticeable that Mr. Tilden, in an interview a few days since, used language to the same general effect. Both these men are cautious and conservative, besides being men of very extensive business connections, and what they say on such a subject should therefore have weight.

More cities desire the National Conventions of the two parties, next year, than claim the birthplace of Homer.—The true place for all such gatherings is Washington. It is the most beautiful and best paved city in the Union, and one of the healthiest. The politicians know the city, and most of the delegates of both parties will desire to see it. The attention of the proper committees is respectfully called to our advantages.

Hon. Robert G. Ingersoll proposes to organize a new party, based on the largest liberty, the taxation of church property, the repeal of laws for the observance of the Sabbath, and the freedom of schools from the control of superstition. At least this is what he says the party will attempt to bring about. Hon. Robt. G. Ingersoll will have his hands full.

The New York Sun, which is censorious when censure is possible, and suspicious when guilt is imaginable, editorially says of the Conkling-Sprague trouble, that "we unhesitatingly accept the assurance of Mrs. Sprague that there has never been any criminal conduct on her part." So does every person in Washington who has any acquaintance with the parties.

MERRILL.

Singular Mishaps.

Strange mischances with fatal results are daily happening here and there.

A Boston butcher ran against a knife that lay on a block, severed an artery, and bled to death.

A Denver woman caught her foot in a railroad frog, and could not get loose before a train ran over her.

A Vermont farmer sneezed with a straw in his mouth, drew it into his lungs, and died choking.

A horse kicked a Michigan boy into a deep well, where he was drowned.

The shoe flew off the foot of a kicking mule, in Nashville, and fractured the skull of a baby.

An Oregon girl swallowed her engagement ring, and lived only a week afterward.

While standing on his head, on the top of a high fence post, an Iowa boy lost his balance, fell into a tub of hot water, and was fatally scalded.

A stone thrown by a playfellow, broke a glass from which a St. Louis boy was drinking, driving some of the pieces down his throat, and he died a few days afterward in great agony.

Looking up to watch the flight of an arrow, a Nashville woman did not see it descending directly over her head, and the sharp metal point penetrated her brain through one of her eyes, killing her instantly.

Stopping a Newspaper.

An exchange has the following allegory, which we commend to careful consideration:—"A certain man hit his the against a pebble and fell headlong to the ground. He was vexed, and under the influence of anger and self-sufficiency he kicked mother earth right saucily.—With imperturbable gravity he looked to see the earth itself dissolve, and come to naught. But the earth remained, and only his poor foot was injured in the encounter. This is the way of man. An article in a newspaper touches him in a weak spot, and forthwith he sends to stop his paper. With great complacency he looks to see the crash, when he finds he only hit his own toe against a world that does not perpetually feel the shock, and injures no one but himself."

Iron for Flowers.

Any person who cultivates only a few flowers in pots or on grassy lawns, or on spacious parterres, may readily satisfy himself of the exceedingly useful part the proper materials play in the production of beautiful flowers.

Even white flowers, or roses that have petals nearly white, will be greatly improved in brilliancy by providing iron, sand and unleached ashes for the roots of growing plants. Ferruginous material may be applied to the soil where flowers are growing or where they are to grow by procuring a supply of oxide of iron in the form of the dark colored scales that fall from the heated bars of iron when the metal is hammered by the blacksmiths.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 30, 1879.

Short communications and items of news earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.

☞ Anonymous communications are not published.

Our Public Schools.

The usual teachers' meeting will be held in the Coddington school house, Monday, Sept. 1. Sessions from 10 to 12 A. M. and 2 to 5 P. M. Lessons and lectures are to be given by Prof. S. S. Greene, Miss J. H. Stickney, L. W. Anderson, the Superintendent and others.

School begins Tuesday morning at 9. Parents will remember that the little ones who have never attended school must enter school during the first week of the term or wait until the next term.

There will be no Training Class this term. Graduates of our High School will however have an opportunity to learn how to teach.

Another Strike.

We are sorry to be called to announce this week another Granite Cutters' strike, as we believe it does the cutters great injury, as well as the contractors and the town. Many have suffered severely from the effects produced by the one last year, and were just beginning to get over it; now we are to have another. It is not this time because the workmen want more pay, but because the Union men do not wish to have a non-Union man work beside them.

It appears that a cutter who has worked for a number of months for Messrs. McKenzie & Patterson left and went to work at Mr. W. H. Mitchell's yard at West Quincy. The Union men did not like it because Mr. Mitchell hired this "scab," as they called him, and accordingly stopped work. The contractors then held a meeting, and after a lengthy consultation, agreed to give the Union men two days to return to their work. If they did not resume their old positions by that time, the Union men in all the other yards in town would be discharged as soon as they finished the stone upon which they were at work. Failing to return to their work the contractors are discharging their Union men as fast as they finish the jobs they are working on.

DARING ROBBERY. The house of Mr. N. B. Furnald on Washington street, was entered on Thursday night by raising one of the front windows. On gaining access to the house, the rogue passed into the sitting room, and from thence to the side room, where Mr. and Mrs. Furnald were sleeping. Mr. F.'s clothes were taken out of his room into the parlor, where the pockets were rifled of their contents. In the breast pocket of the coat was a pocket-book containing about twenty dollars, and a small amount of silver was in the pockets of the pants, all of which were taken. The key of Mr. F.'s safe was with the silver, but for some reason the fellow did not use it, but left it laying near the front door sill. Had he opened the safe he would have made a good haul. That thief may consider himself a remarkably lucky fellow, for if he had disturbed Mr. Furnald's slumbers, he would have met with a lively reception.

PERSONAL. From letters received by the family of Mr. Chas. H. Hardwick, we learn that this gentleman and his daughter were in Rome on the 5th instant and enjoying the sightseeing of that ancient city. Among the many places of attraction they have visited in Italy was Mt. Vesuvius, and Mr. H. was one of the few who climbed to its very top and looked down into the depths of the yawning chasm; while he was on top of the mountain he had the pleasure of seeing it belch forth smoke and lava. His friends at home, it is said, are feeling rather anxious about him now that he has taken to the "crater." On Saturday last the party arrived in Paris where they were to remain for four days, and then they return to London.

LECTURES. Rev. Mr. Perry believes that the pulpit should be used for the discussion of such topics as are in the thoughts of the people. In accordance with this idea he purposes to give a course of practical talks on Sabbath evenings in September and October, upon the Money Question. Such topics as:—What is Money?—Advantages and Disadvantages of Paper Money—Capital and Interest—National Banks, &c., will be discussed. The first lecture will be given in the Universalist Church on the evening of Sept. 7th.

LARGE CHIMNEY. The polishing of our hard, rough granite has now become a necessity. Through the aid of machinery the price has been so reduced, that it is now within the reach of all; and it gives so smooth and glassy a finish that it adds greatly to the beauty of many a granite monument now found in our cemeteries.

Messrs. McKenzie & Paterson, at their polishing works near the canal, make this branch of the business a specialty; and the large increase in the business has necessitated them to add recently to their steam power another boiler of the same capacity, forty-five horse power, as the one they have had in use. This gives them ninety horse power.

To accommodate these boilers they have been obliged to build a very large chimney, one of the largest in town. Its height is fifty-two feet; at the base it is five feet square. About nineteen thousand bricks were used in its construction.

NOT SO, UNCLE JOE. Mr. Howard W. Hosie says that "Uncle Joe" is mistaken if he thinks the new reservoir at South Quincy holds but 12,000 gallons. Mr. Hosie says he filled it and he knows it holds over 15,000 gallons. His watering cart holds 1210 gallons, and it took it 12 1-2 times to fill it.

Others think that "Uncle Joe" does not wish to tell the truth, but purposely or mischievously makes the insinuations in last week's article, which are devoid of truth, for some evil motive.

Local Items.

☞ Miss Lucy A. Loud has recently returned from an interesting trip down South.

☞ Several of the Page family from this town visited Bedford last Wednesday, to join the Page family reunion.

☞ Willie N. Loud, clerk at Durgin's drug store, is enjoying himself for a short time in the city of New York.

☞ Charles W. Slack, Esq., editor of the Boston Commonwealth, with his wife and daughter, has been stopping at G. F. Pinkham's, Wollaston, this summer.

☞ Mr. Lewis Newcomb arrived home last Monday from New York city, where he had made a pleasant visit for six weeks.

☞ Quincy bay has been visited this week by a school of black fish, and some of our experts have succeeded in hooking a few handsome ones.

☞ Mr. George Bailey and wife, who have been visiting their friends in this town the past two weeks, left for their home in New York on Wednesday last.

☞ A grand union picnic of the Quincy, Weymouth and Rockland Temperance societies, will occur at Lovell's Grove, North Weymouth, on Sept. 13th.

☞ Messrs. P. F. Lacy and P. Carey of West Quincy, left Saturday last for New York, where they will spend a few days in business and pleasure.

☞ Mr. Louis A. Newcomb of New York, formerly of this town, made a short visit to his relatives in this place this week. He was accompanied by his wife.

☞ One of our Quincy boys, who has been on a recent tour to New Hampshire, says he saw while up in the Granite State the following word on a sign:—Quohquinapassakessananaquoy.

☞ Messrs. Davis & Fuller, of West Quincy, have a large contract for furnishing granite for the first and second stories of a new house to be built for Mr. Vanderbilt of New York.

☞ The Scotchmen of Quincy hold their annual picnic on Saturday, Sept. 13th, at Faulkner's Grove. Extensive preparations are being made to have a grand good time.

☞ The Rev. F. C. Baker has been obliged to resign his pastorate at Newry, Me., on account of ill-health. The doctors having forbid him to study any more, he returned to Quincy this week to seek rest.

☞ Mr. J. F. Merrill of the Boston Branch Store, returned from St. John, N. B., where he has been spending his vacation, on Thursday morning. He was unfortunate in having wet weather most of the time while absent.

☞ A delegation of members from Prohibition Division No. 9, S. of T., paid a visit to Dorchester Division, No. 30, Milton Lower Mills, on Wednesday evening, and spent a very pleasant evening.

☞ The choirs and Sunday school teachers of the several Catholic churches of Quincy parish, with a few invited guests, enjoyed a sail on Thursday last in a large steam yacht furnished them by the pastor, Rev. F. A. Friguglietti.

☞ While workmen were engaged in blasting the rocks on Granite street, on Monday last, a large block of granite was thrown against a house owned by Mr. John Wood, and the building was badly damaged.

☞ Mr. David B. Stetson has an excellent display of flowers,—his china-asters are very beautiful. Although he has scarcely a rod of land not covered with buildings or driveway, still very few of our citizens have a handsomer lot of flowers.

☞ We learn from the Hartford Courant of Aug. 23d, that Dr. William J Lewis, late Surgeon in the New York Hospital, has located in Albany, and entered into partnership with Dr. Wm. H. Bailey of that city. We have been informed that Dr. Lewis was a graduate of the Adams Academy of this town.

☞ The Rev. G. W. Whitney and wife made a short visit to this town on Friday. Mr. Whitney called on us, and we are pleased to say that he is looking as though the bracing air of Maine had been very beneficial to his health. He informed us that his wife was also much improved in health since her residence in the Pine Tree State.

☞ On Tuesday afternoon last, about 3 o'clock, fire was discovered in a small cupboard at the residence of Mr. James Carey in the west part of the town.—The alarm was immediately given, and through the exertions of Mr. C. and several others, the flames were extinguished with slight damage. Only for the presence of mind of Mrs. Carey, it would, no doubt, have been a large fire.

☞ Capt. George S——, our veteran teamer, having a day of rest on Saturday last, drew from his boss a $5 bill with which to pay his expenses on a brief pleasure trip. He had no wallet, and for want of a better receptacle, tucked the bill into the bowl of an empty pipe which he had in his pocket. Shortly afterward, wanting a smoke, he absent-mindedly filled the pipe, forgetting its precious contents, and smoked away both tobacco and money. Probably many a five dollar has been wasted in smoke, but none that gave so little satisfaction as this.

☞ At the twenty-sixth annual picnic of the Boston Caledonian Club held at Spy Pond Grove, on Thursday, the following persons from this town won prizes:—

John McGilvery, 3d prize, for putting heavy stone, and also 3d prize for putting light hammer.

James McGilvery, 1st prize, throwing light stone.

James Faulkner, 2d prize, throwing light stone.

VISITATION. Division 4, A. O. H. of West Quincy, paid a visit to Division 9, A. O. H. of East Weymouth on Tuesday evening last. The evening's enjoyment consisted of speeches, singing and dancing. During the evening a bountiful collation was served which was excellent, and was done justice to; after which the visitors bade their East Weymouth brothers adieu, and departed for their homes.

THE ILLUMINATION. Many of our readers are making preparations to visit Oak Bluffs to-day, and witness the grand illumination to take place there this evening. It is expected to be one of the finest displays ever witnessed in this country. The Old Colony Railroad Company is making extensive arrangements to accommodate all who desire to go. Not less than fifty thousand persons will probably be present. The fare for the round trip has been reduced to $2.25. Our citizens are not obliged to go to the city to purchase their tickets or to take the cars, for they can do both in Quincy. The first train in the morning leaves the Quincy station at 8 o'clock, and by changing cars at Braintree can go either by way of New Bedford or Woods Holl; or leave Quincy at 11.30 A. M., by way of New Bedford, or 3.56 P. M., by way of Woods Holl. The tourists can return to-morrow anytime, or on Monday, the tickets being good for either of these days.

REVERE BEACH. There has been during the past fortnight large sales of shore lots at Revere Beach. On Monday, having an invitation to visit this fine beach, we improved the opportunity and spent a few hours very pleasantly.—As we left the cars at the Pavilion, who should we meet but Mr. James W. Rideout of this town, who had arrived on the same train. We stepped inside and there we met with another of our townsmen, Mr. Loring A. French, who acts as steward of the house, and is working hard and giving excellent satisfaction to the guests, and also to Col. Meserve, the proprietor. We also found here George Odiorne, who is well known to our Quincy boys. He was looking well, and appears to be as happy as ever. We then went out to the beach lots, where a band was playing, and auctioneer Bird was selling lots from one to five cents per foot. Here we found A. W. Russell, Esq., Charles H. Edwards, and other gentlemen from this town, with their pockets full of "rocks," ready for bargains.

PERSONAL. Rev. Prof. E. P. Thwing, of Brooklyn, N. Y., whose "Notes from Abroad" we are now publishing, is remembered by many of our readers as one of the Quincy pastors nearly twenty years ago. His "Rambles Abroad" were printed in the PATRIOT in 1863, and he has been since then an occasional contributor to our columns. We understand that he expects to publish on his return to America an account of his travels this summer in the British Isles and on the continent, and a London edition of his "Drill Book in Vocal Culture," which has had large sales in this country, is soon to be issued by a prominent publishing house on Pater-noster Row. During the spring the professor was engaged as a vocal instructor of the students in Rutzers college and New Brunswick Theological Seminary, New Jersey, and may become permanently connected there this fall.

BAND CONCERT. Gilcher's Harmonia Band of Boston, will give the fifth and last concert of the series, in East Milton next Wednesday evening at 7.15 o'clock. The programme for the entertainment will consist of the following pieces:—

1.	March, "Souvenire de Berlin,"	Barlow
2.	Selection from "Il Trovatoire,"	Verdi
3.	Waltz, "St. Petersburg,"	Resti
4.	Selection, "Bohemian Girl,"	Wallace
5.	Schottische,	Faust
6.	"Robin Adair," arranged by T. K. Norman
7.	Selection, "Ana Bolonna,"	Donizetti
8.	Waltz, "der Prager,"	Gung'l
9.	"Defailid Days,"	Bishop
10.	Selection, "Pinafore."
11.	Selection, "Lucretia Borgia,"	Donizetti
12.	Galop, "Sentinel,"	Barlow

ANSWER TO PROBLEMS. We have received the following answer to the problem signed "W. H. N." in our last issue:—

"A should receive one dollar, and B seven dollars of the confederate money."

Messrs. Chas. R. Sherman and J. B. Chaffin both agree upon the above answer.

We find many do not agree with "TURF'S" answer in the PATRIOT of the 16th instant, in regard to the "Horse Problem." As to the horse costing $80, one might as well say $100, nothing definite as to the worth of the horse is given. The question is how much did he make on the two transactions, and the impression is naturally that he sold the horse in the first place for what he considered it worth, and if he did he made $20 on the horse, instead of $30 as "TURF" figures it.

ACCIDENT. The wife of Captain Ross of the sloop Granite of this town, fell overboard, near Leverett street bridge, Boston, on Wednesday afternoon, while drawing a pail of water over the side of the vessel. A. W. Smith, superintendent of the bridge and Patrolman Boutwell went to her rescue.

SHIPPING. Schooner Helena E. Russell, Capt. Mehaffy, sailed from Quincy Point on Saturday last, with granite from J. Q. Wild and others, for New York.

Schooner Addie John, Capt. A. W. Smith, arrived from Weymouth, Nova Scotia, on Monday, with wood for D. Howard Bills.

Schooner Gustie Wilson, Capt. Floyd, sailed on Wednesday for Philadelphia, loaded with granite from Messrs. Henry Barker & Sons.

☞ There is a dawning suspicion in the minds of a good many people that it is not so necessary to the welfare of the Fall River mills to cut down the wages of operatives as to cut off the heads of pious, canting, loud-mouthed hypocrites and thieves who sit in elegantly furnished rooms labelled "treasurer's private office."—Milford Journal.

DEATH OF A CENTENARIAN. We were among the number who on the 30th of July paid their respects to Mr. Samuel Curtis of Marshfield, who on that day reached the ripe old age of one hundred years. This good old man passed quietly away on the 21st instant, having been sick only two days.

COWS. E. F. E. Thayer, Esq., sells this afternoon at the farm of J. Mason, Esq., in Braintree, six cows.

☞ Mr. Frederick H. Miller has become proprietor of the Hingham Journal.

For the Patriot.

Notes from Abroad.

BY PROFESSOR E. P. THWING.

The trip to the Isle of Man, eighty miles from Liverpool, occupied five hours, and the steamer "King Orry," on which I sailed, carried a pleasant party of ladies and gentlemen, some like myself, bound on a pleasure excursion. We landed at Douglas, a popular watering place, stepping ashore on a large stone quay 1100 feet long, and very much like the Battery in New York city. This town is about as large as Portland, Me., having about 30,000 inhabitants, half the population of the island.

After spending the night at the "Belle View House," in Douglas, I went by rail across to the southern shore, about fifteen miles, passing many interesting historic localities, and getting a distant view of King Williams College. This southern part is most sacred to the Maux people, again and again drenched by the blood of their fathers fighting for liberty.

The scenery is varied, the geology interesting, as also its natural history. I was here reminded of the lines of the old Scotch poet:

> "I doe love this antient cittie:
> We never tread upon it but we set
> Our foot upon some revered historie."

In the afternoon I returned to Liverpool, and took the train for Leeds and York, spending the night on the way at Manchester. In York I was the guest of a friend who drove me about that ancient city, founded when Eli was High Priest in Judea, and showed me the magnificent Minster, one of the finest on the globe, and the ruined Abbey, where were scores of stone coffins hundreds of years old. Another day I visited Kuaresboro, where Eugene Aram taught school one hundred and fifty years ago, and entered the cave where the deed was done, near the river Nidd, into which Hood said the body was thrown.

After visiting the ancient village of Thwing, Yorkshire, where the family of that name lived as far back as in 1237, and where the old church built before that time still stands, I passed through Duffield, and Saturday evening arrived at Hull, where I enjoyed a Sabbath of rest and refreshment. The continued rainy weather has ruined the crops, and with the Zulu war and depressed manufactures, the people feel rather gloomy. The preacher prayed God to send relief soon. No one remembers such unseasonable weather. Thick under coats with overcoats are comfortable, yet it is "Dog-days," so called. On Monday I took the train for Rugby, and visited the famous school of which Dr. Arnold was master, and about which Thomas Hughes has written. Before evening I reached Bedford, where the Pilgrim's Progress was composed, and where John Buynan, the converted tinker, was so many years imprisoned.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.

One of the happiest days in England I spent at Cambridge, enjoying the quiet inspection of nearly all the seventeen colleges, thinking over in the stillness and solitude, what lives have there been formed the past six hundred years. The 8000 students are now away in vacation, but "waders" remain, and with square hat and gown give quaintness to the place. I have a guide-book with full account and engravings of the elegant buildings whose stone stairs have been worn by such men as Sir Isaac Newton, Lord Bacon, John Milton, Spencer, Dryden, Gray, Herbert, Coleridge, Wordsworth, and Tennyson, and by the martyrs Cranmer, Bradford, Ridley and Latimer; also, men like Walsingham, Walpole, Pitt, and Macauley. It was pleasant to look on the winding Cam and other objects which their eyes looked upon in their quiet strolls. Sitting in the Provost's cushioned stall, in the chapel of Trinity College, and seeing the glories of that immense and gorgeous pile, reared before America was discovered, I gave myself up to a few moments' reflection on the times and characters of ages long ago, and was at once refreshed and quickened.

☞ Governor Head, Major-General Hooker, Gen. W. B. Burnett and many other distinguished guests were present at the veterans' reunion at Weirs, N. H., Tuesday. The oration was delivered by Colonel Frank W. Parker of this town, followed by short remarks from General Hooker, Col. Thomas J. Whipple, and ex-Governor Smythe and others.

JURORS. Messrs. William B. Worster and Israel Waterhouse have been drawn to serve as jurors for the Criminal Session of the September term of the Superior Court for Norfolk County.

☞ We desire to call the attention of our readers to the advertisement in our paper of the Bryant & Stratton Commercial School, of Boston, now well known as the leading institution of its kind in America. The training given in this school has been the direct means of starting thousands of young men on a successful career in business life. We advise all who contemplate any change in schools to read the prospectus of this institution, which may be obtained, post free, by addressing the Principal, Mr. H. E. HIBBARD, 608 Washington street, Boston, Mass.

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate.

IN QUINCY.

BY Virtue of and pursuant to the power of sale contained in a certain Mortgage deed, given by Seth T. Dame to George F. Pinkham and others as they were Trustees of the Wollaston Land Associates, dated Sept. 9th, A. D., 1871, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Lib. 419, Fol. 9, and duly assigned by said Pinkham and others, Trustees, to the Weymouth Savings Bank by their Deed dated July 27th, A. Our Boston Correspondent.

Business prospect. The dawn of prosperity.—Our trade with foreign powers. The good times coming. Mortality in Boston. The city comparatively very healthy. General Butler the next Governor of Massachusetts.

AUGUST 28, 1879.

We have passed through a severe ordeal of business depression for the past six years. The duration of the panic and it sad results to no small portion of the commercial community are unprecedented in the history of our country. But it is evident as noonday we are getting out of our business embarrasments which were temporary, not chronic. Even now the times cannot be justly called hard in this country. As compared with the laboring classes of Great Britain, we have every reason for sincere congratulation. Throughout New England and the Middle States there are but few men and women now unemployed who are willing to work at reasonable wages. In future people must be contented with quick sales and smaller profits.

We have a rising and no longer a falling market. Accurate statistics show that the number of business failures is steadily decreasing both in the aggregate of individuals and in the amount of money involved. There is on all sides an evidence of an improved condition of business.

The balance of trade with other countries continues in our favor. And we are about to enjoy a beautiful harvest and find a profitable market for it abroad. The demands for our breadstuffs promise to be even greater than the past year. In truth, as to business matter, we evidently are on the threshold of a new and unprecedent period of prosperity. Laus Deo.

The summer which is fading away has been a very quiet season in Boston. A greater number of its citizens have temporarily left than ever was known before, but soon to return.

From the weekly statistics of mortality the city appears blessed with good health, compared with other localities, notwithstanding the loud complaints growing out of imperfect drainage.

The deaths in Boston last week, ending Saturday noon, numbered 140,—82 males and 58 females. In ward 15, South Boston, there were no deaths, and but one death each in wards 5, 11 and 25. Cholera infantum caused 32, consumption 23, dysentery and marasmus each 7. The city is so healthy that physicians have a season in part of rest or recreation.

Politics are getting lively in the "hub" but from present indications General Butler is to be the next Governor of Massachusetts, he seems now to have the inside track, but nous verrons. X

For the Patriot.

The Drama.

BOSTON, AUG. 28, 1879.

BOSTON MUSEUM—Inaugurated its 37th regular dramatic season last Monday evening, with "The School for Scandal," and a full house, greeted each familiar face upon the boards with a reception at once spontaneous, enthusiastic and prolonged. Mr. Charles Barron who after a year's absence returns as leading man, was welcomed with a perfect ovation, which quite unmanned him and he feelingly responded.

Tuesday evening "The Danicheff," was presented and will run until further notice. This beautiful melodrama has been but once presented to our public,—in May, 1877, at the Boston Theatre, by the Union Square Company. The present adaptation by Messrs. Harris & Williams, differs but slightly and in no material point from the former; the tone and sentiment is elevated and refined to an uncommon degree; the action strong, though at times sketchy and in the second act a trifle dull and slow; but in it the Museum Company find ample opportunities for their best work.

As Osip, the emancipated serf, a character almost god-like in its nobleness and self-sacrifice, who renounces his own hope and happiness in life that the woman he loves and cannot love him his young master who has been kind to him may be happy. Charles Barron agreeably surprised us with the quiet, even intensity and depth of his conception, which will not suffer incomparison with Chas. Thorn's remarkable impersonation.

Mr. Haworth, as Count Vladimir, was painstaking and on the whole did well, but he lacked the fire and intensity of feeling in the climax of the second act, and in the scene with Osip in the third, with which James O. Neil carried his audience en masse.

Mr. Wilson gave us a delightful and picturesque characterization of the eccentric and grasping old Zakaroff, which was quickly recognized and enjoyed by his friends.

Miss Georgie Tyler, as the Countess Danicheff, acted with painful endeavor to do the part justice, but she was overburdened and lacks the requisite physique, and in make up was not old enough by years. We doubt if she has entirely recovered from her illness of last year, for she seems to have lost some of her old fire, and acts by labor.

Annie Clark was all that could be desired as Princess Valanoff, the polished, subtile, revengeful woman of the world; but I am at a loss to know why she was not cast as "The Danicheff," which is the lady character of the drama.

Miss May Davanport was a beautiful Anna, and her scenes with Osip and Vladimir were marked by taste and discrimination. The balance of the cast did well, and the new members gave indications of promise. All will undoubtedly improve with repetition.

BOSTON THEATRE—opens its regular season next Monday evening, with the farcacle comedy of intrigue "Boulogne," which has proved an attraction in London; it will be followed by "Kit."

GAIETY—opens Monday, with Annie Pixley in "M'liss, or the child of the Sierassa," a melodrama of California life.

PARK THEATRE—presents next week "The Banker's Daughter."

GLOBE—closed. CRIT'

Reply to "Uncle Joe."

To the Editors of the Patriot:

He who seeks to criticise and assail others in the columns of the press and lacks the courage and manly independence to do so over his own name had much better remain in obscurity.

Your correspondent of last week, "Uncle Joe," knowingly misrepresents and mistakes facts or exibits a deplorable and inexcusable ignorance concerning the subject of what he writes, and I hope he will not take it too hard if my language seems severe when I say that his communication is inconsistant, false and absurd in the extreme, and were it not that there are those who swallow just such doses without further inquiry I should deem it unworthy of notice. Regarding the cost of the out-house in question, taxpayers can well afford to wait the report of expenditures which will probably show how much U. J. knows about it. The house is none too good. It would have been poor economy for the town to have built a cheaper one and I seriously doubt if any taxpayer who respects his children would have them use a poorer one for the few cents saved on his taxes by so doing. Regarding the price paid for plans, U. J. is evidently unacquainted with the value of an architect's time and services, a discussion on that point would be a waste of time and space.

As regards the "Adams School" (for I infer that is the one referred to) no mistake was made. Ample provisions for heating apparatus and chimneys was originally planned, executed and now exists, and no danger is connected with any part of the work.

Regarding ventilation, I would say, first, that there are nine rooms instead of thirteen as he states it; secondly, and I hope U. J. will take intelligent notice of the fact, that there are six ventilating flues,—four that are two feet square each, and two that are eight by twelve inches each. What I deem a sufficiency.

Respectfully yours,
JOHN L. FAXON.

The Crow's Nest.

DANA, AUG. 11th, 1879.

To the Publishers of the Patriot:

Through the carelessness of some of Uncle Sam's agents, my letter which was written for the PATRIOT of August 16th, failed to reach you, and as those who made the party were desirous of having their friends know what an enjoyable time they had at a kitchen dance in which many of the young folks of Dana participated, I send a copy of it for this week's paper.

LETTER No. 2.

Our anticipated kitchen dance came off in fine style. We had twenty-five of the young folks of the village present and a more jolly set never met together.

The house being situated on rising ground, the illuminations were visible from all parts of the village. The Nest was trimmed with evergreen inside; a rustic porch was built across the entire front, and in the centre exactly over the entrance, was placed a large Crow's Nest, filled with dummy Caw Caws. Large crows were perched on the rustic posts apparently watching the brood. The house was illuminated above and below, with Chinese lanterns and transparencies Colored lights were burned at intervals, transforming the whole scene into a beautiful picture, while pleasant voices and laughter filled the air with merry music. After a slight collation dancing was in order, and all who wished to participate joined in the merry dance to the music of a melodeon and violin. This was kept up to the wee small hours, when the party began to separate, each expressing themselves well pleased with the evening's enjoyment.

This was only the commencement of the good times enjoyed by our party while in the pleasant town of Dana, as all with whom we became acquainted did their best to make our stay as pleasant as possible. L. S.

Poetry.

Waiting and Watching for Me.

There are little ones glancing about on my path,
In need of a friend and a guide;
There are dim little eyes looking up into mine,
Whose tears could be easily dried,
But the Saviour may beckon the children away,
In the midst of their grief and their glee;
Will any of these at the Beautiful Gate,
Be waiting and watching for me?

There are old and forsaken, who linger awhile
In the homes which their dear ones had left,
And an action of love or a few gentle words,
Might cheer the sad spirit bereft;
But the reaper is near to the long-standing corn,
The weary shall soon be set free,
Will any of these at the Beautiful Gate,
Be waiting and watching for me?

There are near ones at home I may bless with my love,
There are wretched ones pacing the street,
There are friendless and suffering strangers around,
There are tempted and poor I must meet.
There are many unthought of, whom happy and blest,
In the last of the leaf I shall see;
Will any of them at the Beautiful Gate,
Be waiting and watching for me?

Strawberry Culture.

It is a shame that New England pays so much money yearly for Southern strawberries. She is excusable for looking South for her first fruits, but after the strawberry season has once commenced here, we may as well keep our money at home as to pay it out to Vineland cultivators. Just as good berries can be raised in Massachusetts and Connecticut as can be obtained from Virginia or New Jersey, and much better in one respect, inasmuch as they are fresh, not peppered with dust or mashed by a long journey. The amount of strawberries imported into New England is almost incredible. They are so delicious and come so early in the season that everybody indulges in this fruit, and the strawberry bill in many families is larger than the butcher's and baker's combined. We do not object to the use of the berries, as they are very healthy as well as luscious, but every owner of a few rods of land should raise his own, and the owner of an acre should raise enough for himself and his landless neighbors. If the neighbor is a wise man he will much prefer the home-raised to the imported article.

Farmers should cultivate this berry. Many regard the cultivation of all small fruits as beneath their notice, but nothing is unworthy of attention which contributes to the comfort and health of the family. The old-style New England farmers were brought up with the idea that all berries grow without cultivation, and so they do. All fruits were once wild and uncultivated. The luscious pear was once a wild fruit, hard, sour and puckery, unfit to be eaten, except when cooked. Cultivation has given us the Bartlett, the Sheldon, the Seckel and a host of other varieties fit for the table of a king.

There is an impression among farmers that the cultivation of this berry involves much labor; and it must be acknowledged that they do not grow in perfection without a deep rich soil, some care in keeping them free from weeds and runners, and a renewing of the bed once in two or three years, but it is labor which pays. Nothing good is secured without labor. A strawberry patch sufficient for an ordinary family is a very small affair, for the vines are immensely prolific. Two rods square well tended will furnish a family of six with all they want to eat, and leave a margin for the supply of a sick neighbor and an occasional guest.—Mass. Ploughman.

Fodder Corn.

The best time to feed fodder corn, as we believe is just when the tassel appears. Unfortunately the period occupied by the bloom is but a short one, and as the season advances our fodder corn gets to be daily a poorer food. Now if we cut our corn just before the bloom, and stand it against a fence or wall in thick masses, the outer layers protect the inner strata of fodder, and the process of ripening, the process of conversion of sugar into wood, seems delayed in accordance as the evaporation from the cut fodder is delayed, and free access with the ambient air is cut off. We believe, therefore, in shocking our fodder corn early, and if we intend to store it for winter use we believe in cutting early and killing rapidly in a hot sun, for otherwise we may be cutting good fodder and storing very poor stuff.—Scientific Farmer.

REMEDY FOR BURDOCKS. It is said that a certain and speedy remedy for Burdocks has been found in kerosene oil. A small quantity poured into the heart of a plant, directly after cutting, leaves no trace of their existence save a small hole in the earth where they stood. Refined or crude oil will accomplish the purpose just as well.

Anecdotes.

Counsel (to witness)—"You're a nice sort of fellow, you are!"

Witness. "I'd say the same thing of you, sir, only I'm on my oath."

In struggling to make a dull-brained boy understand what conscience is, a teacher finally asked:

"What makes you feel uncomfortable after you have done wrong?"

"Father's leather strap," feelingly replied the boy.

A small, ragged boy entered an oyster house in Salem, Mass., and asked: "Will you sell me an oyster for a cent? I want it for my sick mother."

"What is the matter with your mother?" asked the man, as he proceeded to fill a can with oysters, thinking he would help to relieve a case of suffering.

"She's got a black eye," was the reply.

The benevolence rapidly faded from the mind of the oyster man as he put one oyster in a paper bag.

NORFOLK, ss. PROBATE COURT.

To all persons interested in the estate of

CARLTON H. ROUNDY,

late of Springfield, Vermont, having estate in said County, deceased,

GREETING:

Whereas, George J. Wright, the Administrator of the estate of said deceased, has presented for allowance the first account of his administration upon the estate of said deceased:

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be holden at Quincy, in said County, on the second Wednesday of September next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be allowed.

And said accountant is ordered to serve this Citation by publishing the same once a week, for three successive weeks, in the Quincy Patriot, a newspaper printed at Quincy, the last publication to be two days at least, before said Court.

Witness, GEORGE WHITE, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this sixteenth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine.

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate.

PURSUANT to a power of sale contained in a certain Mortgage Deed, given by Alfred E. Robinson, of Quincy, to the Lancaster Savings Bank, of Lancaster, dated July 1st, 1872, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Lib. 431, fol. 108, and assigned to the Quincy Savings Bank, of Quincy, by assignment dated April 1st, 1876, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Lib. 479, fol. 12, and for breach of the conditions of said mortgage, will be sold at Public Auction, on the premises hereinafter described, on TUESDAY, September 16th, 1879, at 3 o'clock, P. M., all and singular, the mortgaged premises, to wit:—

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situated in that part of Quincy, called Wollaston, being one-half of Lot five, (5), of Block A, of Section two, (2) extended, of lands of the Wollaston Land Associates, as shown on a plan of said Section, drawn by D. Granger & Son, and bounded Southwesterly by Central Avenue, thirty-seven and five-tenths, (37 5-10) feet; Southeasterly by the southerly half of Lot five, (5), ninety-one and three-tenths (91 3-10) feet; Northeasterly by Lot nine (9) in said block, thirty-seven and five-tenths (37 5-10) feet; Northwesterly by Lot four, (4), in said block, ninety-one and three-tenths (91 3-10)feet, containing three thousand four hundred and twenty-three and five-tenths (3,423 5-10) square feet. Terms at sale.

QUINCY SAVINGS BANK,
Assignee of the Mortgage.
Quincy, Aug. 23, 1879. 4w.

If you feel dull drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR OR MEDICINE.

The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the World! AN EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen.

Regulate the Liver and prevent CHILLS AND FEVER MALARIOUS FEVERS, BOWEL COMPLAINTS, RESTLESSNESS, JAUNDICE AND NAUSEA.

TAKE SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

BAD BREATH.

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath, and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be so easily corrected if you will take Simmons' Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your Appetite, Complexion, and General Health.

PILES!

How many suffer torture day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering from Piles. Yet relief is ready to the hand of almost any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR, is no drastic violent purge; but a gentle assistant to nature.

CONSTIPATION!

SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulation from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache.

Office of the Board of Health.

QUINCY, MARCH 5, 1879.

THE Board of Health issues the following notice:—That on and after MONDAY, March 10th, 1879, the following provisions of Chapter 26 of the General Statutes will be strictly enforced:—

SEC. 47. When a householder knows that a person within his family is taken sick of . . . . any . . . . . . disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the . . . . . . board of health of the town in which he dwells. If he refuses or neglects to give such notice, he shall forfeit a sum not exceeding $100.

SEC. 48. When a physician knows that any person whom he is called to visit is infected with . . . . any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the . . . . . . board of health of the town; and if he refuses or neglects to give such notice, he shall forfeit for each offence a sum not less than $50, nor more than $100.

The Board considers the above sections to apply to scarlet fever, small pox, diphtheria, measles and whooping cough.

Poetry.

The Married Man.

Adown the street the married man
  Starts off with hurried tread,
But from the door a wifely voice,
  Calls, "Don't forget the bread."

He smiles and nods, and turns to go,
  That careless married man,
When loud the servant calls him. "Oh!
  You haven't got the can!"

He nods again, in fretful style,
  But pulleth down his hat,
And lo, his sister, with a smile,
  Cries, "Won't you bring my hat?"

"Oh, yes," he shouts, and truth to tell,
  He need not shout so loud;
But shrill his son, with stunning yell,
  "Theatre tickets for the crowd!"

His daughter, from the window high,
  Estops him with her call,
She wants a fan, a pair of gloves,
  And a new pink parasol.

He hears no more, far down the street,
  His echoing footsteps fly;
And all day long, in measure fleet,
  He hums, "Sweet buy and buy."

But when the evening respite brings,
  And his day's toil is done,
Though told to get a hundred things,
  He hasn't got a one.

Receipts, Wit, &c.

RICE PUDDING. One and a half teacups of boiled rice, one of sugar, two of sweet milk and five eggs. Lump of butter large as a walnut.

ONE-EGG CAKE. One and one-third cups of flour, one-third cup of sweet milk, one cup of sugar, one tablespoonful of melted butter, one egg, and two tablespoonfuls of baking powder.

RICE CUSTARD. Boil rice slowly, without stirring much, until it is tender, turn it into a mold to cool; make a boiled custard thin and sweet, and pour over the rice before it is served.

COCOANUT CAKE. Sugar, two cups; butter, one-half cup; sweet milk, three-fourths of a cup; whites of six eggs; flour, two and one-half cups; two teaspoonfuls baking powder.

☞ Father to sleepy boy—"Come James, you ought to be up with the lark on such a beautiful morning." Matter-of-fact boy—"That's all right, but how'm I goin' to get up there?"

☞ A physician's little daughter, called upon for a toast, gave: "The health of papa, mamma and all the world." But she suddenly corrected the sentiment. "Not all the world, for then papa would have no patients."

☞ The boy stood on the back-yard fence, whence all but him had fled, the flames that lit his father's barn shone just above the shed. One bunch of crackers in his hand, two others in his hat, with piteous accents loud he cried, "I never thought of that!" A bunch of crackers to the tail of one small dog be tied; the dog in anguish sought the barn and mid its ruins died. The sparks flew wide and red and hot, they lit upon that brat: they fired the crackers in his hand, and eke those in his hat. Then came a burst of rattling sound—the boy! Where was he gone? Ask of the winds that far around strewed bits of meat and bone, and scraps of clothes and balls and tops and nails and hooks and yarn, the relics of the dreadful boy that burned his father's barn.—Springfield Union.

☞ "Clara" writes that she hopes that the electric light will never be introduced for parlor use, "because it can't be turned down."

☞ An Albany woman woke her husband during a storm the other night, and said, "I do wish you would stop snoring for I want to hear it thunder."

☞ It is easier for a whale to swim through a church festival chowder than for an awkward man to follow a woman down stairs and not tread on the trail of her garments.

☞ The Yarmouth Register talks to anonymous correspondents thuswise:—"Those who haven't faith enough in an editor whom they know, to intrust to him their names, with the effusions they send, need not be surprised if the editor, who does not know them, should throw their articles into the waste basket as most likely he will do."

☞ A girl hearing the lady of the house at breakfast request her husband to bring "Dombey and Son" with him when he came home to dinner, laid two extra plates on the dinner-table for the supposed guests.

☞ A pair of scissors was lost, and the little one suggested that a prayer be said, asking that they might be found. There was, however, a lurking consciousness that there ought to be a combination of prayer and work, so the youthful philosopher said, "Now, mother, I'm tired, so I'll pray, while you hunt."

☞ I trust, Tommy, that you believe in the non-essentiality of a pre-existent first cause," said a gentleman to a Boston precocity. "Oh certainly. At least I go further back than the primordial atomic globule."

THREE RULES. Somebody has given three rules which may help some people to be happy:—Try to make others happy; be content with little; look on the sunny side of things.

Miscellany.

Judging by Appearance.

"Here is a nice place, Mabel," said the elder of the two ladies who had just entered the train, "and we will try and keep it undisturbed, too," she added, proceeding to deposit their shawls, satchels, etc., upon the end of each seat, while the two ladies seated themselves facing each other They were evidently mother and daughter, the daughter a slender, bright-faced little thing, and just as evidently people of position, marked by all the belongings of wealthy travelers.—Elegantly braided linen ulsters over black silks, stylish hats, Russian leather satchels, were distinguishing marks, besides that indescribable air which stamps its possessor as one used to good society.

"So very warm. Do reach my fan, Mabel. We have a very hot day for our ride," said Mrs. Glennor.

"But there is such a nice breeze. I think it will be lovely," returned bright-eyed Mabel.

"Oh, you're always contented with everything. Dear me, I hope the carriage won't be crowded."

"It is almost that now, mamma. We have the only vacant seats, I believe."

"And I mean to keep them too," announced Mrs. Glennor.

At that moment spoke a voice at her elbow.

"Is that seat engaged, madam?"

Mrs. Glennor and Mabel both looked up to see a young lady dressed in a plain, untrimmed linen suit, with a brown veil, covering her hat entirely, and shading a plain, homely face. Her speech was that of a well-bred person, but her exceedingly plain attire stamped her in Mrs. Glennor's eyes as "common folks," not worth an effort to be polite. She turned to the window and settled herself in her place without seeming to hear, but good-natured Mabel spoke at once.

"Mine isn't. You are welcome to share it."

And, notwithstanding the decided frown on her lady-mother's face, she tossed her "traps" over on the pile already beside Mrs. Glennor, and smiled a reply to the young stranger's quiet "thank you," as she sat down, holding the small satchel she carried in her lap.

"It will tire you. There is plenty of room over here with ours," said Mabel, reaching out her hand toward the satchel.

The young lady placed it upon the seat herself, saying,

"I was afraid it would trouble you."

"Not at all," returned Mabel.

But Mrs. Glennor, with a little accent of spite addressed her daughter:

"Mabel, don't make yourself over officious, I wonder how far it is to Hamilton?"

"Don't the table tell you, mamma?"

"No. Only the larger stations are down. Well," with a sigh and a glance at the intruder, "at least we shall be able to pick our own society there."

"Mamma don't!" pleaded Mabel in a low tone, flushing at her mother's rudeness.

"I detest these trains, where every rude person who chooses may intrude upon you," went on Mrs. Glennor coolly.

Mabel knew there was no telling where her mother would stop, once she was on the track, and she noted the flush which overspread the stranger's face. She quietly changed the subject.

"Do you know Mr. Hamilton's family, mamma?"

"Not the children. Not since they were grown, that is, I saw them when they were little."

"If they are like their noble old father, I'm sure I shall like them. I think he is splendid," answered Mabel.

The strange lady smiled quietly.

Mrs. Glennor answered:

"I dare say they are. Birth and breeding always show, Mabel. I for one, could never mistake a person of wealth and culture for a common one."

"Is there only one daughter?" asked Mabel.

"Only one at home, the youngest one, Henrietta. And one son, Richard. I consider it very fortunate that Hamilton invited us to make this visit, Mabel.—Richard Hamilton will be very wealthy, and if you play your cards well, who knows what you may do in the way of a settlement?"

"Now, mamma, if you begin to talk that way I do solemnly declare that I will take the next train that passes us back home and not go at all."

Mrs. Glennor knew the girl was quite capable of keeping her word if she was pushed too far, so she said no more, but betook herself to the prospect in view from her window.

The ride was a warm one, but Mabel enjoyed it, and in spite of her mamma's frowns, chatted with her seat-mate very sociably.

It was getting sundown when the train stopped at Hamilton, and several passengers descended, among whom was Mrs. Glennor and Mabel.

There was a forlorn looking station with a dusty little refreshment bar in one corner of a dingy room labelled, "Ladies' Room." There were two or three village idlers, with hands in their pockets, promenading up and down the platform, and that was all.

"What does this mean?" fretted Mrs. Glennor. "Mr. Hamilton wrote he would be certain to have the carriage meet us."

"Perhaps it will be here yet mamma," said Mabel. "Suppose you ask one of these men if it has been seen."

"I believe I will," said Mrs. Glennor, marching majestically up to one of the men aforesaid and inquiring:—

"Can you tell me whether Mr. Hamilton's carriage has been at the station to-day?"

"Yes'm—no'm—I don't—know—there it are coming now," was the slightly incoherent answer.

Turning in the direction of his extended finger she saw a handsome carriage rolling rapidly up.

"It is just coming," she announced to Mabel whose eyes had already informed her of that.

They waited upon that dreary platform until it drove up and the driver dismounted.

Then he came up the steps and addressed Mrs. Glennor, touching his hat respectfully.

"Ladies for Mr. Hamilton's, madam."

"Yes. Come, Mabel."

"The carriage is ready, ladies. The cart is here, ready to take your baggage over. Will I take your checks?"

Mrs. Glennor gave him the checks for their trunks, and the ready coachman soon had them piled in the light cart which had followed the carriage.

"Now, we are ready," declared Mrs. Glennor. But the coachman seemed to be looking for some one else.

"Our young Henrietta went up to town, yesterday. We expect her back by this train."

"Here I am, Sam," cried a familiar voice from the door of the ladies' room and the homely young woman in plain linen, who had shared Mabel's seat came out of her retreat inside and approached them.

"My goodness!" was Mrs. Glennor's dismayed ejaculation, as she flushed up to the roots of her hair.

But Mabel sprang forward with extended hand.

"What, are you Henrietta Hamilton? I am so glad!"

"And you are Miss Glennor. I am glad too!" said the young lady offering her hand most cordially. "I would have made myself known in the train, but I am always too shy with strangers, and I was not sure who you were until now. Mrs. Glennor, I am very glad to welcome you to Hamilton, I love your daughter already, and I am sure we shall have a delightful visit. Let us go now; Sam is waiting."

This prompt courtesy, so delicately ignoring her own rude behavior in the train, was a greater rebuke to Mrs. Glennor than any show of anger could have been.

For once her ready tongue was at loss, and she only followed her young hostess to the carriage, silently with flushed face.

But Henrietta's kindly spirit soon put her at her ease, except when she remembered her mortifying blunder.

It was a wholesome lesson, however, and the next time Mrs. Glennor meets a lady in the train, whether she is robed like a queen or in plain linen, she will greet her as such, and never judge by appearances.

Poison Bread.

There are not a few cases on record of irritant poisoning and death being produced by mouldy bread. Thus, horses have been killed in a short space of time after eating such bread in their ordinary food. The symptoms were those of an irritant poison. In 1829 an investigation was made in France into the cause of illness due to eating bread, and it was found by experiment, that bread in a particular state of mouldiness or decay may not only produce symptoms of poisoning, but actually cause death; and it was impossible to distinguish the harmless from the dangerous kinds of mould. As fungi grow very rapidly, it is quite possible for mouldy bread to be quite poisonous at one date, and to have lost its poisonous properties two days afterward. One of the most poisonous of these fungi is ergot.

Went up on the Cellar Door.

A farmer of Cynthian township says, the Sidney (Ohio) Journal, came to town one day last week to make a few purchases. It happened that he called at an establishment where an elevator was in use. In order to furnish the articles desired it was necessary to go into an upper story, and the salesman said to his customer:

"Just get on and we'll go up."

The startled granger looked around, and said:

"On where?"

He was given the desired information, and they started up. The upward flight was evidently something new to the farmer, and he attested his appreciation of it by remarking:

"This beats all nations, don't it?"

The salesman smilingly remarked that he rather thought it did. In the meantime a son of the farmer became impatient and came into the storeroom below, looking for him. The father, seeing his his son, stepped to the hatchway and said:

"You can't come up here, son; I came up on the cellar door, and its up here yet!"

For the Patriot.

From Pennsylvania.

EMAUS, Aug. 27, 1879.

RETURN OF GOOD TIMES.

Yes, good times for the man of toil. In all my peregrinations through the Key Stone State, my opportunity has been ample for noticing the evidences that everywhere abound, showing plainly enough that the "good time," so long looked for, has come! The far-famed watering places, scattered all through New Jersey and Pennsylvania, are visited by larger numbers than during any previous year. Surely, when we see the crowds increasing beyond all precedent at Cape May, Long Branch, and the numerous other places of resort, it is an evidence that the pressure of hard times has been lifted from the general mind.

WORKMEN SCARCE.

Another evidence that the sun of industry has arisen upon the nation, is seen in the fact, that, the complaint of the want of workmen is heard, hereabouts, on every hand.

In Philadelphia to-day, we are assured by those who know, there are twenty thousand more hands employed than at this time a year ago. And this opinion is given upon an investigation into the condition of the industries of that city, for several years past. This revival in trade is manifested, in commerce, in the mechanic arts, and in every plase of business.

This complaint of the want of workmen is heard all through this region of coal mines and furnaces for the manufacture of iron and steel.

THE IRON INDUSTRY.

Of the coal mines, I spoke in a former letter. To do justice to the industries of iron and steel, would not be possible in a single letter. Within sight of my window is an iron furnace that has remained idle for three years, and it looked so dilapidated that I had no idea of its ever being used again. I noticed that men have already commenced putting it in order, and in a short time it will be in "full blast" again.

To New England eyes, a sight worth seeing once in a lifetime, is a visit to one of these huge iron furnaces, which supply our nation and "the rest of mankind" with iron and steel.

The largest furnace in this country is only six miles from Allentown, the Capital of this County of Hakendanqua.—It has six stacks, worked by six huge engines, and over two hundred hands, divided into two bands, by which it is kept running day and night, and over three million tons of iron in a year. At the zinc works, in Freidersville in this County, there is the largest engine in the world, and this machinery in motion is, indeed, a wonderous evolution of human brains, demonstrating that man himself, is by far the greatest miracle which the human eyes have ever yet beheld.

THE INCREASE OF BUSINESS.

There is an increased demand for machinery, hydraulic, railroad, and iron work of all kinds. In connection with the furnaces, where the iron and steel are made from the ores, there are also foundries where castings are made.

All these places, far and near, are overrun with orders for more work than they have men or the means for supplying.

There are numerous cotton mills throughout this region, in which there are now more people employed than for for several years past, and this, too, in despite of the fact, harped upon by the Greenbackers, that the recent fall in the price of cotton fabrics has proved a loss to many of the mill owners.

Many wholesale dry goods houses have been compelled to increase their number of salesmen in order to keep pace with the orders that have increased upon them.

The condition of the clothing and the shoe trade, has very much revived of late; the shops and stores show unmistakable evidences of prosperity.

The better day for female operatives has come. There has never been a time when the under-clothing trade, which gives employment to women, was so brisk and lively as it is now. These remarks are not only true in their application to Philadelphia, but they are true in regard to all the cities and all the towns throughout the State. Everywhere mechanics and laborers are in high glee over the prospects now opening up before them.

Mr. Swank, the secretary of the American Iron and Steel Association, declares that there are no idle men in the iron districts, and the supply of labor is not equal to the demand.

CHRISTIAN PICNICS.

The "camp meetings" in the woods are now, similar to the iron furnaces, in "full blast." And to show you how much like the balloon, when inflated by gas, human beings act when they become inflated by "faith in the unseen." I give you a statement of what occurred hereabouts, recently, at one of these camp meetings. Some hundreds were standing on a platform a few feet from the ground, with throats opened wide, singing:—

Roll, Jordan roll;
Roll, Jordan, roll;
I want to git to hebben when I die,
To hear old Jordan roll.

When thus far in the refrain, the entire platform fell to the ground, and the "bretheren. and sisterin" in one heap were tumbled upon the ground. When, on discovering that they were not much injured, there in one pile upon the debris of the platform, "hilter skilter," they renewed their shouts of "glory hallelujah," and finished their song.

I asked one of the "inspired mediums," under what banner they were sailing over Jordan, and he said they were the only true "Evangelicals," otherwise "Allrights," or Methodists. Numerous accidents have been reported at these picnics. An old lady, aged seventy, after "saying her prayers," went out of her tent to gather some chips for a fire, when she was stung in the hand by a copperhead.

Disinfectant.

The following is taken from the London Times:—"The Medical officers of the Privy Council and Local Government Board in England, made the following report on disinfectants. A great number of very careful experiments were made with a view to test the disinfectant properties of the disinfectants now in common use. To make the air of a room smell strongly of carbonic acid or of chloride of lime, is only substituting one bad smell for another, and is so far as the destruction of specific contagion is concerned, an utter futile proceeding. The use of carbolic vapor for disinfecting purposes should be abandoned, owing to the relative feebleness and uncertainty of its action, and owing to the false sense of security it is calculated to produce."

The Board of Health of New Orleans during the yellow fever epidemic of last season, state that they used carbolic acid as a disinfectant, and were obliged to give it up. "In the past few days, we notice a decided change in the use of disinfectants. Carbolic acid has now disappeared, we hope forever, and sulphurous gas and other disinfectants substituted. The carbolic acid, there can be no question, has many a death to answer for. Its effect upon the nervous system of the sick was at all times and everywhere noticeable." A cheap, and effective disinfectant is the inodorous sulphate of iron, but a still better preparation is, its combination with zinc and the copper salts. This combination makes the best disinfectant now known to sanitarians. One pound and a half of the sulphate of iron dissolved in one gallon of water for soil and sewers. For the purpose of disinfecting sick rooms, dissolve four ounces of the sulphate of zinc and two ounces of common salt in a gallon of water, and sprinkle the bedclothes and room with it, by a common atomizer.

Our New York Letter.

Summer season closing. Gold from Great Britian. Pedestrianism. The free baths.—Here and there.

BROOKLYN, SEPT. 4, 1879.

The summer vacation is near its end, and soon the rested workers will return to renew their active labors in the busy metropolis. Each season of the year, as each period of life, has its special pleasures, and Autumn bring with it joys as well as cares. The past two months have been pleasant ones in this vicinity, and have been industriously enjoyed by thousands of tired men and women, for whom the resting time was only too short. Excursion steamers running to the varions seaside resorts, and railroad trains to the mountains have been crowded day by day with members of the "stay-at-home club," who have time only for short trips. Many pastors will return to their churches this week, and the "theologues" to their seminaries, and soon the schools and academies of the country will commence their fall sessions.

A short time ago the wheelbarrow pedestrian, Federmeyer, ended his exhibition at the American Institute. In six days he dragged his cart over 400 miles, to the apparent gratification of the spectators. The persistency shown by him in this effort and by Potter, who is pulling a wheelbarrow from San Francisco to this city, is worthy of a better cause. On Wednesday morning of last week, E. P. Weston, the "champion of the world," and Charles Rowell, the London walker, arrived here from England, and New York expects soon to be bored with another contest between endurance and perseverence at the Madison Square garden.

August 23d a million dollars in English gold arrived here, and more is on the way. It is thought that the shipment will continue for some time, bullion is plenty in Great Britian at present. While the nations of Europe are fighting with each other and destroying their crops, Uncle Sam industriously works his western farms and receives specie for produce. Peace vs. war exemplified.

The warm weather has rendered the free baths provided by the city, very acceptable, and last week 112,000 males and 70,000 females availed themselves of their accommodations. During the same time there were in the city 480 deaths, 460 births and 114 marriages. Only 216 deaths occurred in Brooklyn where tenement houses are fewer and sanitary appliances better.

The double postal cards are expected here soon. The writer finds the present size sufficient for ordinary purposes, but will welcome the innovation. CLARE.

A Firemen's Parade.

There has been some agitation among the firemen in this town, in favor of a parade by the Fire Department, some time next month. At the monthly meetings of the companies held on Monday evening last, the following actions were taken :—

The W. M. French Hose Company voted unanimously in favor of a parade.

The Chemical Engine Company of Wollaston voted not to turn out.

The Hook and Ladder Company voted to choose a committee of three to confer with the Engineers.

The Granite Engine Company voted on Monday evening not to turn out in the parade ; but since then a special meeting has been called, and some decisive action is to be taken this evening. Some are quite anxious for a parade.

The Tiger engine company did not take any decisive action in the matter.— We learn they intend soon to hold another meeting, and at that time vote upon the subject.

The Vulture Engine Company decided to parade.

List of Teachers.

The following is a list of teachers in the public schools in this town,—several changes having occurred during the summer vacation:—

HIGH SCHOOL.

H. A. Keith, principal; Mary L. Flint, 1st assistant; ——, 2d assistant.

ADAMS SCHOOL.

Tilton Mead, principal; Mary Wilson; Eliza C. Sheahan; Cora Young; S. Addie Souther; Mary Devlin; Susie Flint; Avelina Robie and Mary W. Woods.

CODDINGTON SCHOOL.

Mary E. Dearborn, principal; Hetta Clement; Mary E. Dinegan; Lizzie E. Morse; Julia E. Underwood and Lydia L. Follett.

QUINCY SCHOOL.

D. S. Farnham, principal; Alexander E. Frye; Lillian Bryant; Mary F. Taylor.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL.

I. Freeman Hall, principal; Clara E. Crosby; Mary Marden; Kate Raycroft; Norah Baldwin and Carrie E. Morse.

WILLARD SCHOOL.

Sylvester Brown, principal; Lillie Woods; Mary T. Dewing; Mary Bosworth; Emily A. Bosworth; Emeline A. Newcomb; Nellie Fegan; Mary A. Spear; Euphrasia Hernan and Ida Ellis.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

Lillie Hicks, principal; Cora Bates, Grace Swallow and Mary Gay.

AN INTERESTING OCCASION. The fiftieth marriage anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams occurred on Wednesday last, September 3d. It is an interesting and very unusual fact that three golden weddings of successive generations of the same family should have been observed in the same house. That of President John Adams and his wife, was celebrated on the 25th of October, 1814. That of their son, President John Quincy Adams and his wife, on the 26th of July, 1847. The third has just taken place. It will be noticed that the intervals between these occasions were respectively 33 and 32 years ;—almost exactly the life-time of a generation. At the time of their golden weddings, President John Adams was 79, and President J. Q. Adams had just entered his 80th year. Mr. Adams is 72.

A FINE MONUMENT. Each season, more costly and handsome monuments are being erected in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, our new and fast growing "city of the dead." A very beautiful monument has been recently erected by Mr. Amos Churchill, and is, we think, one of the finest in these lovely grounds. It is thirteen feet high ; has three bases, and a scroll die surmounted by a drapery urn. On the third base is the family name, with the face of the letters polished, as also the bands and panels of the die. The body of the urn and a portion of the plinth are beautifully polished and ornamented.

The work was done at the granite yard of Churchill & Hitchcock, and is not only very creditable to the yard, but to the granite monumental business of this town The monument adds grace, beauty and loveliness to our Cemetery, and will be, to some extent, a model for others to follow.

DOGS LICENSED. The number of dogs licensed this year, in this town, is 342. It is estimated that there are nearly 100 now unlicensed. "Uncle Washington" says there must be an end of "fooling" after the dog-days are over, and after he gets through his attendance on the Superior Court at Dedham, he "means business," and advises all delinquents to step up to the Town Clerk's office and settle without delay.

LECTURES. The Universalist Church will be opened for services to-morrow, both afternoon and evening. In the evening, at 7 o'clock, the pastor will begin a course of lectures on the Money Question. Topic for the first lecture, The Offices of Money. As there will be laid down in the first lecture principles referred to in the others, it will be well for those interested in the question to attend at the beginning.

ANOTHER ROBBERY. On Wednesday evening last the house of Mr. Frederick H. Tilden, on Franklin street, was entered by removing a catch on the blind, and getting in a window which had been left open. The robbers, who were two in number, succeeded in getting about $10 from the lower room, but were foiled in their attempt to get up stairs by Mr. T's dog.

Local Items.

☞ The Town Clerk has licensed 342 dogs.

☞ There are forty-one teachers in our public schools.

☞ An excellent family horse, a fine driver, is offered for sale.

☞ Probate Court will be held in Quincy on Wednesday next, at 9 A. M.

☞ Monday and Tuesday last, were very warm days for September.

☞ S. H. Spear advertises to-day seven pounds for $1.25.

☞ Several very interesting correspondence will be found on the first page of this issue.

☞ The last regatta of the season by the Quincy Yacht Club, will take place to-day, at 2 1-2 P. M., off Mears' beach.

☞ The recent rains have caused the lawns and fields to look once more green and beautiful.

☞ The voices of happy children tripping to school have been heard every day this week.

☞ The Sunday school connected with Christ church, will meet to-morrow afternoon.

☞ Bishop Paddock visits this town on the 23d inst., and administers the rite of confirmation at Christ church.

☞ The house owned by Mr. John Wood, on Granite street, was again seriously damaged by blasting, the present week.

☞ The Rev. Edward Norton and family returned home on Wednesday, having enjoyed a pleasant vacation for the past four weeks.

☞ The granite works of Messrs. McDonnell Bros., have recently been moved to Water street, a short distance west of the Quincy Adams station.

☞ Miss Alice Newcomb left here Monday, for a visit to New York city.— She is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Newcomb of that city.

☞ E. J. Sheldon of St. John, N. B., is spending with his family a few days in this, his native town. He says business in New Brunswick is very quiet.

☞ The handsome store in Robertson's Block, recently vacated by Mr. Lombard, has been leased by Mrs. F. A. Lapham, for dress-making and millinery purposes.

☞ The Old Colony Railroad has just finished a new pair of scales near Mitchell's Granite Works, South Quincy, for weighing cars.

☞ A Republican caucus for the election of delegates to the several conventions, will be held on Thursday evening next, at the Town Hall.

☞ At a meeting of the Grand Army of the Republic, to be held on Wednesday evening next, a chowder will be served, and a good time is anticipated. All comrades are expected.

☞ Several very interesting communications can be found on the first page of this paper. The long one from our New York correspondent was written on a postal card.

☞ Messrs. Henry G. Pratt, John A. Pratt, Benjamin F. Curtis and George O. Langley have enjoyed a few days recreation in New York city. They left here on Saturday last.

☞ Miss E. L. Holbrook, a former teacher of the High School, was in town on Saturday last, and went with the class of '77 on their first annual excursion to Wellesley on Saturday last.

☞ There is no male teacher employed in the Centre District, an occurrence which has never happened before to our knowledge. Six excellent female teachers now have charge of the Coddington schools.

☞ A valuable dog belonging to Mr. E. B. Souther was accidentally run over last Saturday afternoon and so severely injured that he had to be chloroformed to put him out of his misery. The dog had been trained to bring bundles of papers from the cars and was a general favorite in his master's family.

☞ A horse and wagon, belonging to Mr. George Dodge, a butter pedlar, was left unhitched on Tuesday morning last, in front of Mr. Jones' dining rooms, on Hancock street. As the street sprinkler passed, the horse became frightened and dashed down Chestnut street, where he upset the vehicle, damaging it considerably.

☞ The trouble in the Tiger Engine Company has at last been settled in a satisfactory manner. Mr. Lewis G. McIntire has been chosen Foreman. Mr. McIntire is a gentleman who takes a deep interest in anything he undertakes. It is hoped that the company will prosper under his management, and again reach the "top of the heap."

☞ Mr. J. W. Allard of Milton, has been appointed Superintendent of the Schools of Milford, and entered on his duties on Monday.

CRAYONS. We would call the attention of our readers to the display of crayon portraits to be seen at Reed's Shoe Store. They are executed by Mr. Herbert Reed, a young artist who displays great faithfulness in his work. He has furnished several of our citizens with likenesses of themselves or deceased friends, and good satisfaction has been given. These portraits will never fade and are much cheaper than any others. We understand his stay here has been prolonged for a short time. Those intending to have copying done, should avail themselves of this opportunity.

OAK BLUFFS. The illuminations at Oak Bluffs on Saturday evening last were splendid ; the fireworks and music were excellent, and a large assembly, estimated from thirty to forty thousand,— were there, to enjoy the festivities of the occasion. Among those present from this town were :—

Charles Crane, Henry Emery, P. McDonnell, Bryant Nightingale, Theodore Hardwick, Frank Patch, James W. Rideout, Jeremiah Nightingale and wife, George W. Penniman and bride, H. P. Abbott and wife, George W. Prescott and wife, Mrs. George W. Brooks, and Mrs. David Burrell.

☞ The London library has collected 90,000 volumes during the forty years of its existence.

For the Patriot.

Q. H. S., '77.

The class of '77, Q. H. S., and teacher had an enjoyable reunion on Saturday last. Starting from Quincy at eight o'clock in a comfortable barge, the "Augusta," furnished by Mr. Joseph T. French, and driven by an accommodating driver, they reached Wellesley in time to visit the beautiful and tastefully arranged Hunnewell's Gardens, before lunch. After an unsuccessful attempt to materially decrease the abundant supply which they had provided, they made a complete tour of Ridge Hill Farms, not omitting the wonderful "Grotto" or the "Tower." Leaving for home at five, they passed through Needham, Dedham, Hyde Park and East Milton. Stopping at the house of Mrs. Freeman Fisher in Dedham they were refreshed with some of her delicious ice cream, and delighted with her kindly and genial hospitality. They also made a short stop at Mr. John J. Shea's in Hyde Park, the residence of one of the class, where they divided the time between a "social sing" and lemonade. The party reached home worn and weary, but firmly impressed with the feeling that the day would hereafter be regarded as one of the few "white days" of their lives.

"FORTITER, FIDELITER, FELICITER."

Reply to J. L. F.

To the Editors of the Patriot:

My inquiry in relation to some of the expenditures of the town's money, reached a tender spot, and the indignation which your correspondent of the 30th manifests, at being thus assailed, is truly amusing and surprising ; but all of the buncombe and bosh which he indulges in about "lack of courage and manly independence of U. J., only goes to show the weakness of his cause, and how tender was the spot reached. But facts are stubborn things, and are not to be bluffed off by any such boyish means. It was to be expected, and is but natural that the architect should attempt to defend the plans and work for which he was so liberally paid, but all of his indignation, or the gauge of "Hosie's water-cart," cannot wipe out of existence the truths and insinuations contained in my conundrum of the 23d. "The taxpayers cannot afford to wait" for any report for a showing of what has been paid for architectural services in connection with our public buildings the past year, for, if they do, they will never find it ; for like the drain-pipe chimney, it is well covered up. Had the directors of the Elliott Bank waited for a report, they would never have discovered the irregularities of Conant ; so with some of the bills which are passed upon and paid by the town they are paid to-day, and covered up to-morrow, and the only time to expose them is while they are fresh.

I acknowledge "I am unacquainted with the value of an architect's time," if it takes thirty dollars' worth to draw a plan of an outhouse for a country school. But as regards the drain-pipe chimney and the poor ventilation I can only say I made use of and reiterated the statements made by the mechanics employed upon the work ; and when they do not hesitate to say that "the plans are faulty, and that the work is unsatisfactory and unsafe," I think it is high time for some one to speak. If Mr. F. expects the citizens to wait until their children are burnt or crushed to death, before they speak of that which is common talk in the South District, he makes a fearful mistake ; for in speaking as I have, I speak not for myself alone, but for a large number of others, who will not be turned off by any statement of Mr. F., "that there is no danger connected with any part of the work," and it would be well for Mr. F. "to remain in obscurity" until those who employed him, and those who have performed the work have had a chance to be heard from.

EAST MILTON. In spite of the weather on Thursday evening of last week, the citizens of this place enjoyed the fine concert given by Gilcher's Harmonia Band. There was an excellent display of fireworks during the whole evening. The citizens look forward to another summer of similar enjoyment.

Last Monday morning two children of three and four years of age, were seen bathing in a brook by some persons who were driving in that vicinity. Coming out of the brook they crossed the street to take a plunge on the other side when a lady found them, and putting on their clothes, which they had laid by the side of the stream, took them to their parents, who were greatly surprised.

Our Boston Correspondent.

The return of our citizens to Boston. Benefits by their absence. The State Political Outlook. Coming Conventions. Gen. Butler's prospects for Governor good and daily increasing in strength. The Temperance Conference at Wesleyan Hall on Tuesday.

SEPTEMBER 4, 1879.

Immense numbers of Bostonians have returned to their homes since Monday last, and still they come, bringing with them improved health and good spirits, borrowed from the sea breezes or mountain air of heaven.

These summer resorts are getting fashionable, and are destined to become more extensive in future.

Business continues to improve, and the city wears a lively aspect. The prospects of a healthy trade for the remainder of the year were never better.

Political movements are becoming very active here, and vigorous preparations are inaugurating for an active campaign. The toscin is sounded, and some four political Conventions are to be held in Worcester during the present month for the nomination of State officers.

Gen. Butler is to be a formidable candidate against the nominee for Governor of the Republican party. No matter what is said of him and against him in the public press, he is relatively stronger than he was one year ago. An error in the management may be made within the next fortnight that will afford General Butler a better chance of success in his aspirations for Governor than he has ever had before.

One interesting feature of the week here was the gathering or conference of a goodly two hundred Temperance Republicans on Tuesday last in Wesleyan Hall, on Bromfield street, in great measure under the auspices of your respected townsman, Henry H. Fazon, Esq. We were there, "a looker on in Venice," through the day's proceedings. The Hon. Winslow Battles of Randolph, was chosen President of the Conference.— He seemed familiar with parliamentary tactics, and discharged his duties very acceptably.

The delegates present represented every portion of the Commonwealth,— strong Temperance politicians and workers. The adoption of the Resolutions, which were considered seriatim, drew out an animated debate from all parts of the hall. The speakers were numerous, and their remarks concise, clear and to the point. Many were quite eloquent. We never before witnessed an assembly of men more intelligent and enthusiastic in the cause of total abstinence than at this gathering at Wesleyan Hall. The sentiment of the Convention on the gubernatorial question was in favor of John D. Long, and bitterly against Henry L. Pierce, as an enemy to the cause.

Mr. Faxon, the "Sage of Quincy," as the Boston Globe styles him,—other papers confer on him the title of "Colonel" Faxon, was in a very felicitous mood through the day, and apparently enjoyed the proceedings of this pleasant gathering. His remarks were well received.— The bountiful banquet given to the delegates by Mr. Faxon, was arranged in good taste,—very enjoyable and honorable to the courtesy and hospitality of this fearless advocate of temperance reform. We opine that the doings of the "Faxon" Convention (as termed by a portion of the Boston press,) on Tuesday last, will have no small bearing on the action of the Republican Convention about to come off in Worcester.

Washington Letter.

Sept. 2d, 1879.

Ex-Senator Mitchell of Oregon, arrived in the city yesterday. Mitchell is just from home, and comes East to represent some railroad interests. He says the people in his State are giving very little attention to politics at the present time, and that their great concern is to promote railroad connection with the world at large, and to develop the material resources of their State. What do the people of Maine and Ohio think of that condition of things.

A despatch from abroad is in these few but significant words : — "All branches of trade in England are reducing wages." Taken in connection with the fact that the opposite is true in the United States, and that we have so abundant harvests, it is as certain as anything can be, that emigration to this country will be greatly increased in the immediate future, and more than probable that it will reach a magnitude never before known.

The "Sprague scandal" is one that will not drop out of sight. Generally, the press of the country have been more kind to Mr. and Mrs. Sprague, than those parties have been to themselves. The latest facts in the case are that Mrs. Sprague has quit the family residence, taking her daughters with her, and that the whole matter will shortly come before the Courts.

The only survivor of the memorable Senate of 1830–32, embracing among its members the names of Webster, Clay, Calhoun Benton, Hayne, Grundy and Silas Wright, is the Hon. Peleg Sprague who was Senator from Maine, from 1829 to 1835, who though now eighty-eight years of age, remembers and relates distinctly the events and scenes that transpired during the eventful years that he was a member of that body. He was also a Representative from Maine from 1825 to 1829, fifty-four years ago, which makes him the oldest ex-member of Congress now living. Soon after his retirement from the Senate he took up his residence in Boston, and in 1841, was appointed Judge of the United States District Court of Massachusetts which position he held for more than twenty years until the infirmities of age compelled his retirement, having attained the highest distinction as a lawyer and jurist. He is now suffering from the entire loss of his eyesight.

MERRILL.

PICNIC. A grand picnic of the temperance societies of Quincy, Weymouth and Rockland, will occur at Lovell's Grove, on Saturday next. The societies have spared no pains to make this the most successful event of the season.— Mr. John Ballou, of West Quincy, with two excellent barges, will accommodate those wishing to attend the picnic.

SALES. Among the private sales published this week, we noticed the following in this town :

The Mercantile Savings Institution to Frances M. Perry, 5000 feet of land and buildings on Neport avenue, for $1,500.

Terrance Keenan to Mary Harkins, 1 1-8 acres of land and buildings on Main street, for $1,940.

SHIPPING. Arrived at Quincy Point, Aug. 31st, schooner Emily & Jenny, Capt. Champion, from Philadelphia, loaded with coal for Cyrus Patch.

Arrived Sept. 1st, schooner Frank Walter, Capt. B. F. Crosby, with Plymouth Red Ash coal for D. Howard Bills.

Arrived Sept. 1st, schooner Nellie Brown, Capt. L. I. Young, with Franklin coal, for D. H. Bills.

The Drama.

BOSTON, Sept. 4, 1879.

"Honor! Duty! Who spoke of duty? I spoke and speak of love, of that love, which in a wife's heart, is the sole invulnerable armor of her husband's honor. God help the husband who's honor rests on duty alone."

"The Banker's Daughter" is now presented for a second time at the Park Theatre, by the Union Square Company. It is such sentiments as quoted above, coupled with acting of the highest standard, and sumptuous stage setting, that has gained for this drama the praise it has so justly earned ; and so much of laudatory praise has been bestowed upon it and its excellent Company, that it seems like an apology for virtue to write anything further than the mere announcement. Drama, actors and scenes all form a perfect en-semble,—all seemingly, parts of some complicated, perfectly wrought and finely adjusted mechanism, working so steadily, surely, as to defy the Argus eyes of the critic, philosopher, cynic, or the proverbial grumbler. The loss of any part of which would carry destruction to the whole ; so sharply and economically is every character and situation individualized.— Charles Thorn is the central figure round whom others radiate, and he who can sit and look on John Strebelow's joy, domestic happiness, grief, and deep well-spring of pathos as portrayed by Thorn, without the finer cords of his nature being rung into harmony therewith, must be phlegmatic indeed ; his gestures alone speak volumes, and are marvels of grace and finish. Next in point of interest, is Manager Palmer's new leading lady, Miss Ella Wilton, as Lillion, the Banker's daughter, and Strebelow's wife. She is possessed of a fine figure, pleasing countenance, and a sympathetic style of acting quite in harmony with the character, which she sustains admirably and naturally. Mr. Polk, as G. Washington Phipps, the New York dry goods man, who does Europe while he is buying silks and novelties, must be proud of the mirth-provoking power he sways over his audiences. W. I. Lemoyne, as gouty Old Brown, the millionaire, and Miss Maud Harrison as Florence St. Vincent Brown, and the balance of the company, all deserve praise for most excellent work. Next week this company presents "Mother and Son," another of their successes.

GAIETY. Annie Pixley in M'liss—to those who enjoy the red-shirt drama, founded on, and incidental to mining life in the Golden state M'liss will be very acceptable, and in strong contrast to much of the trashy sensational stuff which has flourished in years past; and the bewitching actress who plays the the brave, untaught, hoydenish heroine, who finally blossoms into the educated young lady, is fast becoming a great favorite. She also has a good voice, with which she renders several pleasing songs—her piece-de-resistence being the drinking song from "Girofle, Girofla," which she renders with fine effect. The supporting company is mediocre.

MUSEUM. "The Danicheff" continues the attraction. The intrinsic merits of the drama, the brilliant acting and the excellent manner in which it is set upon the boards, form and unexceptionally attractive entertainment, and should be seen by all who would encourage the legitimate and what is elevated in the drama.

BOSTON THEATRE. "Boulogne" is unquestionably not a success; its plot is of the Frenchy sensational sort, and deals chiefly with a brain befuddled old man who fails to see the thin devices employed by his wife to hide from him the fact that she was once of the corps-de-ballet and of the cirque and perhaps some other questionable doings. It is weak, conventional and improbable. Monday evening, Sept. 15th, F. S. Chanfrau appears in his specialty, "Kit, the Arkansas Traveller," supported by the dramatic company of this house, with Allen and Maguinnis in their unrivalled roles of the "Two Beats."

CRIT'—.

IMPROVEMENTS. Mr. Alexander McPhee has recently completed a very fine piece of stone mason work at the residence of Dr. Gordon. He has enlarged the cellar to the full size of the house, cemented the ground floor and whitewashed the walls, making the cellar large, neat and inviting. In the centre a nice furnace is erected; and in the yard a large reservoir has been built by Mr. William H. French. The improvements on this place since it was owned and occupied by the late Moses R. Marsh, have been so great that any one acquainted with it then would scarcely know it now.

Sunday Services.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH. Preaching at 10.30 A. M. by Rev. E. A. Perry Sunday School immediately following Evening service at 7 o'clock.

FIRST CHURCH. Rev. D. M. Wilson, pastor, services at 10.50 A.M. Preaching by the pastor.

The Quincy Patriot.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 6, 1879.

Currency.

The amount of outstanding $1 and $2 legal tender notes now in circulation has been reduced from $45,000,000 in 1877, to about $20,000,000. The reduction is said to be due to the ruling of the Treasury department that banks or individuals wanting them must pay express charges themselves.

If every one would decline to accept silver or copper pieces which have holes in them, or have been disfigured in any way, the clippings would soon cease.—The post-office department will not receive them, neither are they received at any of the sub-treasuries.

Opinions of the Weather.

Much of our talk on the weather, when we meet people and have nothing else to say, would look laughable in print—almost as much so as this dialogue, perhaps:

Dutchman, "Goot morrer, Pat ; how you tus?"

Irishman, "The top o' morning till ye, Smitt ; d'ye you think we'll get rain the day?"

Dutchman, "Kess no ; ve never hash mooch rain in der dry dime."

Irishman, "Faith, an' yer right there Smitt ; an' thin, whinever it gits in the way o' rainin', arrah a bit o' dry wither will ye git as long as the wet spell howlds."

☞ The treasury at Washington, has received from New Orleans what is said to be the best counterfeit silver coin ever made. It is a half dollar, and the work on it, including the milled edges, is declared perfect, and the color of the metal exactly that of silver. It weighs a little less than the genuine coin.

☞ The Stewart grave-robbing mystery has again been revived by the receipt in New York of a letter addressed to a lawyer, inclosing $100, and asking him to take charge of negotiations for the return of the body, which was offered for $250,000. Parts of Stewart's coffin were also received by express as evidence of possession.

☞ Millions of dollars in silver are stowed away in the treasury vaults at Washington, doing nobody any good, simply because it is impossible to put it in circulation. Secretary Sherman, in his next annual report, will recommend that the coinage of silver be limited to fifty million dollars.

☞ A blast was recently made at Cape Ann Granite Company's quarry, Bay View, which rent asunder and lifted from its solid foundation a piece of stone weighing, by actual computation, 40,000 tons. It required for the job eight drill holes, 20 feet in depth each, and 425 pounds of powder. The fissure was 200 feet in length and 85 feet wide at the widest part.

☞ One hundred years ago there were twenty-five newspapers printed in the United States ; now they number nearly nine thousand, three hundred and fifty-five of which are printed in Massachusetts. Then the population was about one million, now it is estimated at fifty millions.

☞ While the business failures in the United States have decreased 50 per cent. from those of last year, there has been an equal increase in Great Britain. The worse sufferers in that country have been the cotton and iron industries, which are in a more unhealthy condition than ever before.

☞ The annual interest on our public debt will now be about $84,000,000.—Great Britain pays $140,000,000 and France $150,000,000 of interest on their respective public debts per annum.

☞ On the return of a couple to Simsbury, from their bridal tour, a party of girls met them at the train, put them into a carriage, took hold of the shafts, and drew them to their new home.

☞ It is said that twenty-five of the two hundred heirs to the great Hyde estate of hundreds of millions, reside in Boston. When the division comes the Hydes will not be hiding.

☞ The British national debt is equal to $123 per capita, or $50 mortgage on every acre of the British Isles. The debt of the United States is $40 per capita, or less than $1 per acre.

The Strike.

The friends of labor will justly regret the ill-advised and precipitate action of the stone cutters in the employ of Mr. Wm. H. Mitchell, who struck work because of the employment by that man of the non-union man Cannon. It is idle to pretend that such a claim on the part of the workmen is reconcilable with justice.

The stone cutters undoubtedly are entitled to a fair and just consideration with respect to any matter which they may deem essential to their interests.—Nor can it be assumed, in the differences which from time to time arise, that the "bosses" are always in the right, and the men in the wrong. In the general history of the development of labor the hand of power has been on the side of the employer. Too often it has been the case that labor has been crowded by capital.

But we are entering on a better era. We are passing through a social transition. A beneficent spirit of justice which guards alike the just rights of the employer and employed, has arisen in modern society. Public opinion, which is the final and great arbitrator in matters of this kind, stands ready to condemn injustice and oppression by whomsoever exercised.

In the present instance, it is impossible to deny that the cutters have assumed a dictatorial part, and laid claim to a pretension which, if conceded, would be fatal to the successful conduct of business.

Public opinion will support the laborer in his just claim against the capitalist. But when he ventures to dictate whom the capitalist shall employ, and attempts a strike with a view of forcing the latter to yield to this unjust and tyrannical demand, he enters upon a contest which will deprive him of the sympathy and support of his truest friends. Nor is it well for the workmen themselves to establish the principle of compulsory membership in their trade unions.

Trade and industry to be successful must be free, and the trade union, beneficial as it may be when properly organized, becomes an instrument of oppression to the workmen themselves, when it deprives the individual man the free right of his choice of employers.

The forces of civilization are fighting the battle of the laborer against the old abuses of social caste and class oppression. The spread of democratic institutions means the rise in social rank and dignity of the laborer.

But let him not suppose that a new tyranny, that of labor over capital, is to take the place of what has previously existed. Modern progress does not mean that. It means the securing to every man a larger and fuller share of the results of his own toil and exertion. It will successfully resist the haughty dictation of capital. It will also place a bar to the unjust and despotic claims of labor, wheresoever put forth. Our civilization is founded on the principles of freedom in competition, the right of private property, freedom of contract, the equality of all men before the law.—These are basal principles in our society, and must be respected.

ACTIVITY IN THE IRON TRADE.—The demand for iron is great and prices are tending upwards, although usually at this season of the year the business is dull. The intelligent secretary of the Iron and Steel Association of the United States predicts that the product this year will be the largest the country has known. He also believes that the activity which prevails to-day in all branches of the iron and steel trade will continue for at least a year to come. Nearly all the favorably situated rolling mills are in operation, and numbers of these mills, as well as furnaces and steel works, have orders ahead for several months. The truth is the iron industry has been so long under a cloud that the actual need of iron throughout the country is enormous.

AN ADVERTISING YACHT. The yacht Juanita, lately built for Lunt Brothers of New York, has been turned to a remarkable purpose. Her canvas has been [illegible] into advertising sheets; great [illegible]tted announcements of various goods [illegible] displayed in mammoth letters.—[illegible]itt the soap man, has hired one side [illegible] mainsail for a thousand dollars.—[illegible] other advertiser has a part of the jib [illegible] three hundred dollars, while Messrs. [illegible] advertise their own Coaline manufacture. Negotiations are pending for [illegible] other side of the mainsail, so that [illegible]en finished, the boat will be a regu[illegible] floating directory.

☞ Three sons of the Siamese twins Chang and Eng are now living in Sumner county, Kansas. They recently appeared at the United States Land Office, in Wichita, in which one of them was a defendant and the other a witness. They were spoken of as intelligent, wide-awake citizens, and fully up to the spirit of the times.

☞ There is now living in Mattapoisett, Mrs. Keziah Randall, who is ninety-six years of age. She lives entirely alone and cultivates quite a garden with her own hands, and will walk several miles as well as much younger women. She looks no older than a woman of seventy-five.

For the Patriot.

Notes from Abroad.

BY PROFESSOR E. P. THWING.

My last letter was partly written in the railway station at London, while waiting for the train to Bristol; and my attention was so absorbed that the coaches moved away before my eyes, so I was compelled to wait an hour or more longer, doing a little writing, although sorry to lose the time of travel. At Bristol I was cordially welcomed by the Rev. George Muller and his wife, and I enjoyed visiting the different charitable institutions under his excellent management.

You would have been interested had you rambled through the

BRITISH MUSEUM

with me, and seen the hand writing of those illustrious alumni of Cambridge University, of whom I wrote before, with coins dated 700 B. C., and many rare volumes. In Tussand's Gallery I saw their forms and faces, with kings and queens unnumbered; the bed on which Napoleon died, with the stains of blood visible where the lancet had been vainly used for relief, the carriage in which he was captured after his defeat at Waterloo, the watch he had when he died,—the hands pointing the hour; the guillotine which decapitated 22,000 in Paris; and the rosary Mary Queen of Scots had at the time of her death. All these and hundreds of other things may there be seen which are most interesting to the beholder and which have thrilling histories connected with them.

The few days that I spent in London were crowded with interest and instruction, and now I am resting and writing in a pretty little German steamer

ON THE RHINE.

The PATRIOT, many years ago, printed some observations of my first visit to Rhineland. This second visit has, if possible, been enjoyed even more than in 1855. The day has been superb and is now closing with a gorgeous sunset. The company has been pleasant, Massachusetts and New York being well represented. After two days in Holland, amid those of strange tongue where pantomine had to take the place of speech, it has been delightful to-day to use one's mother tongue. The storied Rhine with its castles and convents; its quaint villages and charming vineyards; its wheatfields, where women swing the sickle and bind the sheaves; the ever changing panorama of cliff and crag, of grove and dell, of stream and meadow,—it must be seen to be fully understood. Not only the charm of natural scenery, grand and graceful, is here but poetry and romance have made this river what no stream in America can be for a century to come. We are now near

BINGEN, FAIR BINGEN ON THE RHINE.

Mrs. Norton's touching story of the dying soldier comes to mind. Here, too, is the Mouse Tower, the subject of Southey's ballad. But time fails to catalogue even the alluring objects that this twelve hours' sail between Cologne and Mayence unfolds. The day will be remembered as one of the most brilliant in every respect which the summer has given me. The past week, indeed, has been crowded with sweets. Sunday presented to me the trio Spurgeon, Dean Stanley and Canon Farres. Monday was spent in an excursion to the gay seaside resort of England, Brighton. Tuesday morning found me in Rotterdam, sauntering alone among the pleasant and grotesque novelties of that busy city. Then came the elegant court city. The Hague, Scheveningen, its watering place, Antwerp with its sweet toned bells, and Amsterdam, with its Venetian look.

I post this at Geneva, Switzerland, August 6th, just leaving for Turin and Italy, expecting to spend the Sabbath at Pisa, and the following at Rome, Naples and vicinity. Lake Leman, on the shores of which I am writing, is clothed in exquisite beauty, and of my trip over its entire length, 45 miles, I may write at another time.

☞ A woman with two heads has just arrived from Europe. Eight bonnets a year!—only think of it!

DISTRICT COURT. The following persons have been arraigned this week for criminal offences:—

Ellen Kelly of Braintree, for an assault on Catharine Kelly, a step-child, and beating her badly. She was found guilty and fined $15 and costs, and ordered to give sureties in the sum of $300 to keep the peace for one year.—Failing to give bonds, she was sent to the House of Correction.

Patrick Sullivan of Quincy, for threatening to commit an assault on his wife, Mary Sullivan. He was discharged for want of sufficient evidence.

Edward Brophy of Milton, for an assault on Officer Hibbard of Milton.—After hearing the evidence, the case was continued until Monday next.—Brophy is an old offender; he has often been brought before the Court for being drunk. He appears like a hard working man, but intoxicating liquors keep him a good part of the time in "hot water."

☞ All the capital stock of the Hingham Water Company has been taken up, amounting to eighty thousand dollars.—The contractors for the work took one half the stock at par, and agree to put in the entire service for seventy thousand dollars. Eben L. Ripley is president, and Starkes Whiton treasurer of the company. These gentlemen, with nine directors and two auditors, compose the board of officers.

Poetry.

Our Daily Reckoning.

If you sit down at set of sun,
And count the acts that you have done;
And counting, find
One self-denying act, one word
That eased the heart of him who heard;
One glance most kind,
That fell like sunshine where it went,
Then you may count that day well spent.

But if through all the live-long day
You've cheered no heart by yea or nay;
If through it all
You've nothing done that you can trace,
That brought the sunshine to one face;
No act most small,
That helped some soul, and nothing cost,
Then count that day as worse than lost.

Agricultural, &c.

Work for September.

Pears should always be ripened off of the tree, and must be sent to market before they soften. Bushel boxes are handled with ease and safety, and this is a favorite package. It should be lined with white paper, and packed from the bottom. In no case should the fruit be shaken from the trees. Various inventions are in use for reaching the specimens which grow upon high and unhandy branches.

Budding is an important work at present, the most of the immense stock of peach-trees are budded this month, as are the pear on quince, and the cherry on the Mahaleb. The precise time depends upon the condition of the stock. The ties should be cut as soon as the buds have become firmly set, or have "taken," which will be known by their remaining plump and green and falling of the leaf-stalk.

Prune currants and gooseberries as soon as the leaves fall. Cuttings may be made at the same time, and planted at once in rows a few inches apart. A mulch may be applied with good effect.

In gathering choice clusters of grapes use the scissors which hold the bunch after it is cut, thus avoiding the touching of the berries, which removes the bloom and injures their appearance.

Gather cucumbers for pickles every second day. Let none ripen save those needed for seed, and they should be of the earliest, otherwise the vines die.—American Agriculturalist for September.

The Second Crop.

Many farmers object to cutting two crops of grass in one season on the ground that it exhausts the soil too much for a future crop; but this theory will hardly hold good when it is known that the soil is really more exhausted by allowing the second crop to go to seed than by cutting at the proper time and making good "cow" hay of it. We think this is correct doctrine, for we are very sure that were the crop of clover allowed fully to go to seed before cutting, there would be no second crop following it worth cutting. We think it is the true policy of a farmer to take from his land all the cropping he can, and then restoring its fertility by judicious manuring; otherwise he would be ignoring the two most important integers connected with farming, to wit: The realization of all the products practicable, and the actual uses of manuring.—Germantown Telegraph.

To Prevent Horses Gnawing.—"E. H.," Springfield, Ohio, writes: "Try painting the troughs and adjacent woodwork with tar; it seems a perfect remedy." We have covered the edges of the troughs and of the exposed parts of the stall with sheet zinc; this is a perfect remedy: the horses let it severely alone, after having completely destroyed a set of white oak troughs thoroughly soaked with tar. It is rather costly, but is cheap in the end. Sheet iron would be cheaper and probably equally effective.

☞ One of the largest cranberry farms in the world is known as Sackett's Marsh, near Berlin, Wisconsin. It comprises 750 acres of marsh, about one-fourth of which is under cultivation. The yield has sometimes reached the enormous total of 35,000 bushels.

Hurrying the Cows. If moderation is needed anywhere on the farm, it is in the driving of cows. A boy or a dog, that will hurry and therefore worry the cows as they are taken to and from the pasture should be—to put it mildly—attended to. Boys do not run the cows home, even if it is getting late, especially if it is on the way to the yard and their udders are full of milk.

Anecdotes.

A resident of a country village recently buried his wife, a woman of unusual size. A few days after the sad event, a neighbor in attempting to console the widower, remarked:

"Well, Mr. —— you have met with a heavy loss."

"Yes," replied the mourner with a sigh, "she weighed most four hundred pounds.

"Chawles," languidly drawled Josephine, looking up from her book, "I see one of the studies at West Point is trigonometry. What is trigonometry, anyhow?"

"Trigonometry," replied Charles, toying with an invalid moustache, "is a—a—is the science of pulling the trigger, of course."

"I thought so," said Josephine, resuming her novel.

She laid her pretty hand upon her husband's shoulder. "Henry, love, there's something the matter with the clock; will you see to it?" So he took off his coat, removed the face and hands, examined the interior with a magnifying glass, blew into them with the bellows, oiled them thoroughly, and did all that mortal ingenuity could devise. But it was of no avail; and so, despairing, at a late hour of the night he went to bed and slept the sleep of the righteous.

Next morning at breakfast quoth she: "Henry, dear, I know what was the matter with the clock."

"Well?"

"It only wanted winding."

If you feel dull drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take Simmons's Liver Regulator or Medicine.

The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the World! An Effectual Specific for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen.

Regulate the Liver and prevent CHILLS AND FEVER MALARIOUS FEVERS, BOWEL COMPLAINTS, RESTLESSNESS, JAUNDICE AND NAUSEA.

TAKE SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

BAD BREATH.

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath, and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be so easily corrected if you will take Simmons' Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your Appetite, Complexion, and General Health.

PILES!

How many suffer torture day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering from Piles. Yet relief is ready to the hand of almost any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. Simmons' Liver Regulator, is no drastic violent purge; but a gentle assistant to nature.

CONSTIPATION!

SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulation from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache.

Poetry.

Better than Gold.

Better than grandeur, better than gold,
Than rank and title a thousand fold,
Is a healthy body and mind at ease,
And simple pleasures that always please;
A heart that can feel for another's woe,
And show its joys with a genial glow;
With sympathies large enough to enfold
All men as brothers, is better than gold.

Better than gold is a conscience clear,
Though toiling for bread in an humble sphere;
Doubly blessed! in content and health,
Untried by the lust of cares or wealth;
Lowly living and lofty thought,
Adorn and ennoble a poor man's cot;
For mind and morals, in Nature's plan,
Are the genuine tests of a gentleman.

Better than gold is the sweet repose
Of the sons of toil when their labors close;
Better than gold is the poor man's sleep,
And the balm that drops on his slumbers deep
Brings sleepy draughts to the downy bed,
Where luxury pillows his aching head;
But he its simple opiate deems
A shorter route to the land of dreams.

Better than gold is the thinking mind,
That in realms of books can find
A treasure surpassing Australian ore,
And live with the great and good of yore;
The Sage's lore and the Poet's lay,
The glories of empire pass away;
The World's great dream will thus enfold,
And yield a pleasure better than gold.

Better than gold is a peaceful home,
Where all the fireside characters come;
The shrine of love, the heaven of life,
Hallowed by mother, or sisters, or wife;
However humble the home may be,
Or tried with sorrow by heaven's decree,
The blessings that never were bought nor sold,
And centre there, are better than gold.

TAPIOCA CREAM. Soak three large tablespoonfuls of tapioca over night in one pint of water; the next morning add one quart of milk and boil; a little salt, four eggs, one cup of sugar; flavor with lemon or vanilla; beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth, and brown in the shape of an egg; put on top of the pudding when it is cold.

GINGER SNAPS. Take two eggs, one cup brown sugar, two cups molasses, one cup heaping full of lard, little salt; beat well together; set upon the stove until it boils; add two tablespoonfuls each of ginger and soda, covered with four tablespoonfuls of boiling water; mix soft; roll thick for cookies, or mix stiff and roll thin for snaps. They are delicious.

BAKED TOMATOES. Scald and peel a sufficient quantity of smooth round tomatoes; put into a deep earthen ware dish and sprinkle plentifully with salt and pepper; have a teacupful or more, according to the quantity of tomatoes, of fine cracker crumbs, and spread over the top. Bake in a quick oven from thirty to forty-five minutes. Drop a few lumps of butter into the tomatoes, and serve.

LUCILLA'S LOVE LETTERS.

"Are there any more of those silly letters?"

When her father asked this question, in an awful tone, Lucilla Richmond could not say "no" and dared not say "yes," so as an intermediate course she burst into a storm of tears behind her handkerchief.

"Bring them to me, Lucilla," said her father, as if she had answered him, as indeed she had, and the girl, trembling and weeping, rose to obey.

Then Mrs. Richmond, her daughter's very self grown older, came behind her husband's chair, and patted him on the shoulder.

"Please don't be hard with her, my dear," she said, coaxingly. "He's a nice young man, and it's our fault, after all, as much as hers, and you won't break her heart, I'm sure."

"Perhaps you approve of the whole affair, ma'am," said Mr. Richmond.

"I—no—that is, I only"—gasped the little woman; and hearing Lucilla coming, she sank into a chair, blaming herself for not having been present at all her daughter's music lessons, during the year.

For all this disturbance grew out of a music master—a black-eyed young man, who had given lessons to Miss Lucilla for twelve months or more, had taken the liberty to fall in love with her, knowing that she was the daughter of one of the richest merchants in the city.

It was inexcusable in a poor music master, "who should have known his place," Mr. Richmond declared, and he clutched the little perfumed billet that had fallen in his hands as he might a scorpion, and waited for the others with a look upon his face that told of no softening. They at last came—just six little dainty white envelopes, tied together with blue ribbon, and were laid at his elbow by his departing daughter. He gathered them up with a scorn.

"Lock all these up until I return home this evening," he said to his wife; "I will read them. Meanwhile Lucilla is not to see this music master upon any pretence."

And then Lucilla went down upon her knees.

"Oh! dear papa!" she cried; "dearest papa, please don't say I am never to see him again. I couldn't bear it, indeed I could not bear it. He is poor, I know, but he is a gentleman, and I—like him so much, father."

"No more of this absurdity, my dear," said Mr. Richmond, rising as he spoke. "He has been artful enough to make you believe he is perfection, I suppose. Your parents know best what is for your happiness."

With these words Mr. Richmond put on his hat and overcoat, and took his way towards those mysterious precincts, known as "the city."

Then Lucilla and her mother took the opportunity of falling into each other's arms.

"It is so naughty of you," said Mrs. Richmond, "but oh dear, I can't blame you, it was just so with me. I ran away with your father, you know, and my parents objected because of his poverty. I feel the greatest sympathy for you, and Frederick has such fine eyes, and is so very nice. I wish I could soften your papa."

She coaxed Lucilla to stop crying, and then went up to her room to put the letters in her desk; and as she placed them in one pretty pigeon hole, she saw in another a bundle tied just as those were and drew them out.

These were letters to Lucilla also, one who had received them twenty years before; and she now a matron old enough to have a daughter who had heart troubles, unfolded them one by one, wondering how it came to pass that lovers' letters were all so much alike!

Just half a dozen; just the same number—and much more desperate than the one the music master had written to her daughter. A strange idea came into Mrs. Richmond's mind. She dared not oppose her husband; by no word or look had she ever attempted such a thing. But she was very fond of her daughter. When she left the desk she looked guilty and frightened, and something rustled in her pocket as she moved. She said nothing to anyone on the subject until dinner time came, and with it her husband, angrier and more determined than ever. The meal was passed in silence. Then having adjourned to the parlor much as an executioner and two culprits might have proceeded to the gallows. Mr. Richmond seated himself in a great arm chair, and demanded all the letters.

Mrs. Richmond put her hand into her pocket and pulled it back with a frightened look.

Mr. Richmond repeated still more sternly: "Those absurd letters, if you please, ma'am."

And then the little woman faltered out: "I—that is—I believe, yes dear, I think I have them," and gave him a white bundle of envelopes, encircled with a blue ribbon, with a hand that trembled like an aspen leaf.

And Mr. Richmond dropped the first letter, and then took up another.

"The same stuff," he commented. "I hope you don't believe a word he says. A plain, earnest, upright sort of a man would never go into such rhapsodies I am sure. And now in number three, this blessed fellow calls you 'an angel!' He is dramatic upon my word! And now what is all this?"

"'Those who would forbid you to see me can find no fault with me but my poverty. I am honest, I am earnest in my efforts, I am by birth a gentleman, and I love you from my soul. Do not let them sell you for gold, Lucilla.' Great heavens, what impertinence to your parents!"

"I don't remember Fred's writing anything of that sort," murmured poor little Lucilla. "He never knew you would object."

Mr. Charles Richmond shook his head, frowned, and read on in silence until the last sheet lay under his hand. Then, with an ejaculation of rage, he started to his feet.

As for Lucilla, she began to weep as though the end of all things had come at last, and to feel quite sure that if papa proved himself cruel she should die.

"Six letters—six shameful letters of deception, Lucilla," said the indignant parent. "I am shocked that a child of mine should practise such duplicity. Hem! let me see. Number one, I believe, June, and this is December. Half a year you have deceived us, Lucilla. Let me see! Ah! 'From the first moment he adored you,' eh? People don't fall in love in that absurd manner. It takes years of acquaintance, with respect and attachment. What next? 'With your smiles for his goal, he would win both fame and fortune, poor as he is!' Fiddlesticks, Lucilla. A man who had common sense would always wait until he had a fair commencement before he proposed to any girl. Praise of your beauty, 'The loveliest creature he ever saw!' Exaggeration, my dear. You are not plain, but such flattery is absurd. 'Must hear from you or die!'

"Infamous!" he cried; "I'll go to the rascal this instant—I'll horsewhip him! As for you, I'll send you to a convent. Elope with a music teacher! I'm ashamed to call you a daughter! Where's my hat? Here, John, call for a cab!—"

But here Lucilla caught one arm, and Mrs. Richmond the other.

"Oh, papa, have you gone crazy?" said Lucilla. "Frederick never proposed such a thing. Let me see the letter. Oh, papa, this is not Fred's—upon my word it is not. Do look please—it is dated twenty years back—and Frederick's name is not Charles! Papa, these are your love letters to mamma, written so long ago! Her name is Lucilla, you know!"

Mr. Richmond sat down on his arm chair in silence, very red in the face. "How did this occur?" he asked sternly.

Mrs. Richmond retreated into one corner with her handkerchief to her eyes, sobbing out, "I did it on purpose!" then paused as though she expected a sudden judgement.

"You know, Charles," she said, "it is so long ago, we are both altered a good deal, and I thought you might not exactly remember how you fell in love with me at first sight, and how papa and mamma objected; and it seems to me that if we could bring it all back plain as it was then, we must let dear Lucilla marry the man she likes—who is nice if he is not rich. I did not need it to be brought back any plainer myself—women have more time to remember, you know. And we've been very happy have we not?"

And certainly, Mr. Richmond could not deny that. So, Lucilla feeling that her interests might safely be left in her mother's keeping slipped out of the room, and heard the result of the little stratagem next morning. It was favorable to the young music master, who had really only been sentimental, had not gone half so far as to propose an elopement; and in due time the two were married with all the pomp and grandeur befitting the nuptials of a wealthy merchant's daughter, with the perfect approbation of Lucilla's father, and to the great joy of Lucilla's mother, who justly believed that her little stratagem had brought about all her daughter's happiness.

Sketches in Switzerland.

BY PROFESSOR E. P. THWING.

From the Righi Kulm, the summit of the most frequented of Alpine mountains, I send postal card greetings to my Quincy friends. Leaving Lucerne for Vitznau by the five o'clock boat we saw the glory of an Alpine sunrise from Lake Lucerne, which is called the most attractive of Swiss lakes. Ascending this mountain by the clog-wheel rail, a Yankee idea, we have an early view of this magnificent district. What grander picture can we desire, who are about setting sail for America? A circumference of 300 miles is bounded on the one hand by the Jura range and on the other by the Bernese Oberland. Scores of lakes and hundreds of Alpine peaks are seen from five to fifteen thousand feet high, while villages are sprinkled in the valleys like bread crumbs. Yonder is is the battle field where A. W. cried, "Make way for Liberty; made way for Liberty and died"—No reference to Artemus Ward.

Further off, the Jungfrau, or Maiden, stands in virgin purity, clothed in snowy robes, like an angel before the great white throne. Zurich, Lucerne and other towns, are in full view, while Pilatus hides his face, as if the ghost of the Roman procurator hated the light. The vapor clinging to the mountains, reflected in lakes with varying tints, turns the watery pavement to mosaics, and so color and form and motion combine to make the scene one of fairy delicacy and beauty.

Yes, this last picture of landscape loveliness, that is of conspicious grandeur which we may hope to see, will long remain in memory and imagination. After visiting in ten countries, Switzerland gives me the last if not the noblest of the scenic treasures gathered the past summer.

To-night I hope to be in Basle and to-morrow in Paris. Having seen in 1855 its prominent attractions, I make a short stay and hasten to Liverpool to sail Sept. 3d on the "Italy." My friends who wish particulars of "Three Months Abroad" can have them in due season in a volume with that title. It sketches a trip from Queenstown to Naples, from the Hebrides to Venice and may have a value both to those who have taken or propose taking such a delightful journey.

August 25th, 1879.

N. H. Veteran Association.

The third encampment of the veteran soldiers of New Hampshire assembled at the Weirs on the 25th ult. Col. Parker was the orator of the day. and from the Union Democrat, published at Manchester, N. H., we copy the following:

"Col. Francis W. Parker, formerly of this city, now of Quincy, was then introduced. He began by alluding to the changes wrought in fourteen years, since the army of the rebellion was mustered out and assumed the avocation of peace. He depicted in most graphic terms the hardships, the sorrows and the joys of the old life, through all of which ran the hope and prayer for the end, for the achievement of the final victory for which they fought: he dwelt upon the dark hour preceding the dawn of deliverance when the soldiers were haunted by the thought, "what if, after all, we fail!" He had no patience in remembering what he often read in the papers of the time, "the soldiers are eager for the fray," "the boys are spoiling for a fight." We may boldly confess now, said he, what even then was an open secret, that every soldier, no matter how brave, trembled and blanched with fear until the carnage had begun and the blood up; then fear was unknown and the excitement often lasted after fearful wounds until death. Where courage was most required was in the slow operations of the siege, where for many days and nights together the men were exposed to instant death, with no excitement to carry them through. The orator's description of a charge brought almost every veteran to his feet, and the cheers could not be suppressed.

"From this serious vein the orator passed to the humorous side of army life, to its grim jokes, and rollicking humor. Finally he adverted to the dangers which menaces the country now. Its chief danger he considered to be from the machinations of professional politicians. He called upon the veteran soldiers to rally at the polls with the cry of "honest men to the front, bummers and demagogues to the rear," to see to it that none but the best men were put in office, and to show no quarter to the men, too often found in office, who place their party before the country and consider themselves of more consequence than either.

"Everybody said that this was the best oration ever delivered on such an occasion. We can safely assert that it differed from nearly all because in it there was no buncombe, no word of narrow partisanship, nothing to encourage antagonism between classes or parties."

"Gen. Hooker was the next speaker. He said he was no orator, but could not on this occasion resist the enthusiastic applause. He spoke very highly of the Second New Hampshire Regiment as one of the crack regiments of his Brigade. He complimented the orator in the highest terms, and said that if New Hampshire can produce many such, there can be no wonder that she is considered such a grand old state. He thought the oration ought to be printed and hung up in every house in the state. He closed by saying that if he had tried to do his duty in the last war, he would try to do a great deal more in the next."

The Independent Statesman, published at Concord, N. H., speaking of the oration, says:

"Col. Parker's oration was chiefly descriptive of war experiences, and hence deeply interesting to the veterans, who frequently testified their approbation by cheers. There were passages of much eloquence, and being delivered extemporaneously, had a thrilling effect. Certain references in the closing part might have been omitted with profit to the orator. As one distinguished officer remarked, the politics of to-day are no worse than those of yesterday, and the idea of a Saint's party is not pleasing to those who have watched closely the outcome of modern phariseeism."

Live a Good Life.

How sad and gloomy this life would be without a hope of meeting our loved ones beyond the River. Then, how all important for us to live noble lives.—God has assigned us a work to perform, and we should strive with all our power to do it and to do it well. We are weak mortals without the God that dwells within us. But when we exercise that power we are strong. We have the power to be good and noble. If each one in this world would do his best, how beautiful the wheel of progression would roll along. It seems to me that the people have got so corrupt that there must be a great eruption to bring us to our senses; to let us know that God will rule in spite of weak mortals. The Spirit is continually wishing to know more of the hereafter. How shall we gain this knowledge? By living good lives day by day; and God will come nearer to us and dwell with us. We will feel his power working upon our spirit, making the hereafter appear a reality to us. Then we shall gain some new truths every day. We know but little of the promises of God, as yet. My friends, we cannot look upon one thing in nature but what we see God's handy work.—Then why should we for a moment doubt his word. He will fulfil his part well.—Then I say, listen to that still small voice that speaks to us in the silent hours of the night.

A TRUE FRIEND.

For the Patriot.

Prominent New Yorkers.

No one more prominent than the Rev. Morgan Dix, Rector of Trinity parish, and son of the late Governor Dix. At heart he sympathizes with the Ritualists, but his natural bent of mind is Jesuitical, and therefore, what encouragement he gives to the innovators just mentioned, is rather covert than open. If he were to go to extremes, his vestry though "high church," might bring him up short, and thus he might lose a position which, besides yielding a neat ten thousand a year, gives him great influence and enables him in many ways to extend aid and comfort to more open partisans of the new doctrines. So he trims his sails, and like the skilled pilot that he is, avoids difficulties, and steers his bark safely among besetting theological shoals and quicksands. He is tall and thin, a nervous looking man; his face clean shaven, complexion sallow, eyes gray and set deep in his head, nose of medium size, but far from classical; his lips thin and compressed, hair originally dark, now turning gray. Expression that of a man who has much to revolve in his own mind, which outsiders are not to know anything about. A face not illumined by a broad sunshiny look—a look in sympathy with human nature and mankind in general. Yet he is a polite and courteous gentleman, but this is, of course, a result of education. One might have supposed that by this time, the influence of his handsome young wife, would have produced some modifying results, but however this may be at home, to the world at large there is still the same Jesuitical, ascetic appearance.

St. Thomas (Episcopal) is par excellence, the fashionable church of the city, having somewhat outstripped Grace, which used to carry off the palm. No greater contrast could be found than that which exists between Rev. Wm. F. Morgan the Rector, and the worthy individual of whom I have just endeavored to give you some idea. Dr. Morgan's face is filled with sunshine, his manners though extremely elegant, yet so kindly sympathetic that one feels instantly at ease. He is above medium height, rather broad, his complexion clear, side whiskers and hair a pure white. His features are irregular, but he is so eminently gifted with the rather inexplicable something that we call "presence," that one is astonished afterwards on a critical survey, to find some imperfections. His voice is remarkably good, and fills from end to end the spacious edifice where on Sundays he lays down the law to listening sinners.

'Tis a wide jump between doctors of divinity and newspaper men, but you see I write these little sketches as the spirit moves me, and without any set plan or special study. Just at this moment I happen to think of Charles A. Dana, the well known editor of the Sun. His face hardly shows that bitterness of resentment which causes him to pursue so relentlessly those unlucky individuals who may have offended him. Like all acrimonious people, he has plenty of enemies, but the positiveness of his nature has caused friends also to rally around him. He is a commanding looking man, tall, rather spare, having quite regular features, and searching eyes; apparently between fifty and sixty; with long grey beard. He is restless and quick in his movements, and gives you a "yes" or "no" in answer with such a look of sharp decisiveness, that you know instinctively there is no use contending the matter against so imperious a will.

James Gordon Bennett of the Herald is also a tall man. His figure is good, but his face is long and out of all proportion, and thus he is debarred from winning the prize for beauty. His eyes are blue, his hair light, and his complexion florid.

Miss Mary Booth, the editress of Harper's Bazar, is not so much a woman of positive talent, as of excellent judgment and entire reliability. Her father was a professional man of Brooklyn, and she therefore comes justly by her inclination toward books. She is said to be handsomer now than she was as a young lady. Of that I cannot speak with certainty, but she is undoubtedly at present a fine looking lady, tall, somewhat portly and with white hair. She is very popular with persons of all ages, and her receptions are usually well attended.

Republican Caucus.

The Republicans of this town held a caucus at the Town Hall on Thursday evening, agreeably to the call of the Town Committee. The attendance was not very large, and there was no particular excitement, except to defeat or prevent if possible, Henry H. Faxon, Esq., being a delegate to the State Convention. On the first ballot, 107 votes were cast, and three delegates were elected to the State Convention, and five delegates to each of the others. On the second ballot, Theophilus King, Jr., had 63 votes, Henry H. Faxon 53, and Charles R. Sherman 52; the first two were declared elected, which completed the list of delegates, which are as follows:

STATE CONVENTION:—Edwin W. Marsh, Herbert M. Federhen, Charles H. Porter, Theophilus King, Jr., and Henry H. Faxon.

COUNCILLOR CONVENTION:—Charles Marsh, Joseph M. Gilson, Edward A. Adams, Charles W. Carter, Edwin B. Pratt.

SENATORIAL CONVENTION:—Edward B. Souther, Herbert T. Whitman, Elbridge Clapp, John W. Hall and Charles Marsh.

COUNTY CONVENTION:—John Q. A. Field, L. W. Anderson, Washington M. French, George F. Pinkham, and John O. Holden.

The following Town Committee was elected for the ensuing year:—Charles H. Porter, John P. Bigelow, Israel Waterhouse, Wm. C. Seelye, E. B. Souther, Thaddeus H. Newcomb, I. Freeman Hall, Warren W. Adams, John D. Nutting, W. H. Nicholson, Alonzo Glines, Edward A. Spear, Jesse F. Curtis, Thos. Fenno, Robert Wadmore, Herbert T. Whitman, Herbert F. Doble, Henry McGrath, and Frederick H. Smith.

During the time the committee were engaged in counting the votes, Hon. Charles W. Slack of the Commonwealth, who happened to be present, was called upon for a speech, which he responded to in an able and eloquent manner.—Mr. W. W. Williamson, of Wollaston, also by invitation, made a short and patriotic address.

FIRE. About eight o'clock on Wednesday morning an alarm of fire was given, but fortunately the services of the Fire Department were not needed. A little boy, six to eight years old, son of Mr. John R. Graham, proposed having a little fire on his own hook. He accordingly went into the house and got some matches and proceeded to the hen house near the barn, where there was a lot of old excelsior, which he set on fire. Fortunately the mischievous boy and his brother got frightened and gave an alarm, which called Mr. Wm. D. Glover and others from Mr. Graham's boot manufactory, and they extinguished the fire with a few pails of water. It was fortunate the fire got but little headway, as there is a scarcity of water in that vicinity,—none sufficient for fire purposes, we learn, within 1000 feet,—and before the Fire Department could have rendered any aid, one or more of the buildings would have been destroyed.

SUDDEN DEATH. Mrs. Mary Howard died very suddenly of hemorrhage on Monday evening. She resided with her son on Mechanic street, and has been in poor health for a long time, but seemed as well as usual on Monday. Her son having some business to transact left home that evening for a short time. On his return he found that the lamp had not been lighted and proceeded to get one and in doing so his foot struck against what he thought was the mat, and he stooped to smooth it down and found that it was his mother's foot. He took hold of it and called mother three times but received no answer. As quickly as possible he lighted a lamp and an awful sight was presented to his view, his mother lay dead, covered with blood. He called for assistance at once and Dr. Morison, the medical examiner, was summoned.

ADAMS ACADEMY. The new year of the Adams Academy opened on the 10th instant. The attendance was smaller than usual, owing in part to some neglect in announcing the day of beginning. The scholars entering from Quincy so far are C. F. Adams, 3d, son of J. Q. Adams, Esq., F. B. Rice, son of Wm. B. Rice, Esq., and W. S. Robinson, son of Capt. J. H. Robinson.

We should be sorry to think that our citizens hesitate to avail themselves of the advantages of this well-known institution. There seems to be some doubt how far the funds will avail for the support of our boys, as in the town's vote of last March. The details are still in the hands of the Managers, and no gentlemen know or love our town and its boys better. But we have in the meantime the very best authority for saying, that no boy who proves by scholarship and good conduct that he is fitted to receive an education at the academy, need hesitate to join it for fear the funds will not cover his case.

PLEAD GUILTY. Alexander G. Stockwell and James Harrison, the two burglars who were arrested by Officer Furnald for breaking and entering the store of Miss L. M. Jillson on Hancock street in this town, on the 9th of July, plead guilty before the Grand Jury, and have this week received their sentences,—five years each in the State Prison.

John E. Mann of Randolph, who was brought before the District Court in July last, for an assault upon Adelaide A. Whiting of Braintree, and bound over, plead not guilty but the jury found otherwise, and the Judge gave him a sentence of three years.

JURORS. Messrs. Benjamin L. Crane and Chas. H. Edwards have been drawn to serve as Jurors in the Civil Session of the September Term of the Superior Court for Norfolk County.

Local Items.

☞ Capt. George Spear will please accept our thanks for his fine treat of fruit.

☞ A young woman is desirous of securing a situation in a small family.

☞ An independent caucus will be held at the Lyceum Room on Monday evening next, to choose delegates to attend the Butler Convention, which is to be held at Worcester, on Thursday next.

☞ A course of entertainments will be given by the members of Paul Revere Post this season. It will consist of lectures and concerts, and it is the intention of the Post to make the course both instructive and entertaining.

☞ The store in Robertson's block recently leased by Mrs. Lapham, has been very handsomely painted by Mr. Perez Chubbuck. It will be opened to-day, as a first-class millinery and dress-making establishment by Mrs. F. A. Lapham.

The evening services of the First Church begin next Sunday evening with vespers, on succeeding Sunday evenings practical lectures will be delivered by the pastor. The public is cordially invited.

☞ A little girl named Gould was knocked down and run over by a team on School street, as she was coming from school, but strange to say got up and started for home, having received a few scratches.

☞ Mr. Nathaniel Nightingale, who keeps the "little shop around the corner," has enjoyed this week a pleasant visit at Lawrance, Mass., among the cotton, woolen and paper mills of that city.

☞ Mr. Samuel Thomas, a member of the Post Office Department, in Washington, D. C., is visiting among his friends in this town. He is accompanied by his wife. We were pleased to see him looking as though he was enjoying excellent health.

☞ Ten days or more were highly enjoyed by several families at the Smith cottage, Rock Island. The party consisted of Dr. Small and wife, Dr. Bonney wife and child, Mr. W. B. Munroe and wife, Mr. J. Frank Brown and wife, Mr. Hicks and wife, and Frederick Souther. Clams were in abundance and the company had a general good time.

☞ There has appeared in our streets this week one of the handsomest baker's carts we have ever noticed. It was built by Mr. William P. Brown of Randolph and is owned by our enterprising townsman, Hon. William A. Hodges. It attracts attention wherever it goes, and is a good advertisement for Mr. Hodges. Mr. John M. Pitman is the popular driver of this fine turnout, which makes the team complete.

Reply to "Union Cutter."

To the Publishers of the Patriot:

Noticing a communication in the Globe by UNION CUTTER, which is calculated to mislead the public judgment, we ask the favor of a reply to the same.

UNION CUTTER makes the statement that at the close of the last strike an agreement was made between the Union men and their employers that the non-union men should be allowed to work in the yards where they were then employed, but if they moved from one yard to another the Union men might strike "or adopt such means as they thought proper," (whatever such means might be is a conundrum not yet explained,) and that the Contractors should sustain them in so doing.

If such an agreement had been made between the men and their employers, there would have been a just cause of making against the Bosses the charge of bad faith and violation of an honorable agreement. But all the Contractors of Quincy emphatically deny being party to such agreement, pronounce the statement a fabrication from beginning to end, and would willingly make oath to that effect.

Quincy for a long number of years escaped the curse of the combination of Labor against Capital and Capital against Labor. Each individual contractor hired his own men in his own way, and each individual workman made the best bargain he could with his employer, and the men were well paid. From 1862 to 1873, the average pay was four dollars a day for a good workman. The now hateful Bosses were considered human beings and enjoyed the confidence and good will of their men. But, since the price of labor has been reduced by the pressure of hard times and circumstances over which the Contractors had little or no control, the men have been discontented and fault-finding, and the formation of a branch of what they term the Stone-Cutters International Union, in this town last year, culminating in a strike causing a heavy loss of time to the men, suffering to their families, and general depression of the business of the town, to say nothing of the losses to the Contractors.

When the scale of prices was finally agreed upon, and the men had gone to work, it was hoped by the community that all causes for further trouble had been removed, but the bitterness and hatred between Union and non-Union men had not been expunged, and this caused our present troubles.

The contractors freely grant that the workingmen have a perfect right to form clubs, societies, or other organizations for their mutual benefit and protection, or any other purpose not detrimental to the welfare of the community, or an infringement on individual rights. They believe that individuals have rights which all organizations are bound to respect. They fail to understand how in the present instance, the action of the cutters can be defended, or that they have not assumed a dictatorial part and a pretension, which, conceded, would be fatal to the conduct of business, and tend toward the destruction of individual rights. They hold that every man has a natural right to labor for his own and his family's support wherever he can find employment, free from the dictation of any society or organization of men.—They also believe that the Contractors have the right to hire such mechanics as they consider competent to do their work, without the dictation of any society.—These rights they mean to defend and maintain. They do not mean to proscribe any man because he belongs to a society or a club, but will employ Union or non-Union men on the same basis. Society men, however, must understand that hands who do not choose to belong to their clubs or societies must not be disturbed or molested while at work in any of the yards.

Believing that it is for the best interest of all concerned to have a good understanding, and hoping that the mechanics will have the good sense to see their true position, and the duties they owe to themselves and the community in which they live, the above is respectfully submitted to the judgment of the intelligent reader.

The Adams School House.

Is it not a little singular that after all the money expended for the education of our people, that we have not been able to produce an architectural artist who was able to originate a style of American architecture as distinctive from all other nations, so that our nationality might be known by our buildings as other nations are. England, France, Germany, Switzerland and the semi-civilized nations such as Russia, China, Japan, Turkey, are as well known by their distinctive style of architecture as by their language. Let us be annihilated to-morrow, nothing of us as an independent distinctive nation or race could be learned from our architecture. A traveller on exploring our ruins would be unable to classify, or even guess the purpose or use of many of our public buildings. He might detect bastard Grecian temples in scores, but would neither think or dream that they were erected for banks, colleges or custom-houses. By what process of reasoning would he be able to account for the ignoble and impoverished Gothic chapels converted into libraries and other architectural anomalies that disgrace and disfigure our soil.

We have been drawn to these reflections by a visit to the Adams school house recently remodeled. Would the architect please inform us to what order of architecture this building is classified, whether Gothic, Tudor, Elizabethian, Flamboyant, Perpendicular or Castellated, or for the sake of variety has invaded the well known orders of the art, such as the Lombard, Tuscan, Romanesque, or any other known or unknown. We are of an opinion that it approximates nearer to the unknown. The worthy superintendent of our schools thinks it resembles more a boot and shoe factory than an educational institution. It is somewhat strange when the town had made ample appropriation for first class modern school rooms, that such a building so ill adapted for the purpose, should be erected.

On entering the building, we found the school rooms dark, gloomy and cheerless, this was owing to the want of more windows for lighting the rooms. The best German and American authors who have written upon school architecture state, that for a school room containing fifty scholars the lighting capacity should be 350 square inches of glass for each scholar. None of these rooms contain this required amount of illumination, only possessing about two-thirds of this amount. It is also a rule of architecture that the light should be equally distributed, this is especially not the case in the room located in the third story, as the windows which give two-thirds of the light to it, are placed in the extreme westerly end. In the front part, two small round side lights, and two transome windows, six lights of glass each, are placed in the partition wall; this, besides the insufficiency of light, causes a cross light which is very objectionable and injurious to the sight of the pupil. What effect does an imperfectly lighted school room have upon the pupil? We answer, that all physicians and oculists that have written upon school hygiene, state that imperfect illumination of public school rooms is the cause of myopie or near-sightedness, which is a disease of the eye, and extremely likely to be transmitted to their children. We think that parents do not desire that their children should be educated with imperfect vision.

As so much has been said upon the method of heating this room, we will endeavor to state the facts and let the public judge for themselves. According to the architect's plan, the room was to be heated by a stove placed in the back part of it, the funnel to pass on the north side some twenty feet, and then pass through the wall nine feet from the floor into the attic of the north wing of the building, thence going some thirty feet into the chimney. After the building had been partly constructed, the committee, person or persons who had charge of the erection of the school house, decided not to accept the architect's plan. To remedy this defect, as well as to economize the funds they concluded to substitute drain pipe instead of brick for a chimney, which is constructed from the floor in the partition wall through the roof, and surmounted by a dummy chimney, this we think is decidedly different from that contemplated by the architect.

It is very doubtful if the expensive system of ventilation put into the building will work, as there is so much of it, and its extreme complication. Even if it does, it is very uncertain if the ventilation will furnish the amount of pure air required, 1,700 cubic feet per minute for each child in a class of fifty. We think the master builder could have placed an efficient and more satisfactory system of ventilation in the rooms at half the expense.

The following extract is from the Board of Education's report, and speaks for itself:—"The first and second stories may contain all the school rooms; the third, a large hall for daily assembly, and other rooms for cabinets, libraries, laboratories, drawing, music, &c., if required. It is very desirable to restrict school houses to this height. School girls in their teens suffer from having frequently to climb to the third or fourth story. The fatigue and annoyance tell upon them; and they are apt to be unwilling to descend for recess, and so lose the benefit of the outer air, while the rooms in the meantime cannot be properly aired during their presence in recess-time."

The settling of the floor at the front main entrance had to be propped up, and sufficient additional timber put in to make it permanently secure, this was evidently a neglect of the architect in not having proper timbers put in, in the first place. The extra work from changes made in the building, amounts to something over two hundred dollars. The master builder has given the town a good job considering the limited amount of time he had to do it in. If he could have had a month more time the building would have been worth five hundred dollars more to the town. The porch at the main front entrance is mean and insignificant for a building of this nature. One gentleman remarked, "that it resembled more Robinson Crusoe's figure head to his long boat," than an ornamental part of a building. There is not a room in the building so well lighted and pleasant as those discarded in the old stone school house.
SOUTH QUINCY.

The Double Strike.

To the Editors of the Patriot:

We noticed an article in your issue of the 6th inst., headed "The Strike," which perhaps without any intention to mislead, does not appear to be a fair statement of the present trouble between the granite cutters and their employers.

In the first place it was not because Mr. Cannon was not a member of our union, that the cutters left Mr. W. H. Mitchell's yard, but because he was what has been vulgarly called a scab, and proved an enemy to the interests of our trade in the strike of last year.

The article above referred to might well have been headed "The Double Strike," for, perhaps it is not generally known that the granite bosses of this town have their union also, and their scab, and use, with scarcely any variation, the same means to further their end, which they so loudly condemn in others, nor do they consider beneath them some very contemptible methods of persecution, whereby they may injure, or discourage, members of an organization that was brought into existence by their own greediness. It has been well known to our craft in this town since the last strike, that if any of our members had any trouble with their employers, whether about work or anything else, such a man must look beyond the extent of the bosses organization in Quincy for employment; and we also know of several cases, within the year, wherein even for complaining against breach of contract with regard to the bill of prices, men (good workmen) were discharged, and hunted from shed to shed until they could find work outside of the contractors' ring. Some of those men our organization had to support all winter, but did we say to their employers you must not discharge this or that man, or we will strike your yard? Not quite! We disown any interference in any contractor's business, we do not desire our association to appear in any such matters, unless by mutual consent. Neither did Mitchell's men tell Mr. Mitchell he must discharge Mr. Cannon.

We as an association or individually do not attempt to take away any man's freedom of choosing an employer, if he can, nor any other liberty that belongs to him. Neither do we propose to yield our right to work or leave off working, when we think it judicious to do so; and we consider our craft able to judge when it is for its interest to do either. The bosses I believe claim the right also to discharge our members for any reason or without any reason. In the present instance they have chosen to discharge about 400 men for being so infamous as to belong to "The Granite Cutters' International Union;" and we unhesitatingly acknowledge their right to do so, although such action may eventually prove to have been ill advised, but we do not consider that if every challenged member had deserted the organization it would have accomplished the object aimed at, namely, the return of Mitchell's men to work; for it was something over which this branch of the G. C. I. Union had no jurisdiction, no matter how much soever they might have sympathized therewith.

You remark, it is not well for the workmen themselves to establish the principle of compulsory membership in their trade unions; would you consider it compulsion for the bosses who have quarries, to tell those who have not, if you don't join our organization we will not sell you a foot of stone? We think it is compelling membership as much as anything done by the granite cutters.

A Good Time.

Some twenty-five members and friends of Tiger Engine Co., paid a visit to Torrent Engine Co., of Hingham, on Wednesday evening last.

Soon after arriving, the Hingham ladlies took their machine out for trial, and assisted by the Tigers, threw a Torrent of water to the tune of 220 feet and 9 inches. They have entered for the Weymouth muster, and are as fine a body of gentlemen as ever "manned the brakes." Under the leadership of Capt. Harding, assisted by his able assistants, we predict for them success.

YACHTING. The Rocket and Nattie, fourth class boats of the Dorchester Yacht Club, both of which have won a race for the championship in their class, sailed over the No. 3 course Wednesday afternoon to settle their claim. The Rocket, owned by B. F. Bass, of Quincy, won the race in 1h. 18m. 50s. The sailing time of the Nattie, owned by W. H. Nicholson, of Atlantic, was 1h. 20m. 6s.

☞ Mr. Charles H. Rodgers from Buffalo, N. Y., is visiting his friends in this town. He is accompanied by his wife and child. He is looking well, and says he always enjoys his visits to his boyhood home. He is in a large dry goods and carpet store in Buffalo, and has been in the same establishment for the past nine years.

FEMALE VOTERS. Two more ladies have had the courage to go to the Assessors of Quincy and have their names registered—Mrs. Henry Barker and Mrs. Frederick A. Claflin. Only three ladies in Quincy have had the desire or spunk to go to the Assessors and be registered. The time allowed for this work is short, and all who do not improve the opportunity before Monday night will be deprived the privilege of voting at the next election for school committee.

Public investigation of Prison Labor. A wide scope of inquiry as to its effects. Edwin W. Marsh, Esq., one of the committee. Good results anticipated.

SEPTEMBER 11, 1879.

In the House of Representatives of Massachusetts, March 24th, 1879, it was ordered, that a joint special committee to consist of five members on the part of the House with such as the Senate may join to sit during the recess; to investigate the system of letting out to private contractors the labor of convicts in the penal institutions of this Commonwealth and report in print to the Legislature at its next annual session upon the following subjects:—

The effect of said system upon the general industries of the State. The effect of said system upon the interests of free labor. The effect of this system upon the reformation of the convict. What advantage if any, the products of prison labor have over other manufactures in the matter of profits and cheapness of labor. The effects of any prison contract upon the particular kind or kinds of goods mentioned in said contract. The feasibility of abolishing the contract system, and substituting therefor some other, whereby the profits shall not go to the private contractors but to the State. Such other points not here enumerated as will give said committee full statistics and information upon the subject mentioned. And in order that the full spirit and intent hereof shall be attained, said committee shall have power to send for persons and papers and to examine persons under oath.

Edwin W. Marsh, Esq., your respected and useful townsman is placed on this committee, and the selection by the Speaker was very judicious. Mr. Marsh the past two years has represented Quincy in the popular branch of our Legislature with much credit to himself and his constituents. He has served on important committees, and has been emphatically a working member. He frequently took part in the discussions of the House and is a ready debator.

This special committee on Convict Labor and its correlative matters have had several meetings for counsel and will continue to visit in tours of inspection many of the public institutions of Massachusetts and the neighboring states for information. Their report to the next annual session of the Legislature will be doubtless one of much public interest, as it involves in principle many prominent features of philanthropy and labor enterprise.

The Quincy Patriot.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 13, 1879.

Weymouth.

Two yoke of oxen owned by the Weymouth Iron Co. recently were taken to Boston and sold for about $325. After being killed and dressed one pair weighed 2500 and the other 2000 pounds.

The subscription of Weymouth residents for the relief of the striking operatives in Fall River, was quite liberal, and the money has been forwarded and its receipt acknowledged.

Gen. Daniel Pratt enlightened the citizens of Old Spain a few nights since on the topics of the coming campaign. He was drawn around the village mounted on the old hose carriage by one hundred men. A collection was taken up, which consisted of 6 cents, 4 buttons, 7 chews of tobacco and a $500 bill of Butler money.

The boot and shoe trade of Weymouth continues to be driving and manufacturers say that the prospect is very good for a still better trade next season.

A new summer hotel is to be erected at North Weymouth near the residence of M. James Dunbar, on Sea street, to be opened early next season.

On the 4th inst, Mr. A. Prescott Nash and another gent were thrown from a buggy on Summer St., and though considerably scratched and bruised, escaped without serious injury. The accident was caused by the breaking of the transom bolt and the fall of the front of the buggy to the ground, the dasher and part of the body being badly smashed.

FIREMEN'S MUSTER. The directors of the Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial Society have made arrangements for a Firemen's Muster, Sept. 24th. The prizes are $300, $200, $100, $75, $50 and $25. The playing will be under a tent 240 feet in length, 80 feet wide and 45 feet poles.

POSTAGE STAMPS. The language of postage stamps, instead of flowers, has just been invented. Thus, when a postage stamp is placed upside down on the left hand corner of the letter, it means "I love you;" in the same crosswise, "My heart is another's," straight up and down, "Good-bye, sweetheart, good-bye;" upside down in the right-hand corner, "Write no more;" in the center at the top, "Yes;" opposite at the bottom, "No;" on the right-hand corner at a right angle, "Do you love me?" in the left-hand corner, "I hate you;" top corner on the right, "I wish your friendship;" bottom corner on the left, "I seek your acquaintance;" on a line with the surname, "accept my love;" the same upside down, "I am engaged;" at a right angle in the same place, "I long to see you;" in the middle at the right-hand edge, "Write immediately."

☞ A telephone has been placed in the Congregational church, Mansfield, Ohio, the wires leading to the houses of several invalid persons. It surmounts a floral decoration on the table in front of the platform, where it is hardly seen. The speaker pays no attention whatever to it yet every word in the auditorium is distinctly heard in rooms of the dwelling which the wires reach.

☞ The New York stores now provide a lunch for their customers. In one establishment, in addition to a luncheon, there are also comfortable chairs and a table on which are newspapers, and pens, paper and envelopes for any one who wishes to send off a hasty note. Near by is a post office, where there is every convenience and better attendance than is given in some of the county post-offices.

☞ By a postal regulation which has been in force now for two months, but which perhaps is not generally known, statements, bills, etc., can be mailed in an unsealed envelope, with a one cent stamp. No writing other than the legitimate bill can be placed upon the statements. No such words as "Please remit," can be, neither can a bill receipted be sent.

☞ After a chemical analysis of American canned corn beef by Professor Reinbaum, by order of the German government, which resulted in finding particles of lead therein, owing to careless soldering, the German authorities have publicly warned their people against the use thereof.

☞ Persons owning property along shore between Sagamore and Green hills, near Nantasket, are proposing to ask the legislature next winter to annex the territory to Cohasset, or incorporate it as a new town.

A Medical Discovery.

A correspondent to the Salem Gazette writes:—"Quite a discovery in the treatment of diphtheria has been made here. A young man, whose arm had been amputated, was attacked by diphtheria before healing took place; and instead of the matter incident to that disease being deposited in the throat, the greater portion appeared on the wounded arm, and the diphtheria was very light and easily managed. Dr. Davis, of Mankato, profited by this, and in his next case of diphtheria blistered his patient's chest, and on this blistered part the chief deposits appeared. This was also an easy case of the disease.

The theory of Dr. Davis is that diphtheria usually appears in the throat because of the thinness of the lining of the throat. Hence, when the blister breaks the skin upon any other part of the body, the disease appears there."

WAGES. Wages in the United States are fifty per cent. more than in England, twice as much as in Belgium, three times as much as in Denmark, France and Germany, and more than three times as much as in Spain and Italy. The real necessaries of life are at least as cheap, and in some cases much cheaper in this country than in Europe.—Boston Herald.

☞ Watertown has cut down its high school principal to $1600, and pays two of its grammar school principals $1000 each, and the other two respectively $800 and $700.

Summary of News.

Boston employs 1260 school teachers.

There are in Maine 9,576 Odd Fellows.

The introduction of Chinese (the language) in Harvard College is talked of.

Don't take silver coin with holes punched in it, for you are liable to make a loss of it. There is plenty of it in circulation.

Mr. Bonner paid $35,000 for Goldsmith Maid, and she has netted him $150,000 besides expenses.

A small yellow caterpillar is doing much damage to grapes in Woonsocket. The stems are eaten until the bunches of fruit fall.

Twenty-one new railroads are projected in Ohio this season.

This year's cotton crop is estimated at more than $300,000,000.

The annual interest on our public debt will now be about $84,000,000.

"The fastest steamer in the world" is to be built for the Hudson river.

A Milbury lady has a trained cat which supplies her table with pigeons.

A Boston telegraph messenger boy found a pocket-book containing $6,000 in checks, and got twenty cents reward, after spending three hours in looking up the owner.

The tax on matches—to abolish which strenuous efforts were made last winter—will amount this year to about three and one-quarter millions.

A Woonsocket woman has given birth to three pairs of twins in succession.—Though but thirty-eight years old she has borne fourteen children, eight of whom are living.

A Baltimorean advertised in Philadelphia for twenty-five beautiful ballet girls, and received 900 applications!

A summer resident of Newport has a dinner set of Dresden china for which was paid $10,000.

Benjamin Hicks, a colored man 102 years old was married at Murfreesboro', Tenn., a few days ago.

Rachael Yent worked at blacksmithing in Baltimore until her death, a few days ago. She was robustly handsome, but habitually smoked a clay pipe.

Out of fifty-two candidates for admission to the Braintree high school, only seventeen were successful.

The Bridgewater Normal School opens with a junior class of forty-five members. Miss Clara C. Prince of Boston takes the place of Miss Armes as teacher of music and mathematics.

☞ There have just been forwarded from Turin to Jerusalem two colossal silver candlesticks of exquisite workmanship, which Victor Emanuel, in his lifetime, gave to the Holy Sepulchre.

Budget of Fun.

☞ A well known local preacher in a suburban town, while instructing a class of urchins in the catechism, told them that God could do everything, whereupon one of them asked: "Can God make a rock so big that he can't lift it?" The boy's question remains unanswered.

☞ "Sam," said one little negro to another, "Sam, does your schoolmaster ever give you any rewards of merit?" "I 'spose he does," was the reply; "he gives me a licking every day and says I merit two."

☞ "I never turn out for scoundrels," said a bully, meeting a quaker, and stepping up square before him to inaugurate a quarrel. "I do," said the quaker, and placidly took the other side of the way.

☞ The son of a coffee and spice dealer was asked at school where coffee came from, and the reply was: "Father says I musn't tell and he'll lick me if I do."

☞ "Bub, did you ever stop to think," said a grocer recently, as he measured out half a peck of potatoes, "that these potatoes contain sugar, water and starch?" "No, I didn't," replied the boy; "but I heard mother say you put peas and beans in your coffee, and about a pint of water into every quart of milk you sold." The subject of natural history was dropped.

☞ "John, did you take the note to Mr. Jones?" "Yes, but I don't think he can read it, Sir." "Why so, John!" "Because he is blind. While I was in the room he asked me twice where my hat was, and it was on my head all of the time."

☞ "At what age were you married?" asked she, inquisitively. But the other lady was equal to the emergency, and quietly responded, "At the parsonage."

The Quincy Patriot.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1879.

A Swim. The Randolph Register says :—"Quite recently, a Randolph fellow became imbued with the idea, while at Mears' Beach, Quincy, that he ought to bathe and give his skin a free circulation. The action being father to the thought, he disrobed, and placing his clothes upon the shore, plunged in, (and we'll bet a quarter that the water didn't injure the skin.) While he tarried in the briny deep, absorbed in the task in which he was engaged, he was startled by the sudden appearance of a bundle of clothing. "Ah, ha ! a prize," thought he. "Some unfortunate has been unlucky enough to lose his clothes. I will claim salvage !" He chuckled within himself to think that heaven had smiled so benignly upon him. He then reached forth his hand towards the bundle—he grasped it—he drew it towards him—when lo, and behold, the clothes were his own !"

☞ In one of the primary schools of Salem, Mass., a teacher was endeavoring to ascertain the extent of her children's knowledge of numbers. The question being asked, "Would you rather have three paper bags with two oranges in each, or two bags with three oranges in each ?" all but one little fellow expressed themselves as without preference. The teacher ask ed this pupil for his decision, and he was persistent in his liking for three bags with two oranges in each, his reason, when finally given, being "So I could have more bags to bust."

☞ The Selectmen of Brockton propose, at the November election, in view of the fact that it took a voter about half an hour to deposit a ballot last year, to provide two ballot boxes the coming year. Two files will be formed when the voters enter the hall, those whose names commence with the letters A to H inclusive, going in one line and the remainder in the other. This will be a great convenience.

☞ An old lady at Mount Lebanon, Louisiana, has recently purchased a beautiful metallic casket and a tombstone engraved according to her instructions, for use when she dies. She has made all the necessary preparations for her interment, and now quietly awaits the approach of death.

☞ Westfield women seem determined to carry off the honors for registration over any town of similar size in the state. Within a few days 25 more have applied to the assessors and been assessed, making the total number entitled to vote for school committee next spring 65.

☞ The reports show that for the fiscal year ending with June last, the oranges and lemons brought into the port of New York had a money value of over $2,000,000, and paid a duty of about $560,000.

☞ The fair grounds of the Norfolk County Agricultural Society at Readville, are advertised to be sold at mortgagee's sale, Sept. 24th, the society not being able to raise the amount of indebtedness.

☞ Mr. James Ruggles, of Rochester, Mass., has just had three old chairs upholstered, one of them a rocking chair known to be over two hundred years old. The other two were made over a hundred years ago.

☞ Two Middleboro' women, sisters, aged respectively 83 and 90 years, cultivate a garden of half an acre without help, and the elder one has filled in some spare time this summer by picking a a good quantity of huckleberries.

Dr. Gammons of Brockton, recently rode on his bicycle from that town to Kennebunk, Me., a distance of one hundred and ten miles, between noon of one day and night of the next.

☞ The engine "Electric," Sam. Parker, engineer, is said to be the most costly locomotive that the Old Colony owns. It was built in war times, and cost the company $27,500.

☞ For twelve months ending with July, the United States imported articles to the value of about $450,000,000 and exported $714,000,000 worth of our own products.

☞ Fire escapes have been introduced into some of the Brockton schools

Business.

Sunday night, when a young man drove out of Vicksburg several miles to pass the evening with the girl of his choice, he was met at the gate by her father, who at once proceed to business by saying :—

"Cum to spark Louise, eh ?"

The young man let silence answer the question.

"Expect it'll make a match ?" continued the father.

Silence again, while the young man tied the horse. As he was ready to go in, the father blocked the way, braced up and continued :

"See here, young man, let's have an understanding. If ye mean hitch 'tween now and Jinuary, all right, but if ye don't, I want ye to understand that candles is mighty high this fall and crops don't turn out wuth a cuss !"

As the young man got through the gate it is probable that he gave the father a direct an agreeable answer.—Vicksburg Herald.

Not Entirely Convinced.

There was a fight on Gratiot Avenue, Saturday, between a man who had been called a liar and one who had called him thus, and the man who objected to the epithet was only about a minute getting all the advantage to be asked for on such occasions.

"I've had all the pounding I care for," said the under man after he had realized his fix.

"Well, are you still of the opinion that I am a liar ?" asked the other, as he rose up.

"To be honest about it," slowly replied the other, as he wiped the blood off his nose, "I am not entirely convinced. If I was on the roof of a horse barn, and there wasn't any ladder handy I think I'd call you a liar again, and run my chances of dodging clubs."

Handy Hints.

Chromos should be revarnished every two or three years.

A small piece of charcoal in the pot with boiling cabbage, removes the smell.

If your coal fire is low, throw on a tablespoonful of salt, and it will help you very much.

For an ear ache, put some live coals on a tin plate, sprinkle some brown sugar on them, set a funnel over it, and then hold the head so that the smoke can go into the ear.

To avoid corns, wear easy-fitting shoes; but those who prefer tight shoes to comfort should soak their feet in warm water on the days when their corns trouble them. This will give considerable relief.

To wash flannels so they will not shrink, have the water as hot as you can wash in. If you use a machine you can of course have the water still warmer, which will be all the better ; put all the soap in the water necessary and do not rub any on the clothes, rub the clothes as little as possible ; then rinse in water nearly as warm as that washed in.

Cast a Line for Yourself.

A young man stood listlessly watching some anglers on a bridge. He was poor and dejected. At last approaching a basket filled with wholesome looking fish, he sighed :

"If now I had these I would be happy. I could sell them at a fair price and buy me food and lodging."

"I will give you as many and just as good fish," said the owner, who had chanced to overhear his words, "if you will do me a trifling favor."

"What is it?" asked the other.

"Only to tend this line till I come back ; I wish to go on a short errand."

The proposal was gladly accepted.—The old man was gone so long that the young man began to get impatient.—Meanwhile hungry fish snapped greedily at the baited hook, and the young man lost all his depression in the excitement of pulling them in ; and when the owner of the line returned he had caught a large number. Counting out from them as many as were in the basket, and presenting them to the young man, the fisherman said :

"I fulfil my promise from the fish you have caught to teach you whenever you see others earning what you need, to waste no time in fruitless wishing, but cast a line for yourself."

The Offices of Money.

Rev. Mr. Perry delivered on Sunday evening last, at the Universalist Church, his first lecture of the autumn course, upon the topic, "The Offices of Money," taking his text from Genesis, thirteenth chapter, second verse. He said:

All are more or less touched by the money question. Material prosperity underlies other prosperity. Hard and good times with all their train of consequences depend in some measure on the nation's financial policy. As their actions rest on theories and if the latter are wrong the former will be bad, the money question is an important one. As a question that touches human interests its discusion comes within the province of the pulpit.

The use of money is so common that we do not realize how great a convenience, indeed, necessity it is. What does money do for us? What are its functions, its offices?

We say "a man is worth so much money," meaning that he has so much wealth. Is money wealth? Yes and no. If this money be in something that has real value, yes. "Abram was very rich in cattle, in silver and in gold." His silver and gold were not coined as in modern times. If a man has his money in silver and gold his money is wealth, but his money is wealth not because it is money but because it is silver and gold. His money as wealth differs not materially from bullion, ingots, old gold, &c.

If a man's money be in paper it is not wealth of itself. It is of but little real value, as is easily seen when the banks fails or the government that issued it comes to an end. Money as money is not wealth, but is the siga or representative of wealth.

In the lowest grades of civilization, where all are hunters or tillers of the soil, comparatively few exchanges are made and those by simple barter. The hunter exchanges skins for the productions of the soil, &c. As a race steps upward in civilization, division of labor begins. Men devote themselves to special trades. There will be hunters, farmers, builders, tailors, weapon-makers, &c. In this condition of things exchanges will be frequent. B, a tailor, wishes a house built. He has his own productions, clothes, with which to pay for it. He must find some carpenter who is in need of clothes. It might be easy to find a carpenter who wishes one suit, but it will be difficult to find one who will take clothes enough to pay for a house. He must then find a carpenter who will build till he has earned a suit of clothes; then another and so on till his house is built, or he must have on hand a number of such articles as a carpenter will desire, i. e. must be dealer in many other commodities besides clothes. But his troubles will not end here. How many suits of clothes shall he give for his house. He must find out what other tailors have paid, not what other people have paid because others do not deal in clothes. Money comes in, to do away with these difficulties. B pays a carpenter in a commodity which he is glad to take because there is no difficulty in passing it to others in exchange for needed articles. Money then serves as a Medium of Exchange.

If there were no money a tailor would be compelled to know the price of everything as expressed in clothes, the shoemaker the price of everything expressed in shoes, the granite dealer of everything expressed in granite, &c. This would be so nearly impossible that no such thing as business would exist. Money serves then as a standard or measure of value. It is sometimes said that this measure of value need not have value of itself, or as a famous advocate of paper money puts it: "There is no more need of gold money than a gold yard stick." Now a yard stick is a measure of length and would not measure length if it had no length of itself; so it would seem that a dollar would not measure value unless it has some value of its own. It may here be justly said that so long as men accept a thing as of value it serves practically for the purpose as though it had value.

Again it is not always convenient to pay for a purchase at the time it is made. Something is needed which maintains as unfluctuating a value as possible so that both parties to the transaction may receive justice. Money then becomes the standard of deferred payments.

Two general remarks may be made at the close. Whenever money, i. e. coined and stamped metals, is used as a commodity, bought and sold, held as wealth, that is, as property, or when used as ornaments, it ceases to be money and is controlled by the laws of trade as other commodities. Any thing, no matter what, that fulfils any of the above offices of money is so far and for the time money. In the next lecture attention will be called to the many things used as money by mankind.

A NEW SUMMER ENTERPRISE. A new railroad has just been surveyed from the extreme end of Hull to the Nantasket station on the Old Colony Railroad. The engineers have just finished the field work and are now at work upon the plans and estimates. Mr. A. H. Gilson is one of the engineers on the work.

For the Patriot.

Braintree.

Rev. Mr. Ward, formerly of Falmouth, preached his first sermon as pastor of the Methodist Church, on Sabbath last.—Rev. Mr. Colburn, the former pastor, has been obliged to give up his charge on account of failing health.

On Sabbath evening, the Braintree Temperance Union met in the Methodist Church. Rev. Mr. Mann, a new resident of Braintree, gave the lecture.

The delegates chosen for the Republican State Convention, are none of them very tall men, yet they are Long men indeed; the caucus that chose them was a Long caucus.

At a Town Meeting holden on Wednesday evening last, it was voted to request the County Commissioners to lay out the new street from Union street, Braintree, to Front street, Weymouth, petitioned for by Caleb Stetson and others.

As Mr. Chas. E. Minchin of Braintree, was riding through Quincy on Wednesday afternoon, when near the Adams School at the time of dismission, he came very near running over a little girl who carelessly ran into the street; he barely stopped his horse in time to prevent a serious accident. Mr. M. is a careful driver, and at the time was driving slowly. He thinks a few words of caution to the scholars from parents or teachers may prevent accidents in the future.

W. A. Kane is building two new stores near Holbrook block. M. L. Tupper has the contract, and is progressing finely.—Mr. Kane is to occupy one store for his dry goods business, and Mr. H. S. Page, apothecary, to occupy the other. D.

The Drama.

BOSTON, Sept. 11, 1879.

PARK THEATRE. "Mother and Son." An adaptation of Sardou's "Les Bourgeois de Pout Arcy," by A. R. Cazauran of the Union Square Theatre, was presented to the Boston public for the first time, last Monday evening, at the Park Theatre. On the programme it is called a play in five acts, and that is just about what it is, a strange mixture of comedy and the sensational drama. This play has been considered by some, indelicate, its motif and plot are based upon a low estimate of woman's virtue and the marriage bonds. If in the French, the language is any more pronounced than in the English version, it must be indelicate indeed, and such as only a French audience could appreciate and enjoy; compared with such as the "Banker's Daughter" it suffers severely. Much of the action is uninteresting and spread over much ground; condensed into three acts would much improve it. In the first act we are merely introduced to the characters in general; in the second act the plot begins and is developed, and the climax of the piece is reached in the last of the third act; the fourth is almost useless; and the fifth is crowded at the last with the winding up. The piece contains two characters, M. Amaury and Zoe Denisart, that are flat and unprofitable; these are its chief demerits; its attractions are, some really fine and intensely dramatic situations; superb acting of the company, and truly elegant stage setting, and a comic element which as supported by John Parselle and Marie Wilkins is perfectly irresistible, and convulses the audiences with roars of laughter continually.

Next week Manager Abbey presents his own company in W. S. Gilbert's Fairy Comedy, "The Palace of Truth," and a wealth of scenic attractions is promised.

BOSTON THEATRE. Monday evening, F. S. Chanfrau appears in his specialty, "Kit." This is his eighth annual engagement at this season of the year and will undoubtedly be greeted with a rousing house, for he and his piece are immensely popular. He will be supported by Mrs. Barry, Miss Noah, Mark Price as Manuel Bond, and Allen and Maguinniss as the "Two old Beats." There's fun ahead for the gods of the Gallery.

MUSEUM. Will present next week, "The Spark," a new comedietta, dramatized from the French, "L'Etincelle," and Byron's new comedy, "A Fool and his Money," in which Boston's favorite, Warren, will have a part which is said to be peculiarly well fitted to him. A long run and a merry one is anticipated. Saturday afternoon and evening present the last opportunities of seeing "The Danechiff."

GAIETY. "M'liss" leaves Saturday evening, and Monday night F. C. Bangs comes upon the boards of this house with "Dan'l Bruce." Annie Pixley and M'liss have enjoyed a highly gratifying engagement.

GLOBE. Remains closed. One of the untractable land owners has cut the stage in two with a brick wall, adding to his estate on the street the inclosed space. CRIT'—

STANDARD FOOD. Our readers will find advertised in our columns to-day the "Standard Food" for horses and cattle. It is highly recommended, and any information our citizens may desire will be cheerfully given by Mr. John Ramsdell, of Atlantic, who is connected with this firm. The following paragraph we copy from the Lynn Daily Item:—

"From testimonials which we have seen in regard to its superiority to any other horse food, and from the fact that among others our esteemed townsman, the Superintendent of Pine Grove Cemetary, after having given it a thorough trial, recommends it in preference to any other kind he has ever used, we think its excellence sufficiently guaranteed to warrant its use by all horse owners. Another item not to be overlooked in these days of practical economy is the fact that is cost $2 per hundred less than other "food." "Standard Food" is manufactured and sold by Ame & Co., whose only place of business is 91 Kilby street, Boston. They have no connection with any other "food" or firm."

Births.

In this town, Sept. 6th, a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. John Quincy Adams.

Marriages.

Problems.

We have received from C. H. E., the following answer to the problems of the Eggs and Confederate money, which we published a few weeks ago:—

"A would receive $1 and B $7 for their share of the eggs."

We decide the above to be the correct answer, and return thanks to all who may have sent us a reply. We now print another problem, which has been handed to us, and should be pleased to receive answers. It is not so hard as either of the others that we have presented to the readers of the PATRIOT, still many have been bothered with it, or one similar.

HOW MUCH DID JONES LOSE?

A few days ago a stranger came into the hat store of our friend Jones and asked the price of a hat. Finding one that suited him, and learning that it was worth $3 he produced a $5 bill in payment. Jones not happening to have the change steps into the store of his neighbor Brown and receives five $1 bills, two of which he gives the stranger, who takes the hat and departs. Soon after Brown comes into Jones store with the $5 bill, having discovered that it was counterfeit, and asks Jones to redeem it, which he does. Now considering the hat was worth $3, and that the $5 bill was worth nothing, how much did Jones lose?

⁂

If you feel dull drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR OR MEDICINE.

The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the World!
AN EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen.
Regulate the Liver and prevent.
CHILLS AND FEVER MALARIOUS FEVERS, BOWEL COMPLAINTS, RESTLESSNESS, JAUNDICE AND NAUSEA.

TAKE SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

BAD BREATH.

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath, and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be so easily corrected if you will take Simmons' Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your Appetite, Complexion, and General Health.

PILES!

How many suffer torture day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering from Piles. Yet relief is ready to the hand of almost any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR, is no drastic violent purge; but a gentle assistant to nature.

CONSTIPATION!

SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulation from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache.

MARVELOUS SUCCESS

—OF—

STANDARD FOOD,

—FOR—

HORSES AND CATTLE.

—o—

Nothing has yet been discovered so fitly adapted to the wants and General or Specific Improvement of Horses and Cattle as Standard Food.

From its first introduction it has had a most remarkable and uninterrupted success, as the following testimonials will confirm. It contains the best known condiments, (roots, seeds, &c.,) so combined as to give Tone, Health and Strength to the system.

It greatly increases the Flesh, prevents Indigestion and Colic, removes Worms and Humors, softens and loosens the Skin, adds richness to the Color of the Coat, &c.

☞ It may be fed freely and will put a horse in good condition, when other means fail A faithful trial cannot fail to prove its Immediate and Permanent benefit. The following are samples of the Testimonials we are receiving, and are all from well-known and reliable men.

Brockton, Aug. 15th, 1879.

MESSRS. AME & CO.,
GENTLEMEN:

Please send me 200 lbs., of your Standard Food.—The fifty pounds I bought of you, has worked admirably. It not only restored a sick colt to good condition, but it is removing the humors from the other horses and they have greatly improved thereby. I remain sincerely yours,

WM. H. TOBY.

—o—

Boston, June 29th, 1879.

MESSRS. AME & CO., 91 Kilby Street.
GENTLEMEN:

We are using your "Standard Food" freely for our horses, and we are happy to say that we are much better pleased with it, than any other food we have fed to them. Yours, respectfully,

LEWIS FLANDERS & CO., 93 Central Street.

—o—

Natick, Aug. 23d, 1879.

MESSRS. AME & CO., 91 Kilby Street, Boston.
GENTLEMEN:

In addition to my previous testimonial in regard to the result of feeding your "Standard Food" to our horses I have to say that it has proved a great benefit to my cows. Since I have fed it to them they have increased the quantity and quality of their Milk, and my pigs to whom I have also fed it have grown beyond all expectation.

J. B. MESSENGER of Howe & Co's. Express.

—o—

Lowell, Mass., Aug. 23d, 1879.

MESSRS. AME & CO., 91 Kilby Street, Boston.
GENTLEMEN:

It gives me pleasure to state that your Standard Food gives me perfect satisfaction in every respect, quality, price, &c., both to myself and those who have purchased it from my recommendation. You may expect further orders from me soon. Yours, &c.,

JOSEPH TURNER.

—o—

Dorchester Lower Mills, Aug. 5th, 1879.

MESSRS. AME & CO.
GENTLEMEN:

Having a horse out of condition, I was advised to try a bag of your Standard Food, and found it brought him up before the bag was half gone and he continues in good condition since.

Poetry.

The Little Boy's Watch.

Dear little Dick, curled up by the fire,
 Sat watching the shadows come and go,
As the dancing flames leaped higher and higher,
 Flooding the room with a mellow glow.

His chubby hand on his side was pressed,
 And he turned for a moment a listening ear;
"Mother!" he cried, "I've got a watch!
 I can feel it ticking right under here!"

"Yes, Dick; 'tis a watch that God has made,
 To mark your hours as they fly away;
He holds the key in his mighty hand,
 And keeps it in order night and day.

"Should he put aside the mystic key,
 Or lay his hand on the tiny spring,
The wheels would stop and your watch run down,
 And lie in your bosom a lifeless thing."

He crept to my side and whispered soft,
 While his baby voice had an awe-struck sound,
"I wish you would ask him, mother dear,
 To be sure and remember to keep it wound."

Agricultural, &c.

The Cause of Color in Butter.

The beautiful color of the fine brands of butter is sometimes natural and sometimes artificial. When it is natural it is the result of green or young food, as grass in summer and dried grass in winter, or roots or other early cut forage. While butter comes from over ripe food or such as has naturally had a large share of white fat in it, as dead ripe cornstalks, buckwheat meal, or brewer's grains. As a rule, the younger any particular food is, the higher colored and the richer flavored will be the butter made from it; and the older it is the poorer and paler will the butter be.

Some cattle secrete yellow fat more freely than others, when both are fed on the same food. The Jersey are remarkable for making high colored and high flavored butter from common food. Individual cases in other breeds often show the same aptitude. But there must be something in the food from which to derive good color and flavor. Every Jersey cannot make rich, yellow butter from dead ripe constalks, or weather beaten straw.

CORN. An Exchange says:—"In 1859 corn worth 70 cents a bushel; and the price did not vary much until 1864, when it went up to $1.10 followed by the remarkably high price of $1.75 the next year, and a rise to $1.10 during the two succeeding years (1867–'68). Since this time there has been a gradual fall to 40 cents, the price for last year. In 1875 there was an exception in a rise of 10 cents followed by a fall of 25 cents for the next year. It is to be seen that during all the 20 years corn was never so low as at the present time."

☞ Smut is poisonous, or at least, very injurious, and care should be taken to prevent it from being eaten with fodder. It is becoming very common in corn. It might be well to pass through the corn-fields with a sharp knife and a basket, and cut off all the bunches of smut and smutty ears, and carry them out where they may be burned.

☞ The Chinese are said to preserve grapes for a very considerable period by cutting a circular piece out of a ripe pumpkin or gourd, making an aperture large enough to admit the hand. The interior is then thoroughly cleaned out, the ripe grapes are placed inside and the cover replaced and pressed in firmly. The whole is then kept in a cool place.

☞ It is better to top-dress an old pasture well set with grass than plow it up and reseed it.

☞ Melons should be turned occasionally, as they ripen better. Remove the very latest ones as they set.

☞ Strawberry bed should be kept pretty clear of weeds. New beds may be made and set this month.

Anecdotes.

"My dear," said a gentleman to his wife, "our club is going to have all the home comforts."

"Indeed," sneered the wife; "and when pray, is our home to have all the club comforts?"

Elevator boy (to a woman who has ridden three times from bottom to top of a building)—"Well, where do you want to get out?"

Woman,—"Well, indade, oim not quoite sure, but lave me as near the Ould Colony depot as ye can."

An Irishman at the imminent risk of his life, stopped a runaway horse a few days ago. The owner came up after a while and quietly remarked:

"Thank you sir."

"An' faith, an' how are we goin' to divide that betwane the two of us?" replied Pat.

A young Scotchman at Aldershot fell sick, and was sent to the hospital. A bath was ordered. It was brought into the chamber where the invalid lay; he looked at it hard, and for some time, then threw up his hands and bawled:

"Oh, doctor! doctor! I cannot drink all that!"

A young man with a blush of country life on his cheeks, sold out his produce on the market, yesterday, and entered a shoe store and said he wanted a pair of shoes for his wife.

"What number," asked the clerk.

The young husband scratched his head, looked very much embarrassed, and finally said:

"Well, I've been married eight months, but this shoe business stumps me. I don't hardly believe she wears 'levens and I don't think she kin git into fives. I guess if we split the difference we'll hit her pretty close."

He was given a pair of eights, and after squinting along the soles, he observed:

"I guess them'll do. She's awful proud, and I know she'll squeeze into 'em for all she's worth."

SEPTEMBER.

The golden-rod is yellow;
The corn is turning brown;
The trees in apple orchards
With fruit are bending down.

The gentian's bluest fringes
Are curling in the sun;
In dusty pods the milkweed
Its hidden silk has spun.

The sedges flaunt their harvest,
In every meadow nook;
And asters by the brook-side
Make asters in the brook.

From dewy lanes at morning,
The grapes' sweet odors rise;
At noon the roads all flutter
With yellow butterflies.

By all these lovely tokens
September days are here,
With summer's best of weather,
And autumn's best of cheer.

But none of all this beauty,
Which floods the earth and air,
Is unto me the secret
Which makes September fair.

'Tis a thing which I remember;
To name it thrills me yet;
One day of one September
I never can forget.

H. H. in Scribner.

Receipts, Wit, &c.

SOUR APPLE JELLY. Take good sour apples and stew them tender; squeeze through a coarse cloth, add sugar to taste, and simmer down as thick as desired.

WIDOW'S CAKE. Two cups Indian meal, three cups wheat flour, one pint buttermilk, four tablespoons molasses, two teaspoons saleratus. To be eaten hot, with butter, for tea or breakfast.

SILVER CAKE. Half cup butter, one and one-half cups white sugar, one-half cup sweet milk, the whites of five eggs, one-half teaspoonful soda, and one teaspoonful cream tartar.

☞ Dissolve four or five pounds of washing soda in boiling water and throw down the kitchen sink to prevent the pipes stopping up with grease, etc. Do this every few weeks.

☞ Sweet oil is recommended for polishing pianos. Apply with a chamois skin and rub with different skins as they become saturated with the oil. It requires one or two hours of hard rubbing to restore an instrument to its original lustre.

☞ Cool rain water and soda will remove machine grease from washable goods.

☞ The wealthy miser lives as a poor man here, but he must give account as a rich man in the day of judgment.

☞ "I say my little son, where does the right hand road go?" "Don't know, sir; 'taint been nowhere since we lived here."

☞ Scandal mongers may learn this lesson from the frog. Once overpassed the season of his adolescence he gives up tail-bearing.

☞ Few attributes of character are more charming than the faculty of gracefully acknowledging one's errors.

☞ Smoke is not, as many persons imagine lighter than air. It is, however, carried up by the heated air, which, being lighter than the surrounding atmosphere, is pressed upward. Smoke ascends because it is intermixed with vapors, gases and warm air.

☞ Johnny, are you never going to show any good breeding at all? Sit up straight at the table." "Oh, mamma, Tommy Wilson's little banty hen has got nine little ones; he says that's bully breedin'."

"My son," said an American father, "how could you marry an Irish girl?" "Why, fathers" said the son, "I'm not able to keep two women—if I'd married a Yankee girl I'd have to hire an Irish girl to take care of her."

☞ "The only real tears," says some, "are those shed in solitude." You may bet your life that philosopher never saw a ten-year-old boy coming out of the woodshed in company with his father and a skate strap.

☞ A good health preservative, especially in summer is to sponge the body with cold water, containing a small percentage of some alkali, such as ammonia. The ammonia combines with the oil or grease thrown out by the perspiration, forming a soap, which is easily removed from the skin, leaving the pores open, thus promoting health and comfort.

SCENE AT SWEETSER'S. "Come, Bill, be lively now; break the bones in Mrs. Williamson's chops, and put Mr. Smith's ribs in the basket for him." "Bill, (briskly),—"All right, sir; just as soon as I've sawed off Mrs. Murphy's leg."

☞ "What news to-day? said one of our city merchants to his friend.—"What news? responded the other; "nothing, only things grow better. Our people are getting on their legs again." "On their legs," said the first; "I don't see how you make that out."—"Why, yes," replied the other; "folks that used to ride are obliged to walk now. Is not that getting on their legs again?"

[From the Boston Herald Sept. 15th.]

THE SCHOOLS OF QUINCY.

Four Years of Innovation and Revolution.

A NEW DEPARTURE AND ITS RESULTS.

New Attractions for Children in the Schoolroom.

The writer of this took occasion, a few days since, to visit the public schools in the town of Quincy, Mass. Nothing is more common than the complaint of school committee members in our Massachusetts town, that parents and the public generally cannot be prevailed upon to visit schools, or make themselves familiar, by actual investigation or experiment, with the efficiency or good conduct of the latter. For some reason there seems lately to have been an exception in the case of the schools of Quincy, assurance being given that the number of visitors to these during the past year amounted to 6000 persons, including males and females, representing the greatest variety of intellect, culture and social position, as well as places of residence. The time of visitation it appears was not restricted to certain seasons of the year, or to any particular portions of the school terms, at examinations, or the approach of occasional holidays, but, instead, the current of supervision of this order set steadily throughout the year. On the occasion referred to above the writer found upon entering the school-rooms in all the school buildings excepting one in the town, visitors in nearly every one, having either a general or specific purpose in view as was evidenced, and very interested persons they seemed all to be.

Before proceeding to describe what was there seen and heard, a few explanations preliminary may lead to a better understanding of the matter.

The school committee of the town of Quincy has remained for a number of years composed of the same membership; is made up of men of character and influence, of large business and practical ability, and of intelligence, experience and acquirements which render them above the average of men usually chosen, or willing to allow themselves to be chosen, to fill such position in the towns and cities of the commonwealth. As far back as 1873, this committee (upon which are Charles Francis Adams, Jr., and John Quincy Adams,) had become very much disgusted with the results attained in the schools. The teachers employed were conscientious and of the best talent to be procured, enthusiastic and devoted to their calling; the appropriations of money and appliances were no more stinted than in other Massachusetts communities, and were rather above than below the average; the supervision was definite and comprehensive. The methods of teaching were precisely like those of schools called the best in the State, and yet it became doubtful if there was much real progress.

THE QUESTION OF PROGRESS SETTLED.

A crisis was brought about in the following manner: Examination day arrived in due course of time in the year referred to, and the regular assemblage of dignitaries and interested spectators assembled to witness the exercises. The programmes had been "cut and dried." The teacher was an ancient pedagogue, of most approved quality and experience in the ruling methods, with no more idea, probably, of a departure from the clog-wheel, belt and pulley style of proceeding in the schoolroom than has the superintendent of a cotton factory among his spindles. Just as the "decks had been cleared for action," and the first class was fidgeting nervously in the seats, bursting with a limited number of routine answers to routine questions, which it was anxious to get rid of, and have the affair over, Mr. John Quincy Adams stepped to the front and said:—"The committee will take charge of this examination, Mr. Teacher!" "What do you say, sir?" was the astonished rejoinder of the paling teacher. "I will take charge of this examination, sir," pursued Mr. Adams; "you may become a spectator, if you like, but the committee will put the questions." "But, sir," stammered the teacher. "I have prepared—in short—I think no one but myself can know so well—" "The committee will conduct this examination," continued Mr. Adams, and the discomfited teacher sat down. The examination accordingly proceeded, and the school went to pieces. To use the language of Charles Francis Adams, Jr., in a recent educational paper, referring to this crisis: "The result was deplorable. Among other things, for instance, it is found that the A and B grammar scholars throughout the town could parse and construe sentences, and point out the various parts of speech with great facility, repeating, correctly and with readiness the rules of grammar applicable in each case; yet when called upon to write an ordinary letter they were utterly unable to apply the rules and principles they had so painfully learned, or to form single sentences or to follow any rule of composition. So, also, as respects reading. Rote reading, so to speak—that is, the practical reading of certain familiar pieces in given readers—had been brought to a point of very considerable perfection. If the examination was not carried too far, the classes could be shown off to great advantage. Where the severer test of sight reading—that is the reading of an ordinary book, which the scholar had never seen before it was put by the examiner into his hand—when this test was applied, the result was simply bewildering. The greater part of the scholars could merely stammer and bungle along, much as a better educated person does when reading a book in some language with which he is only imperfectly acquainted. In other words, it appeared, as the result of eight years' school teaching, that the children, as a whole, could neither write with facility nor read fluently. They could glibly tell what a peninsula was, but they did not know one when they lived on it; they could stand up and spell in a spelling bee, but put a pen in their hands and the havoc they made with orthography was wonderful."

A DILEMMA.

The committee thus reached the conclusion that the whole existing system was wrong—a system from which the life was gone out. To use, again, the words of Mr. Adams:—"Acting on this conclusion, they went to work to remedy matters; but, as usually happens in such cases, they succeeded only in destroying the old system, without developing a new one. They bitterly attacked the unintelligent instruction they found going on, and they made school after school go hopelessly to pieces by calling on overgrown children to practically make use of the knowledge they had been so painfully acquiring. When it came, however, to substituting a better method of instruction for that which they condemned, they had their own affairs to attend to, and a few spasmodic, half-matured suggestions of something they did not have time to think out, was all that they could do for the discouraged and bewildered teachers. It gradually, therefore, began to dawn upon them that they had taken a larger contract on their hands than they had at all intended. A little too much of the innovating, questioning spirit had, in fact, broken down something besides the school system of the town—it had broken down the committee system as well."

Realizing the dilemma in which they were placed, the committee became sensible that an agent must be employed who could comprehend what needed to be done, and do it thoroughly. Such an agent it hardly seemed possible could be found—one capable of conducting a revolution such only as this committee would be satisfied with. But the man was found, finally, in the person of Mr. Francis W. Parker, a teacher who had pursued precisely such a course as was present in its results in the minds of the committee, in the public schools of Ohio, and who had just returned from a course of study in Germany, whither he had been to assure himself that his theories were not fallacious, and perfect his practice. Mr. Parker was made superintendent of the schools of Quincy in 1875, has occupied the position ever since, and has had full liberty to reform and innovate to the extent of his ideas on the subject, being held strictly accountable to a demonstration of their correctness by success superior to any heretofore obtained in the schools of the town. It need only be said here that he has achieved triumphant success, and won the town—and a great number of educators in much larger towns than Quincy besides. Now for a glance at his schools and methods.

THE PRIMARIES.

The very first thing noticeable upon entering one of the primary schools of Quincy, is that the scholars are not at all disturbed or "put by" on account of the presence of visitors, though the latter may be utter strangers. There is no evidence on the part of teacher or scholars that the interruption has caused even the most trifling change in arrangements or proceedings, or is likely to influence in any degree either. Behind the individual desks sit the little scholars, male and female, a few with books, by far the greater number with a slate before them and pencil in hand. Indeed, the pencil and the crayon are the essential tools of their apprenticeship, it turns out, and the little ones are principally their own teachers, the teacher proper being little more than a director—a marvellously appreciative one, however, to be sure. In one corner of the room is a play table, with building blocks and pegs and all sorts of material for children's manufactures. One end of the room is taken up by kindergarten tables and their appliances. The blackboard is extensive, and is in full use in every part. Every primary teacher is an artist, and must have a good degree of expertness and practical experience with the native talent.

The scholars are divided into groups, rather than classes, each group representing those nearest together in ability and attainments. At the blackboard stands the teacher, surrounded by her flock, a single group of perhaps a dozen pupils, who follow her every motion of hand or eye, and hang upon her garments as well as the tones of her voice. The doors and windows are all wide open; the view extends away for miles on every side, a most inviting prospect of field and wood and river; the visitors walk freely about the room and criticise or investigate in ordinary tone and action. There is not a listless, uninterested or unoccupied soul in the room, nor a positively quiet one, though order and the discipline of the lip, hand and tongue prevail supremely and without the slightest effort among the scholars. All the time the little group hangs about the teacher, distracted by no influence outside her, gathering up facts and appropriating terms precisely as they will do the first time they witness the building of a ship.

THE SYSTEM.

Strictly speaking, there is no system in the teaching. Each individual in any group must have his or her own particular demonstration of the thing taught. There is no programme about it, and no two lessons alike. There sit and stand children who read more fluently and write more correctly—as far as they go—than many high school scholars, who could not, to save life, recite the alphabet, and who do not know one letter from another, by their names; and some of them have been reading and writing for two years. They have learned to distinguish words when they see them, just as you, sir, know a dozen faces which will pass in a few minutes, without knowing anything about the names which distinguish them; but you will never mistake the faces, and will get the names by and by—they are not essential any way. They learn to write when they learn to read, or even before, as their first exercises consist of making the regular elementary marks which go to compose writing. A group, whose members first saw the inside of a school house but a few weeks ago, and who have no more idea of the alphabet than of the Chinese language, is following the teacher about. She picks up a crayon and deftly puts upon the blackboard a tree with its branches in the air and roots showing through the ground. The interest is intense as the motions of the teacher's hand multiply during the process. There is not a dull eye in the group. There is no thought of recess or close of school. The climax is reached when the teacher asks, "What is that?" and the answer follows like a pistol shot—"a tree!"—Now the word is written, begun with a capital, and otherwise. The scholars look at it; associate in as many ways as the ingenuity of the teacher can bring to bear the written word with the tree drawing; they imitate the writing; they are shown the word in a book, (they learn script before Roman letters), they examine a tree from a window. They know, through and through, what a tree, and its; visible sign, the word "tree" is, and are henceforth never to be fooled in their senses or any intellectual apprehension, when that word is apparent.

And those who have investigated say it is a marvel how firm a hold the mind of a child takes of all the possible connections of the word thus learned.—Henceforth, the combination of letters thus contained will never appear to the scholar without all the elements of pronunciation, meaning, value, etc., in sentence being appreciated. Moreover, as the event constantly proves, a word thus understood is afterward to illustrate all these elements in other words. That was the way the child learned all the vocabulary it had in use when it first entered the school. That was precisely how it learned to talk and to know a hen from a corn-basket.

METHODS.

Now the teacher (on another occasion) introduces a squirrel into her picture, the latter running up the tree. Before she gets through she will put a nut in the squirrel's paws, as he sits securely on a limb. By and by the sentence will appear opposite the tree, "The squirrel sits on the tree and eats a nut," when lo! every one of the little ones is ready to repeat the sentence on the slate.—Being shown a reading book, the scholar will find the very sentence in it. (In writing all are taught the same hand.) They will illustrate the grammar of the sentence by telling one that it is the squirrel who sits on the tree; that the squirrel eats the nut and sits on the tree, and so they will analyze the whole thing, and pretty soon, when the teacher has enlarged his vocabulary with his understanding, he is ready to take any or all these words, and make sentences to order, as full and grammatical and correctly spelled as one could wish.

From this it is only a step to reading. Of books (for reading purposes) there is no end in this system, and no scholar ever reads the same lesson on two different occasions. Books make pilgrimages to all the school-houses, but never return to those wherein they have once been used, except for another set of scholars. It is impossible to go into detail here; only a little illustration is possible. Passing into a primary room one after another—without reference to order—of the scholars is called upon to read from a book handed them. The selection is invariably one the scholar never saw before. In the course of the reading, where a hard word or expression more complicated than usual occurs, the scholar is stopped short at the completion of the sentence, and receives the command:—"Put that sentence on the board." The scholar takes no second look (his whole process of training has taught him to read with eyes and mind wide open,) proceeds to the board, and writes the sentence from memory (he has seen it just once) observing all the capitalization, punctuation and grammar, and the general order of the sentence. Only once during many trials did the writer witness a failure in this task, and that in a matter of quotation marks omitted.

To note something of the intellectual process—a primary class of mites were at the board with the teacher. The latter informed her visitors quietly that she was about to add the word "pond" to the vocabulary of the little ones.—The teacher made a drawing upon the board of a little landscape, a farmhouse, with a pig-sty and pig, a boy carrying a basket, and, finally, a pond in the outline. The sentence was written, "The boy has a fish from the pond in his basket." All the words excepting "pond," had been previously used within the knowledge of the group, and "pond" they got at almost immediately by some kind of analogy it would seem, in connection with the idea of a pond as conveyed in the drawing, and the dexterous leading of their minds by the teacher. At last the teacher put upon the board the words, "I saw the pond," inadvertently (perhaps) omitting to capitalize the pronoun. As quick as thought one of the smallest of the group spoke, "I don't know what that first word is!" There had been no great difficulty about the new word "pond," and, upon the error being rectified, the child read the sentence at once; but the word so strangely written "i," was a new experience. The child could read the words when written and grouped properly, but not at all letters.

OTHER STUDIES.

And so with geography, arithmetic, and the whole list, which is small in studies, but large in books, as has been said. In the grammar schools the idea above suggested is enlarged and carried forward, and its rich results there begin to be apparent. The acquirements in language, (reading, writing and construction of sentences) are simply wonderful, as illustrated in the grammar departments, and one can there more readily get a hold upon the meaning of the whole thing. Here one sees the manner of teaching geography; the moulding boards with their furnishing of loam, which, moistened with water is manipulated into continents and mountains and islands, or whatever is needed to illustrate the formation and diversity of the earth's surface. There is no longer any danger that scores of these scholars, born and "raised" upon a peninsula, should yet not know what a peninsula is, for they learn geography from the school house windows, and are used to making what they undertake to define.

And so it happens that there is no need of truant schools in Quincy, for the school is a place of interest and pleasure to every scholar. Th[illegible] need to despair of dull i[illegible] have exactly the [illegible] moment which they [illegible] room here only to p[illegible] some of the superint[illegible] mates of his work, whi[illegible] further explanations of t[illegible] Here is the ground-work [illegible] plans in education, given [illegible] language:—"The immediat[illegible] motive of common education [illegible] and train children to work, to fo[illegible] of systematic work, to love wor[illegible] put their brains into work. I w[illegible] have every boy or girl who [illegible] gradu[illegible] from our public schools fully [illegible] to master the details of whatever [illegible] business or profession he or she may enter upon; and to this end, every step of school work, from beginning to the close, should be directed."

This superintendent trains all his teachers, and, moreover, is incessantly himself teaching in some of the schools. Already the schools in Quincy have attracted the attention of all the principal educators, far and near, and the principals of our state normal schools, and interested teachers, superintendents and supervisors from the principal cities and towns in New England and elsewhere, visit and study personally the operations there. Yet there is no "Quincy system," and Mr. Parker claims no new ideas in connection with education, but only to have put in practice systems as old as life. In one of his reports he says:—"I repeat that I am simply trying to apply well-established principles of teaching, principles derived directly from the laws of the mind. The methods springing from them are found in the development of every child. They are used everywhere except in school. I have introduced no new principle, method, or details."

DULL SCHOLARS.

There is one class of benefits growing out of this order of things, so peculiar to it, that again the superintendent's words are quoted, that they may be fully understood. He says:—

"A very large per cent. of children who enter our schools belong to the class called dull pupils. They may be divided in four classes.

1. Children whose minds develop very slowly.
2. Those constitutionally timid.
3. Children who from inheritance, bad training, or no training at all at home, have some mental defect,—such as lack of self-control or power of attention.
4. Weak minded children.

Under ordinary treatment, by being made to feel keenly their dullness, by scolding and constant irritation, most of these children are driven into hopeless stupidity in school. The first-named class when they come in contact with the real objective teaching of trade and business, often make the most successful men and women. It has been our purposes to save from ignorance every one of these children. The timid are made, by the kindest treatment, to feel at home in the school room. The faculties of the slow to learn are aroused and awakened by patient, persevering sense-training. This class often overtake and even outstrip their brighter companions in the second and third years. The defective minds are treated as a physician treats a chronic disease. The weak power is constantly but carefully exercised. The teachers understand that the highest test of good teaching is the successful treatment of dull children."

At the present time there are teachers visiting Quincy from many different states, and these are constantly employed in the schools herein spoken of, themselves pupils of the teachers under Mr. Parker, gaining knowledge of his methods. In some instances they are sent for the purpose by the cities or towns to which they belong, and are teachers of no mean ability under the old methods. So the knowledge of the innovation is spreading and being estimated, and its influence is as surely to tell within the near future as light is sure to illuminate. The educational world is ready for the transition in methods which must take place before long.

Religious enterprise. Free schools. Elevated railroads. Treatment of colored people. The Civil Rights Bill to be tested. A murderer released. Plea of insanity.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 11, 1879.

The Autumn campaign of education, politics, and religion, has fairly commenced. That a new activity in christian work has been awakened in many districts, is illustrated by Dr. Fulton's enterprise at the Brooklyn Rink. The people seem to like the idea of a free church, and attended the opening services there last Sabbath in large [illegible]bers. Many of the city pastors a[illegible] bath school teachers have re[illegible] to their work in the churches. W[illegible] others are still lost among the mountains [illegible] at the watering places, b[illegible] to return to the noise and hurry [illegible]nd worry of the metropolis.

The public schools in this vicinity were reopened last week with a reasonable increase of pupils. One hundred thousand children receive free instruction in the schools of New York city, and nearly as many are in attendance at the Brooklyn schools. Several new buildings have been erected in both cities, and enlargements made in many others. The building, formerly occupied by Dr. Talmage's church, on Schermerhorn street, Brooklyn, has been purchased at a low price by the city; and, during the vacation, has been remodeled internally and fitted [illegible] a large school.

[illegible]st week the three Elevated Railroads in New York city were merged into [illegible] company, to be known as the [illegible]an Elevated Railway. The com[illegible] will at present produce but little [illegible] change. [illegible] Trains will be run [illegible] in no way inconvenienced by the consolidation. From [illegible]arlem, ten miles, is now [illegible] forty-five minutes in[illegible] many brief stoppages.—[illegible] for the elevated road [illegible]ng speedily placed in [illegible] subsequent construction [illegible]y pushed forward.

A[illegible]elligent class of peopl[illegible]e is still held in contem[illegible] in our northern cities.—Saloon keepers and hotel proprietors prefer to have negroes about them only in the capacity of servants, and are sometimes impolitic as well as grossly impolite. A colored clergyman, on entering an ice cream saloon in New York, with his lady, was refused attention and rudely ordered out of the house without being allowed to make any purchase. He has announced it as his intention of making it a test case, to see if proper respect can be secured to his race under the existing laws.

Urban Catlow, the steerage passenger who murdered the steward on the steamer Arizona a week or two since, has been discharged from custody on the ground that he was insane at the time.

CLARE.

GREW THE WOOD FOR HIS COFFIN.—The Wheeling (West Va.) Register of August 6, says: A remarkable story is told of the late Capt. Stone, of Moundsville, who was buried at the beginning of the week. Thirty-five years ago he came from New Orleans to Moundsville to make his home, and brought with him two seeds of a mahogany-like tree.—One of the seeds died, but the other flourished and grew. From a shoot it became a sapling, and finally, in the course of 30 years, grew a fine tree.—About eight months ago a severe wind storm passed over Moundsville, and Captain Stone found his tree laid prostrate. He had it dried, sawed into lumber, and sent to a Pittsburg firm. In a short time it was returned to him in the form of a beautiful coffin, and for four months it was preserved in his residence. About two weeks ago he contracted a sickness that culminated in his death, and his desire being fulfilled, he was laid away in the coffin he planted thirty-five years ago.

With Supplement.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 20, 1879.

Short communications and items of news earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.

☞ Anonymous communications are not published.

GRAND EXCURSION TO-DAY. The Old Colony Railroad Company will give a grand excursion to-day, for the benefit of the public along the road. The excursion is to Newport and return for $1.00. The train will leave Quincy at a quarter of eight; returning leave Newport at 6 P. M. For more full particulars see notice in another column. This excursion will give all who desire a grand opportunity to visit this fashionable watering place, at an exceedingly low price. It will also give them a plenty of time to visit all parts of the city and see the magnificent cottages in this world renowned city. There are also to be at Newport great attractions in steeple-chases. $6000 are offered in prizes.

FATAL ACCIDENT. On Tuesday forenoon, Messrs. Samuel Gregory and Jas. MacDonald started on a gunning excursion from Blacks Creek in a small row-boat, and had proceeded but a short distance before it overset, tipping its contents into the water. When the accident occurred the boat was near the mouth of the creek, opposite Hon. John Q. Adams' boat house. Mr. Gregory succeeded in reaching the shore, but his companion sunk to the bottom, with the guns, ammunition, &c. Word was immediately sent to Houghs Neck, and the new life-boat stationed there, was quickly manned by Messrs. William H. Mears, James Mears, Joseph Veader, J. P. Wentworth and W. A. Wilson, who rowed to the scene of action. After grappling for a short time the body was raised to the surface and taken to the shore, but life was extinct. Many thanks are due the gentlemen who answered so quickly to the call, and worked so successfully in recovering the body. Mr. MacDonald resided on Brackett street, near McKenzie & Paterson's polishing works, and leaves a widow and two children to mourn his sad and sudden departure.

INDEPENDENT CAUCUS. The citizens of Quincy, favorable to the election of General Butler met at the Lyceum Room, on Monday evening, agreeable to a call of the Central Committee, to elect delegates to conventions. The attendance was quite small and the proceedings very harmonious.

William B. Worster was chosen Chairman of the meeting, and E. P. Howland Secretary. Hosea B. Ellis, Charles N. Hunt and Albert G. Dolliver were appointed a committee to retire and nominate a list of delegates to attend the State Convention to be holden at Worcester, on the 18th instant, and they reported the following named gentlemen, who were unanimously elected:—William B. Worster, E. P. Howland, Wm. B. Duggan, Charles N. Hunt, William G. Spear, Elisha Packard, A. W. Sprague and Frederick Hardwick.

The same gentlemen were also elected to attend the Senatorial, Councillor and County Conventions.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS. The Butler Democrats held a caucus at Hardwick's Hall on Tuesday evening last. E. W. Underwood was chosen Chairman and P. F. Lacy, Secretary. The following gentlemen were chosen delegates to the State Convention, held at Worcester on the 17th instant:—

E. W. Underwood (at large), P. F. Lacy, John Hussey, John McGowan, William B. Barry, Hugh L. Shearer, E. W. Connor, Horace S. Feltis, Hosea B. Ellis, Frederick Hardwick, John H. Dee, Joseph Kendrick, Joseph A. Bass, M. W. Gerry, William B. Duggan, Charles N. Hunt, George A. Beard, John Arnold and James M. Cleverly.

ACCIDENTS. Mr. John Hall had a buggy badly broken on Friday last, by the driver turning a corner too short.

Last Saturday, as a young man was driving a team belonging to O. J. Peverly on Washington street, he turned a corner rather short and upset the team, damaging it badly.

As Mrs. Thompson Baxter and family were coming out of their yard on their way to church on Sunday last, one of the wheels of the carriage was crushed, throwing the occupants out. They were badly bruised, but not seriously injured.

T. E. Furnald's horse ran away last Monday. The horse became frightened by changing bridles while he was harnessed in the team.

THAYER ACADEMY. At the examinations held at this institution, July 3d, and Sept. 13th, the following pupils from this town were admitted: At the first examination:—Martha J. Brooks, Abbie C. Chamberlin, Caroline A. Crane, Alice B. Curtis, Mary W. Holden, Emily Morison, Herman F. McIntire, Mamie A. Osborne, and Alice L. Sparrow. The three last named are from Wollaston.

At the examination on Saturday last, Isabel L. Hardwick, Abbie F. Thayer, of Quincy, Amy S. Gurney, Atlantic, and Annie R. McKay, Wollaston.

CARELESSNESS. Last Monday morning some men who were probably returning from gunning, fired their rifles across the meadow from Coddington street. The balls struck quite near a man who was at work in the cemetery. This is not the first instance of carelessly firing rifles or pistols towards the cemetery, and if more care is not used a serious accident will surely occur.

APPOINTMENTS. At a Probate Court held at Dedham, on Wednesday last, the following appointments of gentlemen from this town, were made:

Wyman B. Nightingale, administrator of the estate of Mehitable Nightingale, of Quincy; bond $1000. Edward Southworth, guardian of Fannie B. Southworth, minor, of Quincy; bond $500.

☞ Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Brown, formerly of this town, enjoyed their silver wedding festival in a very pleasant manner on Wednesday evening, at their residence in Boston. Many of their friends from this town were with them on this occasion.

☞ The house of Mrs. Foley on Sumner street was discovered on fire about noon on Monday last. An alarm was given and the Vulture Company were soon present. The citizens in the vicinity, however, had extinguished the flames before their arrival. The fire caught near the chimney and is supposed to have been accidental. Loss about $50.

☞ Mr. and Mrs. Munroe Crane of New York city, have been visiting their friends in this town the present week.

☞ Mr. George Randall, formerly of this town, has assumed the editorial department of the Peabody Press. Mr. Randall is a very talented writer, and we have no doubt will do honor to the journal.

☞ Bishop Paddock will officiate at Christ Church, Thursday evening, Sept. 25th, at half past seven o'clock. He will administer the Rite of Confirmation to a class of candidates prepared by the Rector and thus admit them to full membership in the Episcopal Church.

☞ Mr. Quincy A. Faunce, while engaged in repairing a chimney on the top of Robertson's block, on Monday last, was taken suddenly with a severe attack of colic. He was removed to the hotel, and Dr. Morison called, who rendered him great assistance; and afterwards he was taken to his residence at Wollaston, by Mr. Wm. H. French.

CONCERT. The Spaulding Bell-ringers will give one of their excellent concerts at the Town Hall, on Tuesday evening. They have a new and brilliant programme for the season, and as this troupe has always given the best of satisfaction our citizens will no doubt fill the hall.

LADIES REGISTERED. The following ladies have been to the Assessors, and had their names registered. It will not require a very large list to contain all their names, nor a very big box to hold their votes.

Miss F. P. Emery, Mrs. Henry Barker, Mrs. Frederick A. Clafflin, Mrs. H. J. Adams, Mrs. Dr. Harlow, Mrs. Charles A. Spear, Mrs. James E. Tirrell and Mrs. Charles L. Pierce.

Will this list have any effect in the election of School Committee in this town next March?

State Conventions.

The Republican State Convention was held at Worcester on Tuesday. Hon. John D. Long, of Hingham, was elected the candidate for Governor on the first ballot by a large majority, and the following gentlemen were nominated for the other State offices:

Lieutenant Governor, Hon. Byron Weston, of Dalton.

Attorney General, Hon. George Marston, of New Bedford.

Auditor, Hon. Charles R. Ladd, of Springfield.

Secretary of State, Hon. Henry B. Pierce of Boston.

Treasurer, Hon. Charles Endicott, of Canton.

At the Butler Convention, held at Worcester on Wednesday, General B. F. Butler was nominated by acclamation for Governor. The remainder of the ticket is as follows:

Lieutenant Governor, A. C. Woodworth, of Chicopee.

Secretary of State, Michael T. Donahoe, of Somerville.

Treasurer and Receiver General, David N. Skillings, of Winchester.

Auditor, Davis J. King, of Boston.

Attorney General, William D. Northend, of Salem.

The Independent State Convention, consisting of Democrats, Republicans, Prohibitionists, and others favorable to the election of Gen. Benjamin F. Butler, convened at Worcester, on Thursday, and nominated Gen. Butler by acclamation, and the balance of the ticket nomination is the same as that nominated the day previous by the Butler Convention.

For the Patriot.

Weymouth.

At the close of the Weymouth Singing Society's rehearsals last Spring, it was generally understood that they were to commence again early in October. As that time is fast approaching, and if the directors are to decide the Oratoric that is to be taken this season, would it not be well for them to inform the members that they be prepared for the first rehearsal.

Mr. F. Harris, of the firm of Hunt & Harris, grocers, has recently purchased a lot of land from C. G. Thompson, Esq., on Front, opposite Hunt street, on which he will soon erect a large dwelling house.

Twenty-five or more ladies have been registered for voting in Weymouth. An old voter says that he has been to the polls many times, most of which he found some difficulty in passing up to the ballot-box. He thinks that the officers will stop the fighting, but they cannot stop the rushing and squatting.—However, he says, if the ladies are persistent in voting, he would advise them to wear dresses with moderate trails. He is perfectly willing that other men's wives should vote, but he did not wish to have his.

The Catholic Temperance Societies, that held a picnic recently at Lovell's Grove, have generously donated Mrs. Viger the sum of $50. It will be remembered that her son got fatally injured at their gathering.

The female pedestrians that are to take a part in the entertainments to be given next week at the Weymouth Fair Grounds, are Miss Sherman, who walked 3000 quarter miles in 3000 quarter hours; and won the second prize in the 27-hours walk in the big tent in Boston. Miss Irwin won the third prize in the same contest, also won first prize in 10-mile walk at same place, has medals won in 5 and 10-mile races. Miss Calderwood walked 110 miles in 30 hours, a remarkable record for a lady.

In the glass ball shoot the following clubs have entered: Lynn Centre of Lynn, Raymond of Boston, Mystic of East Somerville, South Braintree of South Braintree, Cambridge of Cambridge, Mass. Rifle Association of Boston, and the Stoughton of Stoughton. A number more are expected to enter.

The Fireman's Muster is progressing and bids fair to be large. The Committee have concluded to allow any one who may wish, to print and sell score cards on the day of the Muster.

We are informed that Mr. J. Frank Porter, of the Weymouth Singing Society, has been engaged to sing this winter for a Boston Pinafore Club. F. H. T.

Good Templars Visit.

On Tuesday evening, about thirty members of Hancock Lodge of Good Templars, paid a visit to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Penniman at Wollaston, who have lately entered into the matrimonial state. The damp, cold, drizzly atmosphere outside, formed a great contrast with the warm and cheerful interior. The visitors were received by Mr. and Mrs P., and soon made themselves at home. Music and games seemed to make the early hours of the evening pass away, and a very bountiful supper was served later in the evening. Just before the company sat down to discuss the menu, Rev. E. A. Perry called Mr. and Mrs. Penniman before him, and presented them with an elegant and costly silver cake basket, very richly engraved. Mr. Penniman responded with a few words. The basket was marked: "To Mr. and Mrs. George W. Penniman, from the members of Hancock Lodge No. 56, I. O. G. T. September 16, 1879."

The remainder of the evening was spent in singing, games and social converse, and the company separated just as the clocks were striking the midnight hour. The occasion was one of unalloyed pleasure, and will long fill a niche in the memories of all who were present.

Sambo on the Political Question.

To the Publishers of the Patriot:

Please publish the following dialogue between Sambo and Mr. Smith, and oblige one of your constant readers:—

Well, well, Sambo! I'm astonished to hear that you've cut the Republican party, joined the Independents, and are going to vote for General Butler. I always supposed that you went into politics from principle, and loved respectable company.

Jist dat, Missur Smith, de principle and fear of jining hands with de wicked, driv me out of de party ring. Ise couldn't lend a hand no longer to de corruption I'se see practised by de party managers; so toder night, after tinking it all ober, dis nigger come to de solum clusion, to run like Lot's wife, for fear of de brimstone.

Sambo, whose been filling your head with such nonsense? Don't you know that the Republican party is the party of freedom and moral reforms, that it liberated the slaves and established a national currency, and that it has inaugurated all the great reforms.

Trew, Missur Smith, you's 'scribin de 'Publican party twenty years 'go. Taint de same now. No more like, den de Jews under David and Keziah, like de Jews under Ananias and Sophia. When de 'Publicans run by Lincum, Chase, Giddings, Wade and Sumner, da all right; but when da got managed by Grant, Babcock, Sherman, Gould and Jim Blaine, de debil git um, and de people mourn. De corrupt rings manage de party now, not de principle of right.

Now Sambo, you know I've always thought a good deal of you, and I can't bear to see so good a Methodist fall from grace, by voting for that modern Jereboam, Ben. Butler. You see all the reforms he proposes can be better effected in the Republican party. Then too, we are just about entering on unparalleled business prosperity. Now stick, and speak well of the bridge that has carried you safely over.

Safely ober—heigh! whose got safely ober. Dars more den half de country bankrupt, broke through, down in de mud up to dar ears. Sure de bon holer wid his bons bought wid 'preciated greenbacks at forty cents. De mortgage man wid his eight per cent. loan, when money worth nuffin, now paid when money worth ebery ting; and de politicians who make dar own salaries and sell dar votes to de jobbing rings. Des all got safely ober wid dar millions.—But whas de men who fought de battles, raised de taters, and made de boots? Been workin des long years to make de rich richer; to feed de big rings dat has hung round de National Treasury.

Why Sambo you are crazy. You don't think what an expense the war was.—What a debt we had to shoulder, and how hard the Government had to work to raise the money we have been paying off. It's a wonder we are so well off.

Yes, Missur Smith, it is a wonder. Ef you'd seen what I saw dem six years I cleaned spitoons in de hall of de Senate. Tell you, dar was some big trades wid de 'Publican members of Congress ober de National Bond Act and de Bank Act. Dem agents of de Rothchilds and the Wall street bankers, busy as de debil in a gale of wind, when da wants a big job put trew. All trew de fuss tree years Missur Lincum president, da flutters round de Congress, like buzzards round a wounded hoss. Some da bought, sum da scare, an' some da do neither. One day when da been votin to pay de bondholder in gold, Thad Stevens so mad to tink de swindle it was on de people, specially de soldier, dat he buss right out cryin', an broke his cane ober his desk. Next day one of dem Wall street agents want to gib Ben Wade some 'vice bout de bill, when de ole man call him traitor, usin terrible wicked words right fore it. Tell you, de feller cut an run like a cat wid a pair tongs arter her. It was de corrupt rings under de lead of Grant, Blaine an Sherman, dot give us National bank, bons and bankruptcy. Now dis nigger aint gwine to follow de lead of sich no longer. Dats sartin.

Why Sambo, you are getting eloquent. The greenbackers ought to have had you to stump Maine.

Yes sah. Ef I'd told what trades I hearn Jim Blaine and John Sherman make wid de job ring, it would hab cos de 'publicans nother million to buy votes. Sartin.

But now Sambo, what do you expect to make by voting for Gen. Butler?

Make! make him de boss gobener we's had for years. Make stealing from de state a crime, and junketing a disgrace. See how he scared de party last year. Dis year he goin to drive out de whole crowd, and gib de people chance to earn dar taxes.

Now I see Sambo, that the Republican party is going to lose you. So let me advise you not to take office; refuse a Colonel's commission; stay at home evenings with your family.

Yes sah. Truss dis nigger to do all dat. Ef he eber caught takin pay ob de State, selling his vote, or workin in any way to earn a home for life at the 'publican boardin hus in Concord, his name ain't Sambo, nor his wife ain't Dinah.

BIRTHDAY PARTY. Mrs. George Nightingale celebrated her eighty-fourth birthday on Thursday. Seldom do we see a person grow old so gracefully as does this lady. In form she is queenlike, being straight as an arrow. Her countenance bespeaks a happy and contented mind, and as we looked upon her pleasant smiling face we realized the beauties of old age, and thought she had learned the secret of growing old gracefully.—About forty of her relatives and friends were at her home on Thursday, to pay their respects to her on this occasion, and to enjoy a few hours in a pleasant and social manner.

Reply to "Contractor."

To the Editors of the Patriot:

My attention has been called to a communication in your paper of last Saturday wherein a person signing himself "Contractor" makes certain mistatements concerning our Union, which he sneeringly refers to, as "what they term the Stone Cutters' International."

A branch of the "Granite Cutters' International Union" was formed in Quincy, June 19th, 1877, about twelve months before the "Contractor" says it was. And the formation of that branch was not the cause of the strike last year, but the refusal of the Employers to pay such prices as a man could make fair wages on. The good times in the years of the millenium from 1862 to 1873, I have nothing to say about, as never having worked in Quincy I do not know how far he is correct in that statement, but this I know, that from the four dollars a day he quotes the prices fell so that many could not make a dollar a day and take all risks. The men had to practice the most rigid economy whilst the bosses continued as extravagant as ever in their personal expenditures, which went to show that on the amount of work done, they figured for just as much profit as ever, the losses of hard times falling on the help alone.

As regards the statement that the "bitterness and hatred between Union and non-Union men" caused the present troubles, I am prepared to say it is false; our members are recruited from the ranks of non-Union men, and our members have never spoken against any employer employing a non-Union man, but a scab and a non-Union man are two different things; I know numbers of non-Union men who have as much, if not more dislike against scabs as any Union man has, and I know numbers of Contractors who dislike scabs as much as we do, and only use them as tools. The Contractors' Union have marked certain firm in Quincy as scabs to their Union, and have passed resolutions not to supply any who did not belong to their Union, with stock, thus showing their own inconsistency in the ground they have taken in this matter; they pretend to be resisting dictation, yet dictate to other employers.

The Granite Cutters' Union have never denied the right of any Contractor to "hire such mechanics as they consider competent to do their work, without the dictation of any society," but the Contractors claim a right to force men to work with parties to whom they have an objection, not because they do not belong to a union, but for their treachery.

Where, and on which side lies the dictation? He says, "They do not mean to prescribe any man because he belongs to a society or club, but will employ Union or non-Union men on the same basis," which is false, as the Employers have discharged the men because they refused to renounce the Union at their dictation, excepting one yard where they stopped work against a scab.

I should like to reply more fully to "Contractor," but in doing so should trespass too much on your space, but in justice to the Union, of which I have the honor to be a member, I desire to place it in its true light before the public, and not as misrepresented by this "Contractor," and I desire to say "that the mechanics have the good sense to see their true position, and the duties they owe to themselves" and everybody else, and if the Contractors could only "see their true position," and come down from the lofty pedestal upon which they attempt to elevate themselves, much trouble would be avoided, and further I do not consider it is a question of Union and non-Union men, but a scheme concorted to break up our branch in Quincy, if possible, the plea of dictation being only an excuse.

Yours respectfully,
JOSIAH B. DYER,
Sec. G. C. I. Union.

PICNIC. The grand union picnic of the temperance societies of Quincy, Weymouth and Rockland, which occurred at Lovell's grove on Saturday, was a decided success. The day was an excellent one, and those present enjoyed themselves to their hearts content, in dancing, games, etc. The affair was conducted in a manner which reflects credit on the managers and socities.

THE QUINCY STATUE. The massive and beautiful pedestal of the statue of Hon. Josiah Quincy was erected in front of City Hall, Boston, on Monday, and attracted considerable attention. Early on Thursday morning, the statue of our late honored townsman was placed in position, and will be dedicated some time next month.

QUERY.

What consistency is there in the pastor and members of a christian church attending a political caucus and casting their votes for a person who is well known as profane and vulgar; who used the expression when coming out of the hall, "I'll raise h—l at Worcester," and whose only claim to public notice is his impudence, cheek and money? SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1879.

Reform in Pockets.

The feminine system of pockets is wretchedly meagre and deficient, and stands greatly in need of reform. Look at the immense difference both in number and convenience between the pockets in a man's dress and in a woman's. Coats, over and under, each with four or five pockets; vest pockets of an equal number, outside and inside; pantaloons, with their side, hip and fob pockets, making as many as twenty which a man may wear at one time, every one of them safer and more convenient than any of which a woman can boast. She may have in her cloak — it depends entirely on the style of the garment—two shallow, wide-mouthed pockets. In the body of the dress possibly a watch pocket is inserted or appended under protest, by the dressmaker, since, in the long, closely "moulded" basque now worn a pocket makes an unsightly bunch on its smooth surface. The idea of clinging flatly to the figure extends to the skirts of the dress, and there is really no pocketable territory until low down and far backward a little fullness in the drapery allows of a departure of the severe outline. Even then the pocket must be ornamented or it must not be: and a patch of puffings and plaitings, trimmed with buttons and bows, is set jauntily on one side; but is a receptacle to which nothing more valuable than a handkerchief ought to be entrusted.

Where, then, can a woman safely carry her purse? In the underskirt—the real skirt — there is a pocket, one pocket, might be useful but for certain impediments. With the long, clinging overskirt rigidly drawn and fastened backward, completely covering it, it is a safe pocket—so safe and so very difficult of access that the wearer is always tempted not to use it at all. The careful and prudent, who are reckless of appearances, defy impediments and use it sometimes; but the physical difficulties to be overcome are great, and the effort is ungraceful and sometimes ridiculous.

The New Law.

A little old man, smoking a pipe and wearing an excited look, rushed into the Detroit City Hall and found his way into the rooms of the Chief of Police. Standing by that official, the little old man swelled out and exclaimed:

"No—by dunder—no!"

"No what?" asked the chief.

"You tings I bay dat license," shouted the smoker. "You tings I bay a one hundred and fifty dollars tax license."

"That's the new law."

"You tings I was a fool zo high, und zo pig around, und zo long?" continued the man, measuring the air.

"I guess you'll have to pay."

"We shall zee about dat pooty quick! I shall do sometings."

"What?"

"I shall show you—ha! You know what I does—eh? I shall shut up my zaloon und zell noding more. Ven der fellers comes around und kick on the door nobody shall be dere. Ven a pig crowd comes up from Deledo on Zunday dey shall have no peer, no zigars, no Limpurger. I shall rent my zaloon mit an insurance agent, und he sheat der beeples, und I shall get drunk in my house, und der beeples shall have to drink wasser, und Daytroit shall go down de hill, und somepody shall gome here from New York, und puy the whole town for zwelf dollars, und move him up by Chicago—ha!"

And he shook his fist at the Chief and rushed out.

Johnny has the Cholera Infantum.

An old fellow, who has a son just entering juvenile society, made a terrible mistake the other night. A note was under his plate, which said: "Miss —— No. —— street, requests your company Tuesday evening." He combed his bald head and went there. A little girl ushered him into the parlor. "Is Miss——in?" said he. "Yes, that is my name," said the girl. "Isn't Johnny coming to-night?" Johnny was his son. It all occurred to the old man in a moment. He thought Miss——was an older one. He wiped his bald head, took his hat and said, "No, Johnny has the cholera infantum. Just called in to tell you he couldn't be here." And the old gentleman went out and kicked himself.

Our Story.

THE FACTORY FOREMAN.

It was just such an American village as you see in pictures. A background of superb bold mountain, all clothed in blue-green cedars, with a torrent thundering down a deep gorge and falling in billows of foam: a river reflecting the azure of the sky, and a knot of houses, with a church spire at one end and a thicket of factory chimneys at the other, whose black smoke wrote ever changing hieroglyphics against the brillancy of the sky. This was Dapplevale. And in the rosy sunset of this blossomy June day the girls were all pouring out of the broad doorway, while Gerald Blake, the foreman, sat behind his desk, a pen behind his ear and his small beady-black eyes drawn back, as it were, in the shelter of a precipice of shaggy eyebrows.

One by one the girls stopped and received their pay for one week's work, for this was Saturday night. One by one they filed out with fretful, discontented faces, until the last one passed in front of the high-railed desk.

She was slight and tall with large, velvety-blue eyes, a complexion as delicately grained and transparent as rose-colored wax, and an abundance of glossy hair of so dark a brown that the casual observer would have pronounced it black, and there was something in the way the blue ribbon at her throat was tied and the manner in which the details of her dress were arranged that bespoke her of foreign birth.

"Well, Mlle. Annette," said Mr. Blake, "and how do you like factory life?"

"It is not disagreeable," she answered, a slight accent clinging to her tones, like fragrance to a flower, as she extended her hand for the money the foreman was counting out.

"You have given me but $4," she said. "It was to be $8 by the contract."

Mr. Blake shrugged his shoulders disagreeably.

"Humph!" he grunted; "you ain't much accustomed to our way of doing things, are you madamoiselle? Eight—of course; but we deduct two for a fee—"

"A fee! For what?" Annette demanded, with flushed cheeks and sparkling eyes.

"For getting you the situation, madamoiselle, to be sure," said Mr. Blake, in a superior sort of way. "Such places don't grow on every bush. And folks naturally expect to pay something for the privilege."

"I did not!" flashed out Annette Duvelle.

"Oh—well—all right. Because, you know, you ain't obliged to stay unless you choose."

"Do you mean," hesitated Annette, "that if I do not pay you this money—"

"You can't expect to stay in the works," said Mr Blake, hitching up his collar.

"But the other $2?"

"Oh," said Mr. Blake, "that's a percentage the girls all pay."

"But what is it for?"

Mr. Blake laughed.

"Well, it helps out my salary. Of course, you know the girls all expect to pay something every week for keeping their situations in a place where there's so many anxious to get in."

"And Mr. Elderslie?"

"Oh, Mr. Elderslie," repeated Blake. "He hasn't much to do with it. I am master at the Dapplevale Calico Works."

"Mr. Elderslie owns it, I believe?"

"Well, yes, he owns it. But I manage everything. Mr. Elderslie reposes the utmost confidence in my capacity, ability and-and-responsibility. Mr. Elderslie is a good business man. He understands his own interest. And now if you've any more questions to ask—"

"I have none," said Annette wistfully. "But—I need this money myself I work hard for it. I earn it righteously. I cannot afford, any more than the others among these poor laboring girls to pay it to your greed—"

"Eh?" ejaculated Mr. Blake, jumping from his seat as if some insect had stung him.

"And I will not pay it," calmly concluded Mlle. Annette.

"Very well—very well. Just as you like, madamoiselle," cried the foreman, turning red in the face. "Only if you won't conform to the rules of the Dapple works—"

"Are these the rules? scornfully demanded Annette.

"Pray consider your name crossed off the book," went on Mr. Blake. "You are no longer in my employ. Good evening, Madamoiselle Whatever-you-may-call-yourself."

And Mr. Blake slammed down the cover of his desk as if it were a patent guillotine and poor Annette Duvelle's neck were under it.

Two or three of the factory girls, who had hovered around the open door to hear the discussion, looked with awe-stricken faces at Annette as she came out with four dollars which she had received from the cashier in her hand.

"You've lost your place, ma'amselle," whispered Jenny Purton, a pale, dark-eyed little thing who supported a crippled mother and two little sisters out of her mulcted earnings.

"And he'll never let you in again," added Mary Rice. "He's as vindictive as possible!"

"It matters not," said Annette. "He is a rogue, and rogues sometimes outgeneral themselves."

"But you can't starve," said Jenny. "Look here, ma'amselle, come home with me. It's a poor place, but we'll make you welcome till—till you can write to your friends."

Annette turned and impulsively kissed Jenny on her lips.

"I thank you," she said, "but I do not need your kindness. My friends are nearer than you think."

And Annette Duvelle went back to the little red brick cottage, all thatched with the growth of the woodbine, where she lodged with the wife of the man who tended the engines in the Dapplevale works.

"Does he cheat you, too, of your money?" she asked, when Simon Pettengill came home smoke-stained and grimy, to eat his supper.

"One-sixth I have to pay to him," said Simon with an involuntary groan, as he looked at the five little ones around his board. "Yes, Miss, he's a villian; but the world is full of such. And I find it a pretty hard world to get on with. Mr. Elderslie never comes here or may be things would be a bit different. Mr. Elderslie lives abroad; in Paris, they say."

"He is in this country now," said Annette. "I intend to write to him."

"'Twon't do no good, Miss."

"Yes it will," said Annette, quietly.

* * * * * * * *

The petals of the June roses had fallen, a pink carpet along the edge of the woods, and the Dapplevale works wore their holiday guise, even down to Simon, Pettengill's newly brightened steam engine, for Mr. Elderslie and his bride were to visit the works on their wedding tour.

"It's a pity Ma'amselle Annette went away so soon," said Simon to his assistant; "'cause they say the master's kind-hearted in the main, and she might have spoken up for herself."

Mr. Gerald Blake, in his best broadcloth suit, and mustache newly dyed, stood smiling in the broad doorway as the carriage drove up to the entrance, and Mr. Elderslie, a handsome, blonde-browned man, sprang out and assisted a young lady, in a dove-colored traveling suit, to alight.

"Blake, how are you?" he said, with the carelessness of conscious superiority. "Annette, my love, this is Blake, my foreman."

"Madamoiselle Annette!"

And Mr. Gerard Blake found himself cringing before the slight French girl whom he had turned from the factory door a month before.

"I must beg to look at the books Blake, said Elderslie, authoritatively.—"My wife tells me some strange stories about the way things are managed here. It became so notorious that the rumors reached her even at Blythesdale Springs and she chose to come and see for herself. Annette, my darling, the best wedding gift we can make to these poor working girls is a new foreman. Blake you may consider yourself dismissed."

"But, sir—."

"Not another word," cried Mr. Elderslie, with lowering brow, and Mr. Gerald Blake crept away, with an uncomfortable consciousness of Annette's scornful blue eyes following him.

Elderslie turned to his wife.

"You were right my love," said he. "The man's face is sufficient evidence against him."

And a new reign began for poor Jenny Purton and the working girls, as well as for Simon Pettengill.

And Annette never regretted her week's apprenticeship in the Dapplevale Calico Works.

☞ Men are apt to grumble because their honesty is not properly rewarded.—Let them remember the case of a down East man who returned a wallet he had found, and received in acknowledgment a horse which ran away with and killed his sister.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 20, 1879.

Bismarck's Cure for Tardiness.

Bismarck teaches good lessons, but he has enough ways of doing it. A Berlin shoemaker, who was proverbial for making promises which he did not keep, was taught to be punctual.

The man after many express promises had neglected him on several occasions. When this again occurred, the shoemaker was roused at six o'clock the next morning by a messenger with the simple question :

"Are Herr Von Bismarck's boots ready yet ?"

When the maker said, "No," he retired ; but in ten minutes another arrived. Loud rang the bell.

"Are Herr Von Bismarck's boots ready yet ?"

"No.".

And so it went on every ten minutes until the boots were ready in the evening. The shoemaker, no doubt, never disappointed him again.

TOO MANY GRAVEYARDS. Somebody tells a story of a traveler who put up at a Boston hotel. He was given a room in the rear of the building, and the first sight which met his eye in the morning was a gloomy expanse of graveyard right under his window. He was a man of sensitive nature, and the landscape spoiled his appetite for that day. As his day's work or pleasure was over he quietly removed his baggage to another house. Here he asked for a front room and went to sleep in peace ; but in the morning, as before, Aurora's gentle beams gilded a dazzling array of tombstones across the street in the King's Chapel graveyard. The gentleman had another day's bad digestion, but being of courageous disposition, he made a third trial and expressly stipulated that he should not be given a back room nor a front one. The gentlemanly clerk assigned him a cheerful parlor on the west side and the guest went to bed happy.—He arose feeling decidedly more cheerful, and drew his curtains to feast his gaze on the Old Granary cemetery, with tombstones three hundred years old moldering before him. It was too much for the stranger. He paid his bill and departed to hunt up a town "where it wasn't so unhealthy that they had to have a graveyard attached to every hotel."

A LUCKY MAN. The present lieutenant-governor of the state of Colorado, Mr. Taber, is one of the best illustrations of what people do there with their money when they get hold of a solid amount. A little over eighteen months ago, Mr. Taber kept a grocery store at Leadville. Two miners, customers of his, prospecting in the neighborhood, induced him to go into partnership with them on the basis of a grub stake. They were to do the work and he was to supply them with grub. The legend is that all he gave them was about $30 worth of provisions after having wiped out an old debt of some $100, most of which was for whiskey. They struck the "Little Pittsburgh" mine, and to-day Mr. Taber is worth several millions and has bought out his partners for $400,000. The whole of his wealth is now invested in new mines, in bank operations, and in the erection of new buildings in Denver. Nothing could entice him into dissipation or even more luxury.

☞ The Chinaman had a good grip on the idea when he spoke of the cucumber as "no belly good."

☞ A Denver clergyman, on receipt of the usual half-fare pass, wrote to the superintendent : "Can not you embrace my wife also ?" To which the railroad man said he did not know, but he would like to see the clergyman's wife first, as he was rather fastidious.

THE COBBLER'S LAST WORDS. "I feel that I wax weaker each succeeding day, and that I am fast approaching my end ; a few more stitches and all will be over ; and I shall go where there is rest for the weary sole, and every sorrow will be heeled." Having said awl he wished, he calmly breathed his last.

☞ An old farmer purchased some sweet oil in a drug store, and being asked if there was "nothing else," he laid several packages on the counter, held up a hand with several strings tied on the fingers, and said : "Let's see ! That red string is for the bar soap ; that rag is for a broom ; that blue cord is for a calico dress ; that braid means four pounds of sugar, and this other string is for sweet oil. No—nothing more."—Detroit Free Press.

Summary of News.

A Bridgeport man has invented a machine capable of ironing five or six hundred shirts a day.

It is stated that the grave of Brigham Young, who left eighteen wives, is utterly neglected.

There are 450 lady dentist in the United States, and three times as many learning the business.

The pleasure of doing good is the only pleasure that never wears out.

There are only twenty-four failures in New York city in August, with liabilities amounting to $284,000, the most favorable report since 1873.

Fifteen years before the Revolution the wife of Washington kept sixteen spinning-wheels running and saw the fabrics made in her own house, under her own notice.

Budget of Fun.

☞ In the race for matrimony it isn't always the girl that covers the most laps that wins.

☞ "I have a love-letter, said the servant girl to her mistress. "Will ye rade it to me ? And here is some cotton wud ye stuff in yer ears whoile ye rade it ?"

☞ "No," said Paperwate, exclaiming, "I wasn't really mad when the old man drove me from the house, but I must say that I felt put out."

☞ Two interesting children were amusing themselves—in childish fashion—by "playing railways." "What do you call your locomotive ?" says Tom. "Carelessness," replies Harry. "What's the name of yours ?" "Collision."

☞ A celebrated judge, who stooped very much in walking, had a stone thrown at him one day, which fortunately passed over him without hitting him. Turning to his friend he remarked, "Had I been an upright judge, that might have caused my death."

☞ Four years ago John Larch of Alabama dissappeared from home, leaving the following note on the river's brink: "Farewell, Susan ! you have driven me to the grave !" by which he meant that he was going to Cincinnati to live with another young women. All of which being proved, John now resides in a place much drier than the river.

"You see, grandma, we perforate an aperture in the apex, and a corresponding aperture in the base ; and by applying the egg to the lips and forcibly inhaling the breath, the egg is entirely discharged of its contents."

"Bless my soul," cried the old lady, "what improvements they do make.—Now in my young days we just made a hole in both ends and sucked."

NEW MATERIALS

The mournful expression assumed by a bachelor friend when I told him that silks costing $50 the yard were imported this fall, is even now present with me. "How many yards for a dress ?" he asked hurriedly. I hastened to re-assure him by adding that one or two yards of such expensive fabric placed on something in comparison more ordinary ; such as plain satin or velvet, would be sufficient. This brought a gleam to his saddened countenance, and he still revolves uncertainly the matrimonial question.—The beauty and richness of many of the new silks are indeed extraordinary, and oftentimes therefore they will be used in lesser quantities on plain satin, velvet and sometimes silk. Colors are frequently very bright and we find not only the India cashmere patterns before spoken of, but all manner of floral ideas which repeat the gay jardiniere and Pompadour patterns of the summer, and are likewise produced in wool and silk, and will be united either with plain silk, satin, velvet, or wool goods. We find therefore plain goods in dark cloth shades have received special attention, and among these the varieties that are chiefly brought forward are cashmere, merino, camels hair, diagonals and satines, the latter resembling the satines which were fashionable some years ago.

MILLINERY.

One stands aghast in contemplation of the birds which are placed on new bonnets. The largest things that ever you saw put to such a purpose, and some with the two feet left dangling below.—I almost fear to say how large some of them are, but they are certainly more than a foot long. In these more pronounced specimens the wings are pressed closely, else I know not what we should do. Sizes descend in all gradations down to the humming bird, but where the sizes are small, we not unfrequently find them grouped together ; as many as six with wings compressed being placed in a row. Pompons are made of five or six birds, with heads together in the centre, and wings outstretched, and the bands are made of birds ; two on either side with heads in the middle, and others succeeding beyond. Fancy feathers of all kinds are much used ; ostrich plumes were never more in demand. As to shapes, any one can be suited, for we have medium and large, close brims, wide brims, and brims which signify nothing in particular. Crowns also are nothing in particular, except at times by reason of great width, and also by being occasionally set very far back, leaving of course a wide front brim. Some shapes flare over the foreheads, while others lie almost flat. Satin Antique is the novelty in material. It is satin having a slight appearance of plush and we find it laid plainly on the frame, or in rosettes or folds. Elegant bonnets are of velvet laid plainly, and many felts of all colors are imported.

COSTUMES.

Short costumes are a necessity for the street and will be chiefly worn even for balls and parties by young ladies, though for in doors, the elegance of a train will be always desirable. Among new models for short costumes, the Antonian overskirt and Sybilla basque may be mentioned, while for girls from ten to fourteen, nothing prettier than the Harfra overskirt and Amina basque can be found. The Isola polonaise is also pretty for girls of the same ages.

Illustrations of costumes may be seen in Ehrich's Fashion Quarterly which is especially valuable for out of town residents. It combines the best features of a fashion Magazine, a price current and a catalogue, and its numerous representations of costumes, laces, trimmings, jewelry, household articles, etc., are very well executed, while the accompanying descriptions are clear. The publishers, Messrs. Ehrich & Co., of Eighth Avenue informs me that they will supply every article described at its quoted price, but the chief use of the Quarterly is to furnish ladies with a reliable list of prices, and accurate description of the latest styles. The subscription price is only fifty cents a year, and a specimen advance sheet will be sent to any address free, on receipt of a three cent stamp for postage. LUCY CARTER.

MILK FOR BRIGHT'S DISEASE. A physician suffering with Bright's disease, and weighing 155 pounds, began in June, 1878, to restrict himself exclusively to a milk diet, taking one quart at each meal, or three quarts daily. He reported to the Philadelphia County Medical Society recently, according to the Record, that no trace of his former ailment is perceptible at the present time, that he had gained thirty pounds in flesh, and this notwithstanding constant attention to professional duties both day and night.

Problems.

BRAINTREE, SEPT. 15, 1879.

To the Publishers of the Patriot:—

In answer to the problem in the PATRIOT on Saturday last, as to how much Mr. Jones lost by selling a hat and taking a counterfeit five dollar bill, I would give the following reply:—

"He lost just what the man got away with, viz.—the hat and $2.00."

Now let me give your readers another: A man met two boys on the road and asked their ages.

The older one replied, take three years from my age, add it to my brother's age and we shall both be of an age.

But take three years from my brother's and add to mine, and I shall be twice as old.

How old were the boys ? M. F. F.

Best Material for Money.

Owing to the storm on Sunday evening last, the attendance at the Universalist Church, to listen to Rev. Mr. Perrin's lecture on Money, was small. He took for his text, Job, 2d chap., fourth verse. Topic,— "What material best fitted for money." The following is a brief synopsis of his lecture :

Job is known to be a very old book, its mention of old and curious customs. The words of the text make evident reference to the use of skins as money. When mankind was in the lowest stage of civilization, flesh of animals, wild fruits, grain, &c., would be too perishable to use as a medium of exchange. The dressed skins of animals would be valuable, would keep a long time, hence would be the best money procurable.

In course of time a part would be accepted for the whole, and the next step would bring men to leather money.—Money of leather is not unknown to history. Oxen, as we know from Homer, were used for money. Slaves are accepted in some portions of Africa as the unit of value. Wampum, ends of shells ground and polished, used first as ornaments, soon served as money among the Indians, and was made legal tender by the Colonial General Court of Massachusetts in 1649. Corn and other grain, nuts, eggs (in Switzerland), dried fish (in Newfoundland), cloth (in Africa), salt, mats of straw, nails, bullets, tobacco, &c., have been used as money at different times. Men have used what they could for money, though very early they found what was best adapted to their need.

The material best fitted for money must have at least eight qualities in high degree. It must have value. To have value it must be useful. It is to be noted that the various things used by mankind as money have all been useful either as food, clothing, ornaments, &c. This material must be portable, i. e. of large value in small bulk, and yet not in too small bulk, so that it can be easily and safely carried from place to place. It should be as indestructible as possible, that the holder should not lose. It should be as homogeneous as possible, so one piece should be of the same value as another of the same size. Divisibility is another quality much needed in a material fitted to be used for money. It needs often to be divided and then joined together without loss. It should be as nearly stable in value as possible, the nearer the better, so that the man who borrows shall pay no more than he borrowed; the lender receives no less than the amount he lent. It should be readily recognizable, so that time for investigation shall not be needed. Lastly, it should be coinable, of such quality that it will take and keep form and impression.

These qualities are found in but few things, more of them in the metalic than elsewhere. Iron and lead both corrode and are quickly destroyed, and are likewise too bulky. Tin is too brittle. Platinum is of little utility, or has been in the past, and is not easily worked. Nickel and copper are quite well fitted for small coins, but are too bulky to be used at high value even for them. Gold and silver have been used for money from earliest times. They possess more than others these qualities. They have value based on usefulness. They do not corrode, and gold is not attacked by anything short of a combination of acids.—Coins of both, many hundreds, even thousands, years old, are found. They are easily made homogeneous, are easily divided and reunited without loss, have a large degree of stability of value.—They fluctuate somewhat in value especially at times when the amount mined has been largely increased. They are, however, more stable than most metals. They are readily recognized by any one. They readily take and retain form and impression. In addition, they are of themselves beautiful and attractive.—Possessing these qualities, it is no wonder that mankind has been practically unanimous in the choice of these metals as material for money.

A NOVEL EXCURSION. The following programme is announced for the complimentary benefit of the Boston Bay Steamboat Company to E. W. Davidson, captain, and M. M. Whelan, agent of the steamer Stamford, which is to take place on Monday next. The steamer will leave Foster's wharf at 10.30 A. M, for Fort Warren and remain thirty minutes to inspect the fort, thence to Long Island, where the following attractions will be offered: An amateur swimming match, base ball game by the Boston College nine and a picked nine, running match and other games, to conclude with a sail to Lovell's groves, there to enjoy various amusements. The fare for the trip is fifty cents.

Our Boston Correspondent.

Animated appearance of Boston. Revival of enterprise. Cheerful outlook. Sanitary condition. Weekly mortality. Statistics of human tenure. The Republican State Convention. John D. Long the nominee for Governor.

SEPTEMBER 17, 1879.

Lively times in Boston both as to business and politics. And now to business. Retail trade is more active than for many years past. The prices of many commodities are advancing with good prospects to the seller of farther advances. The money market is active—some days tight to the borrower. The banks generally find a ready call for their funds with fair rates of discount. Failures of business embarassments are less frequent than six months ago, and confidence which is the life of business enhances daily. Even real estate valuation the last to go down and the last to come up in panic periods, is gradually but surely recuperating, notwithstanding the dreadful wear by the savings banks upon their most unfortunate mortgagors. Many of these institutions have lost public confidence never to regain. During the long panic about to cease, the savings banks asked of the State Legislature the privilege of paying their dues by favorable instalments. It was granted them, but no leniency by statute was granted to the borrowers and the enforcement of payment by the iron rule of "Power of sale Mortgages" has brought desolation and sorrow to the hearth-stones of thousands. Ostracism from the sacred home, as we read in Grecian antiquity annals.

The remarkable cool weather the past fortnight and the appearance last week of an early frost have been favorable to public health. The deaths in Boston the last week as recorded at the city register's office was but 133,—of these 86 were of foreign parentage and 47 American. Consumption, cholera infantum and heart disease extinguished the lamp of 44; 50 passing away under one year of age.

As a whole, the sanitary condition of this large city compares favorably with other localities—city or suburban. But alas what shadows we are and how brief man's existence. According to high authority this globe has nearly a billion and a half human beings—about 60 die every second. Only one in ten thousand reaches the one-hundredth year and one person to five hundred the sixty-fifth year. Married people live longer than unmarried ones. Only 65 persons in a thousand contract marriage.

Wednesday morning. Much interest was manifested here through yesterday by the proceedings of the Republican State Convention at Worcester, one of the largest political gatherings in the old Bay State for many years past. Ex-Gov. Bullock was the president. Quincy was not forgotten in the business of the Convention. Col. C. H. Porter was a member of the Committee on resolutions, and Mr. Faxon carried his point as to the manner and fairness in the ballot for Governor. The Hon. John D. Long of Hingham, received the nomination for Governor and Byron Weston of Dalton, for Lieut. Governor. X.

For the Patriot.

The Convention on Thursday.

The Independent Convention which assembled in Mechanics Hall at Worcester last Thursday to nominate State Officers, was a satisfactory refutal of the charges made by the unscrupulous political press. 1378 delegates from every town and city of the State, except three, were pronounced by ex-Collecter Simmons, the finest in appearance and most harmonious in action, of any political body he had ever met in that hall. To call such, a "crowd," will prove anything but refutable by the time of the State election. It seemed the spontaneous uprising of the intelligent yeomanry, united and determined to break from "the ring," which has so long held the old parties, and dictated terms to the voters.

The nomination of the candidates from all parties—the perfect harmony and wild enthusiasm—betray a no uncertain result.

Blackguard and personal abuse have helped make the steps by which General Butler may hope to ascend to the Gubernatorial Chair. The large sprinkling of prominent Republicans, augurs well for this new organization. ⁂

DISTRICT COURT. The following list of criminal business has been brought before the District Court this week :

Christopher Cheever, of Weymouth, for being drunk. Fine, $3 and costs.—For non-payment was committed to the House of Correction.

Edward H. Adams, of East Milton, for cruelty to a cow. The evidence not sustaining the complaint, Mr. Adams was discharged.

William Roulou, of Quincy, for the larceny of three granite bases, valued at $60, belonging to N. B. Furnald. Continued.

Daniel Cronin, of Quincy, for being drunk. Plead guilty, and it being a second offence, he was sent to the House of correction for two months.

Ann Patterson, of Quincy, for an assault on Nixoline Jensen. The evidence was deemed insufficient by the Judge, and the defendant was discharged.

THE GOLDEN RULE, of Boston, comes to us in its old form : a handsome eight-page weekly paper, conducted by Rev. H. A. SHOREY. Typographically it is almost a counterpart of its old self,—the change being to a larger type for the body of the paper, making it even handsomer than before. As a literary and religious household journal THE GOLDEN RULE was a general favorite, and the new proprietors, in a modestly worded greeting, propose to maintain its well-earned reputation. The old departments are all retained, and two or three new ones added. An entire page is given to Sunday Schools — to be edited by Rev. R. R. Meredith and Rev. A. F. Schaffler. A story is promised for each week, the one in the present number being an admirable temperance story by W. M. F. Round. The price has been reduced to $2.00, with special rates to clubs.

☞ We call especial attention to the advertisement of Childs & Lane in this day's paper. The announcement they make is worthy the careful consideration of every purchaser of CARPETINGS.—With a central location, large stock, low prices, polite attention, and the assurance that everything will be as represented, we are confident they will meet the reasonable expectations of all who may give them a call.

A FAVORITE REMEDY. Simmons' Liver Regulator one of the most meritorious, and popular preparations offered to the public. It is entirely free from injurious mineral substances, and as a vegetable preparation made of southern roots and herbs it is a sovereign remedy for all liver and bowel complaints. The merits of this remedy commend it to the public as a standard to be kept constantly in the family. It has the most unqualified endorsement of thousands of our most prominent citizens in all parts of the country, who have used it and testify to its excellent medical and curative properties.

Purchasers should be careful to see that they get the GENUINE manufactured only by J. H. ZEILIN & Co., Philadelphia.

The Drama.

BOSTON, Sept. 18, 1879.

It is seldom that such an accumulation of brilliant and worthy attractions are centered in one place, as are now presented at the Park, Boston, Gaiety and Museum. "The Spark," and "A Fool and his Money," is the bill at the Museum. "The Spark," is one of those rare bits of dramatic literature that one occasionally encounters, like the oasis in the desert. Exquisite in construction, original in plot, and deliciously clean and pure in plot and action, brilliant, sparkling. I would not so much as hint at the plot, but advise your readers to see it. I can not say as much for "A Fool and his Money," one of Byron's comedies, but it is highly amusing, and we will not scan its imperfections too closely.

F. S. Chanfrau and "Kit," opened the regular season at the "Boston," last Monday evening. "Standing room only," was early hung at the door, and the interior of the vast auditorium presented a most animated appearance, filled as it was from orchestra to upper gallery. The time has long passed for extended notice of "Kit." That his popularity has not abated one jot, was shown by the deafening applause which greeted his appearance. Each member of the regular company was welcomed in a most cordial manner, and the ladies were recipients of beautiful floral offerings, Mrs. Barry in particular. The "Two Old Beats," promenaded as usual and received their accustomed salutations from the "Gods." "Kit" remains until the 27th inst.

GAIETY. F. C. Bangs and "Daniel Bruce," the village blacksmith, is the attraction. His personation of the misanthropic knight of the forge, who centers his love and care in the little child is a masterly one, though at times somewhat declamatory in style. A method of quiet, deep intensity would set much more gracefully on him, but this fault is rare. The support is strong, and the stage setting fine. His stay is limited to two weeks.

PARK. W. S. Gilbert's fairy comedy, "The Palace of Truth," is superbly mounted and finely acted. The argument forcibly recalls, "Engaged," bearing a striking resemblance to that play, with this difference. The motif in "Engaged" is selfishness; and in "The Palace of Truth," is truth ; and is rendered by the actors in the same vein. The dialogue is rather highfaluten, to use an American expression, bringing to mind "The Lady of Lyon's." Miss Rachel Sanger, a new member of the company, lately from the London Theatres, "plays well her part," and is a strong acquisition. Were I to find any fault with Mr. Abbey's company, I should say that generally speaking they are too languishing in rendering their lines and action to wear well in the long run to those who see them repeatedly.—"Palace of Truth" remains the attraction during next week, with "The Bonnie Fish Wife."

Saturday evening of this week "The Two Orphans" will be presented at the Museum with Misses Clark and Davenport as Henriette and Louise ; Mr. Barron and Wm. Seymore as Jacques and Pierre ; and Mrs. Vincent as La Frochard. CRIT.'—

HINGHAM WATER COMPANY. The work of laying the pipes for this company is being rapidly pushed forward.—It is confidently expected that should there be good weather through the fall the pipes will be laid from Accord pond through Main street to Downer Landing, and water be let on by the first of January next.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

ASK the recovered dyspeptics, bilious sufferers, victims of fever and ague, the mercurial diseased patient, how they recovered health, cheerful spirits, and good appetite; they will tell you by taking SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR.

The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the World !

For DYSPEPSIA, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Attacks, SICK HEADACHE, Colic, Depression of Spirits, Sour Stomach, Heart Burn, &c., &c.

This unrivalled Southern Remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is

Purely Vegetable,

containing those Southern Roots and Herbs, which an all-wise Providence has placed in countries where Liver Diseases most prevail. It will cure all Diseases caused by Derangement of the Liver and Bowels.

The SYMPTOMS of Liver Complaint are a bitter or bad taste in the mouth; Pain in the Back, Sides or Joints; often mistaken for Rheumatism; Sour Stomach, Loss of Appetite ; Bowels alternately costive and lax; Headache, Loss of memory, with a painful sensation of having failed to do something which ought to have been done; Debility, Low Spirits, a thick yellow appearance of the Skin and Eyes, a dry Cough often mistaken for Consumption.

Sometimes many of these symptoms attend the disease, at others very few; but the Liver, the largest organ in the body, is generally the seat of the disease, and if not Regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness, and DEATH will ensue.

I can recommend as an efficacious remedy for disease of the Liver, Heartburn and Dyspepsia, Simmons' Liver Regulator. LEWIS G. WUNDER, 1625 Master Street, Assistant Post Master, Philadelphia.

"We have tested its virtues personally, and know that for Dyspepsia, Biliousness and throbbing Headache, it is the best medicine the world ever saw.—We have tried forty other remedies before Simmons' Liver Regulator, but none of them gave us more than temporary relief ; but the Regulator not only relieved, but cured us."— ED. MARVELOUS SUCCESS
—OF—
STANDARD FOOD,
—FOR—
HORSES AND CATTLE.

Nothing has yet been discovered so fitly adapted to the wants and General or Specific Improvement of

HORSES AND CATTLE AS STANDARD FOOD !

From its first introduction it has had a most remarkable and uninterrupted success, as the following testimonials will confirm. It contains the best known condiments, (roots, seeds, &c.,) so combined as to give Tone, Health and Strength to the system.

It greatly increases the Flesh, prevents Indigestion and Colic, removes Worms and Humors, softens and loosens the Skin, adds richness to the Color of the Coat, &c.

☞ It may be fed freely and will put a horse in good condition, when other means fail A faithful trial cannot fail to prove its Immediate and Permanent benefit. The following are samples of the Testimonials we are receiving, and are all from well-known and reliable men.

Brockton, Aug. 15th, 1879.
MESSRS. AME & CO.,
GENTLEMEN:—Please send me 200 lbs., of your Standard Food.—The fifty pounds I bought of you, has worked admirably. It not only restored a sick colt to good condition, but it is removing the humors from the other horses and they have greatly improved thereby. I remain sincerely yours,

Baby Snowdrop's Appeal.

'Most ev'y body tisses me,
And tells me I am sweet,
And says, "What pitty 'ittle hands!
What tunnin 'ittle feet!"

"And 'taint no fun for 'ittle me,
So mussed and hauled about,
Wiz rough old whiskers all 'cratched up!
I wub my nose and pout."

"Say, now, big folks, how would oo like
To be in Snowd'op's place—
Have each old poke dat comes along
Put tisses on oor face?

"Oo would not like it, I know dat—
Now would oo? Tell me, say!
Now oo must eezer tell a fib,
Or div oorself away."

Orchard and Garden Work.

September should be a harvest month of the orchardist and gardener, in more senses than one. Aside from the ingathering of the maturing products of his own orchard and garden, there are the various fairs and gatherings, from which the experience of the most successful should be reaped. The wide-awake fruit raiser, will not only be on hand at the fairs with his best fruit, but on the alert to learn how his competitors grew their products. Such a person will look upon the knowledge he can gain at the fair, as of much greater importance, than the money value of any prize he may secure. Too many go empty handed and seeing what others bring, remark that they have better than that at home. Such persons make themselves very disagreeable, and deserve no better treatment, than to have their statements met with — "We don't believe it." These grumblers and boasters of what they left at home, are an injury to every fair, especially the smaller ones. They stand aloof and discourage others, instead of taking hold with their neighbors and making the fair what it should be.—There is nothing that so interests one in a fair, as being an exhibitor. Every person should feel free to ask, (and answer too,) any questions that may come up; it should be a time for the liberal exchange of thought and experience. Those who simply go around and see, are not gaining the information that the opportunity offers.—Amer. Agriculturist.

The Potato Crop.

The Massachusetts Ploughman says, that "many farmers harvest the potato crop in September, and if the weather is cool and there is no tendency to rot, this is good practice. Complaint comes from many quarters this year that potatoes are rotting, and if they must rot it is better they should rot in the ground than in the cellar. The earth will absorb the vile odors, but in the house they produce disease and death. Many harvest potatoes early in order to avoid rot, but placed in large bins in the cellar fermentation is much more likely to accrue, especially if the weather is warm, than when kept in the ground. There is no better place for diseased potatoes than in dry earth. If the potato patch is inclined to be wet, the potatoes may be dug as soon as they mature and pitted in dry soil, making the pits small and cone-shaped with a ventilating hole at the apex of the pit. This makes some labor, but the potato is worthy of labor. Our practice is to dig potatoes in a cool dry day, and put them in the cellar after a little exposure to the sun, just enough to dry the dirt, which may adhere to them, and if there is any, even the slightest, sign of rot, to sprinkle air-slacked lime upon them. This seems to destroy the spores of disease, and the potatoes come out in the winter as fresh as though just dug. The lime also destroys the offensive smell which even healthy potatoes give out when first put into the cellar, so that it is well to use a little even when there is no tendency to rot.

☞ One great leak on the farm is found in the way stock is kept. Some try to stop the leak by seeing how small a quantity of food will sustain life, and often succeed in having their stock almost entirely leak away, whilst their neighbor who feed bounteously, does not have this leak to contend with, but generally has a profit to apply to the stoppage of other leaks.

☞ Plant a few fruit trees of every variety each year and your orchard will never be all old.

Anecdotes.

A man ordered a most elaborate dinner at a restaurant, which he enjoyed and praised much—after which he lighted a cigar and sauntering up to the landlord declared his inability to pay for it. "But I don't know you," said Boniface.

"Of course, or you would not have given me a dinner."

The enraged man seized the pistol, collared the offender, and taking aim at his heart said: "Now, see if you get away from me without paying for that dinner."

"What is that in your hand?" gasped the impecunious customer, drawing back.

"That, sir, is a pistol."

"Oh! that's a pistol is it? I don't care a fig for a pistol; I thought it was a stomach pump."

"Oh, brother Charles, aren't you glad papa and mamma are going to take us to the country! Just to think of the lovely green grass, and flowers, and trees all around the house to gather fruit from?"

CHARLEY. "Yes, and for mamma to gather switches from!"

BOOKSELLER. "What sort of a book do you want, sir?"

BAGGS. "O, such books as a gentleman generally has!"

BOOKSELLER. "And how many?"

BAGGS. "Wal, my liberery is twelve by fifteen, and I want it full."

BOOKSELLER. "Will you have them bound in Russia or Morocco?"

BAGGS. "O, don't send so far! Have them bound in London.

Poetry.

"Somebody's Mother.

The woman was old and ragged and gray,
And bent with the chill of the winter's day;
The streets were white with a recent snow,
And the woman's feet with age were slow.

Down the street, with laughter and shout,
Glad in the freedom of "school let out,"
Came happy boys like a flock of sheep,
Hailing the snow, piled white and deep,
Past the woman, so old and gray,
Hastened the children on their way.

None offered a helping hand to her,
So weak, so timid, afraid to stir,
Lest the carriage wheels or the horses' feet
Should trample her down in the slippery street.

At last came out of the merry troop,
The gayest boy of all the group;
He paused beside her, and whispered low
"I'll help you across if you wish to go!"

Her aged hand on his strong, young arm
She placed, and so, without hurt or harm,
He guided her trembling feet along,
Proud that his own were firm and strong;
Then back again to his friends he went,
His young heart happy and well content.

"She's "Somebody's Mother," boys, you know
For all she is aged, and poor, and slow;
And some one, some time many lend a hand
To help my mother—you understand—
If ever she's poor, and old, and gray,
And her own dear boy is far away!"

"Somebody's Mother" bowed low her head
In her home that night, and the prayer she said
Was "God be kind to that noble boy,
Who is somebody's son, and pride, and joy."

Receipts, Wit, &c.

TOMATO CATCHUP. Take one bushel of tomatoes and boil them until they are soft; squeeze them through a fine wire sieve, and add half a gallon of vinegar, one pint and a half of salt, two ounces of cloves, quarter of a pound of allspice, two ounces of Cayenne pepper, three teaspoonfuls of black pepper, five heads of garlic skinned and separated; mix together and boil about three hours, or until reduced to about one half; then bottle without straining.

GRAHAM BISCUIT. Two cups graham flour, one cup white flour, one cup sweet milk, two tablespoonfuls of brown sugar, four tablespoonfuls yeast, one tablespoonful melted butter, one-half teaspoonful salt, and the same of soda, dissolved in a little hot water. Mix all together, except the soda, to raise over night, and in the morning add the soda; knead quickly and roll about half an inch thick; cut out, and let them raise about fifteen minutes before baking.

YORKSHIRE PUDDING. A quarter of a pound of flour, with a quart of water or milk; three eggs, well beaten, to be mixed with it; pepper and salt; butter the pan; put it under the beef so as to catch the gravy; have it in a good big pan, so as to be thin. Cut in pieces when served with the beef and arrange around the dish.

☞ To clean carpets, take one pint of hot water; add one tablespoonful of ammonia; stir well together; with this solution use a little toilet soap, and it will remove all stains of grease spots from the finest of carpets without changing the color.

☞ A woman raised to the third power of widowhood has the photographs of her three departed lords in a group, with a vignette of herself in the centre, and underneath is the inscription, "The Lord will provide."

☞ The New York Independent relates that a girl who had been very observant of her parent's mode of exhibiting their charity, being asked what generosity was, answered:—"It's giving to the poor all the old stuff you don't want yourself."

☞ A little Sunday school girl in Pittsburg had been taught by her mother not to say shall and shan't, but to use some softer equivalent. On reciting her Sunday-school lesson, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want," she surprised her teacher by an improved version—"I rather not want."

☞ A military man, pitching into an opponent exclaimed:—"Why his sword was never drawn but once, and that was in a raffle."

☞ A poet says, "Oh, she was fair, but sorrow left his traces there." What became of the balance of the harness, he don't state.

☞ Old boot-tops cut into pieces the right size and lined, make excellent iron-holders. The leather keeps all heat away from the hand.

☞ An art critic going into a gallery in a state of mild inebriation, to criticise some pictures, sees himself in a glass, and taking out a note-book, writes as follows:—"First room, head of a drunkard, no signature, has a great deal of character; red nose remarkably truthful. Must be a portrait from life; think I have seen that face somewhere."

☞ Oliver Holmes says "the true girl has to be sought for." Exactly, and the good-for-nothing young scamp who sponges his way through the world, too often does the seeking, and gets the girl who ought to be married to the young man of sense who has had no time or inclination to hunt her up.

☞ Remark of the oyster, September 1st:—"Here we R again."

☞ The matutinal song of the rooster:—"My gallant crew. Good morning."

Miscellany.

LOSS OR GAIN!

An old gentleman, leaning forward with his hands clasped over a gold-headed cane, was seated in a summer-house situated upon the grounds of a hotel at a fashionable watering-place. He was in a corner hidden by drooping vines, and his face expressed deep and apparently painful thought. The refrain of his sad musing was, "Only one person in the world to love me, and I shall lose even that now!"

On the other side of the summer-house, divided from the side the old gentleman occupied, by a rustic partition, two ladies, young and fair, rustled in, and taking out some fancy work, settled down for a chat.

One was tall and dressed in a pretty costume that was at once youthful and matronly; the other was petite, blonde, and not more than eighteen. Mrs. Courtland spoke first.

"Embroidery, Alice?" she said. "A handkerchief corner. For your trousseau?"

"Yes;" and the sweet voice faltered, while a burning blush crimsoned the fair cheek. "Is it not pretty?"

"Very. I want to talk about your prospects child. Your Aunt Mary tells me you are making a splendid match."

"Did she? I think so, Blanche. Malcolm is so noble and good!"

"But your Aunt tells me he is the favorite nephew of the great merchant, Hubert Bates, whose wealth is something enormous. You have only to help him play his cards well and he will probably be heir to a magnificent fortune. But what ails you? You look as if I was telling you a piece of news."

"I think Aunt Mary has been misinformed; that is all."

"Then he is not Mr. Bates' nephew?"

"I never heard him speak of a rich uncle, and I am quite sure he has no hope of inheriting money. He has a good salary, and my little fortune will furnish a small house; so we can make a comfortable, and, I hope, a happy home."

"Did he never speak to you of his uncle?"

"Not of a rich uncle. He had told me of a lame uncle, his mother's brother, who had been very kind to him, given him his education and a start in the world. He always talks of him with the deepest love and pity."

"Pity?"

"He suffers tortures from the effects of a fall that has lamed him for life and often causes him weeks of agonizing pain. Malcolm tells me with tears in his eyes of his fear of losing this friend."

"I wonder if it is the same?" murmured Mrs. Courtland.

"Tell me, Blanche, some of the best places to go for our furniture and carpets. It will be new work for me to buy household goods, and Aunt Sophy is not well enough to help me much."

"Oh, I will go with you. But I declare if I were you I would wait and see if your Aunt Mary is right. Your fortune will never buy or furnish such a house as a future millionaire should live in."

"My fortune," said Alice Hunter, with a ring in her clear voice, "will furnish a house suitable for a bank clerk with five hundred a year salary, which is what my husband will have. If Malcolm has a rich uncle he is not the man to live in expectation of money to come to him over a grave. If his uncle Hubert is, as you say, very rich, Malcolm would hate money won by the death of the nearest relative and dearest friend he has. But I don't believe in the money, for he never spoke of it to me."

Then the talk drifted into the discussion of bridal finery, of furniture and stories of the young wife's content in her own married life.

But the old man leaning upon the cane was thinking, "Can it be true? Does Malcolm think so little of my money that will be his, that he has never even mentioned it to his promised wife? Can it be that I shall gain a loving, tender niece, instead of losing my nephew when Malcolm marries?"

Loving his nephew so deeply, Hubert Bates had felt a keen pain at the news of his betrothal. He had not seen Alice Hunter, but he knew she had been brought up in a circle of fashion and was the orphan niece of one of society's gayest votaries, Mrs. Mary Haydon.

While he mused upon the conversation he had overheard, the silvery voices of his young neighbors still sounding beside him there was a sudden crash. Something struck him upon the head, and he lost consciousness.

Cries from the summer house, from groups of people collected in the grounds, brought a party of men speedily to the spot. The rotten posts supporting the roof upon one side had given way and the side and roof had fallen in. Mrs. Courtland and Miss Hunter were buried under the fallen timbers, the door being completely blockaded, but were uninjured. Not so the old man, who had been their unsuspected listener. He was taken out pallid and senseless.

Nobody knew him. He had come by the morning train, had taken breakfast, but no room, and asked the hour for the return train. A surgeon, summoned as speedily as possible, announced a broken arm and injury to the head, making a likelihood of a long tedious illness. There was some animated discussion, some suggestions of a hospital, a search through the pockets of the unconsious victim, resulted in the discovery of a small sum of money, but no letters, papers or cards; and finally a desertion of one and another, each going his or her way, with the consoling reflection "It's none of my business."

But when they had all deserted the injured man the surgeon, still busy binding up his arm as he lay upon a bench brought from a ruined summer-house, felt a slight touch on his hand and looked up.

"Can I help you?" Alice Hunter asked.

"No, child, not now."

"What will they do with him?"

"I suppose he must go to a hospital?"

"But the ride—the journey?"

"Will cause great additional suffering, perhaps result in death."

"Doctor, will they keep him here if he is paid for?"

"Certainly; but there is not enough money about him to pay his board a week."

"I will pay it."

"You?"

"Yes; I will not let him die for want of money I have. He"—and her lips quivered—"he looks like my dear father who is dead."

"Hem, yes. Here come the followers to carry him to the station. I think I will have him taken to the house where I board. It will cost less and be more quiet."

Mrs. Courtland declared Alice was outraging the proprieties most dreadfully when the young girl went to the house and offered her services as nurse to the doctor; but Aunt Sophy silenced all comments by moving her belongings from the hotel to the quiet boarding-house, and the doctor found he had a valuable assistant.

Alice explained, in her quiet, low voice, that her father was ill for nine long months before he died and she was his nurse. This accounted for the noiseless woolen dresses, the velvet-shod feet, the quick eye and ready hand, and when the sufferer recovered consciousness the gentle voice and tact that quieted him in paroxysms of pain and fever. Aunt Sophy was too much of an invalid to help; but she sat beside the bed while Alice moved to and fro, and performed all nursing duties.

The invalid had one long talk with the doctor, and then submitted to the gentle ministration of the two women, only insisting upon a man the doctor provided being with him at night and within call.

The season was over, and only these three remained of the summer boarders at the house, when one cool October day, the sick man, now far recovered, called Alice to him.

"I shall soon be well again," he said regretfully.

"Yes," she answered, cheerily, "very soon."

"I shall miss my nurse."

"And I my patient; but I am glad you are recovering. We were afraid at one time there would be a more painful parting."

"You mean I was in danger of dying. Why should that be painful? I am old."

She made no answer, looking sorrowfully into his uplifted eyes.

"And a burden upon you, the doctor tells me. Why did you make yourself responsible for a stranger?"

The fair face flushed, the soft eyes were dewy with feelings, as Alice said, softly: "Because you are old and seemed poor and friendless. I was glad it was in my power to aid you. Do not think it was at any great cost," she added with a generous desire to lighten the burden of obligation. "I have some money lying idle."

"For the wedding-day, perhaps. Well, child, you might have poorer jewels to deck your bridal than an old man's tears of gratitude and love. I am getting well and shall soon leave you. Will you give me a keepsake."

The girl loosened a little locket from a chain round her throat, cut off one of her golden curls and put it in the place of some hair she took out, and laid the trinket in the old man's hand.

"With my love," she said, softly.

"Ah, child?" he sighed, "an old man sick and feeble wins little love."

"Yet," she said earnestly, "you must believe that I have nursed you since you were conscious with affection. My own father is gone, but if ever you want a daughter's care or affection, believe me, I will gladly come to you if possible."

Three days later the house was deserted. Aunt Sophy and Alice returned to their home, and Alice cheerfully paid out of her small patrimony for the board and expenses of her venerable patient.

She little guessed how deep an impression her care and tenderness had made upon the heart so long closed against human affection, so distrustful of any advances from his fellow-creatures. It was a revelation to him, this active charity to an utter stranger. He had gone to the hotel merely to see Malcolm's choice and had purposely left all clue to his identity behind him. He had intended meeting Alice, if possible, unknown and watching her unobserved; but accident had thrown them together in a way he little anticipated. The first use he made of his recovery was to write to his nephew, and Malcolm met him at the station when he returned home.

Knowing nothing of the recent accident, the young man was shocked at the change in his uncle's face.

"You have been ill?" he cried.

"Very ill."

"Why did you not send for me?"

"I had even better nursing than yours, Malcolm. Don't ask me any questions now, but tell me about your marriage preparations."

"Alice has gone home, and will remain until November. Then she comes to Mrs. Haydon's, and will buy her furniture."

"In November?"

"Yes."

Late in November she came, her trunks full of Aunt Sophy's presents, and Aunt Mary gave her a cordial greeting. A grand wedding was the display upon which the lady had set her heart, and Alice shrank a little at the comments upon the rich uncle and her own good fortune in the "first rate match."

But just before the wedding day a little note was brought to Alice by a gorgeous footman, who was driven to her aunt's behind a private carriage. The note was from Malcolm, and begged her to come to him in the carriage.

Wondering, but obedient, Alice was speedily ready, and was driven to a handsome house, where the door was opened to usher her into a stylish drawing room, where a gentleman awaited her, and Malcolm advancing said: "My Uncle Hubert, Alice?"

Kindly blue eyes looked into her own, withered hands were extended and a voice she knew well said: "We are old friends, Malcolm. Are we not, Alice?"

Then, before he could answer, the old man continued: "I thought, Alice, that it was unkind to have my nephew wait until my death before sharing my wealth. I have borne a curse of distrust in my heart for many years, thinking my money won me all the affection, save Malcolm's, that was offered me; but though you were well content to wed the young clerk and put your own patrimony into his home, you must not refuse my heir, who has accepted from me an income that makes him independent, and this house."

"My love for Malcolm can bear riches or poverty," was the answer; "but, sir, our home needs you. You will come, will you not, to the children, who will try to make life happy by loving care? Long before I knew you, Malcolm told me he hoped, when he had a home, to win you to live in it. Will you let me, too, beg of you to come to us?"

"Gladly, child! gladly?" the old man said.

"I understand now," Alice said to Malcolm, "why you wanted me to wait until after the wedding to take our house. You wanted to surprise me."

"I assure you I am surprised as you are, though it was Uncle Hubert who persuaded me to wait."

So where the rich, lonely man had feared to lose the one love of his life, he gained another tenderer, sweeter love to brighten his declining years by a daughter's devotion and affection.

Extracts from a Letter from Rome.

AUGUST 10th, 1879.

Our readers will find the following letter very interesting. It was written by a young lady tourist from this town, to a friend. Through the courtesy of this friend we have been permitted to present it to our readers. [EDS.]

In my last letter home I said I had reserved Pompeii as the subject which I intended to write you. I wish you could all have been with us when we visited the buried city.

* * *

It is thirteen miles from Naples. We drove out in carriages over a white dusty road, with a high wall each side,—nothing to be seen except when we drove through an Italian village along the route. The street life of these people is full of interest, especially in the vicinity of the macaroni manufactories, where our party verified the old saying, that if you want a good appetite you should not watch the cook. It was amusing the next night, at dinner, to see the macaroni pass untasted from one to the other nearly the whole length of the table.

* * * *

The roads of Italy are hard, white, and very dazzling in the sunshine. We were white with dust when we reached our destination. First we visited a museum of Pompeiian relics, which with the one formerly visited at Naples, gave us an excellent idea of what was found in the city and in what state of preservation. The human figures were of great interest. Here were casts of men, women and the lower animals, in just the position in which they were overtaken by death. These are obtained in a curious way. When in course of excavation the workmen strike a skeleton, an opening is carefully made to it, and a preparation, similar to plaster of Paris, poured in, which fills up the spaces between the bones. This hardens, and then they can be easily dug out from the ashes. Thus the form and position is preserved, the bones forming only an outer covering. Some had rings on their fingers, and money belts about their waists. Then there were articles of food; loaves of bread, black, but perfect in shape, (which was the same as the Italians sell on the street to-day,) wheat, prunes, and many other things which could be easily distinguished.

The most wonderful to me was a plate of egg shells, yellowish in color, but only slightly broken.

* * * *

There were also all sorts of domestic utensils and ornaments for personal wear. A number of rooms were hung with frescoes, taken from the walls of the houses, of graceful and artistic designs; the colors were as bright and fresh as if they were the work of yesterday.

The bronzes were very fine, showing a degree of perfection in the arts for which I was not prepared. Those from Pompeii were green, those from Herculaneum black. The former city was destroyed by ashes, and the latter by lava. It was the sulphuric acid with which the city was enveloped, which turned the Pompeiian bronzes green.

* * * *

Some of the mosaic pavements were exceedingly well done. One taken from the door-way of a wealthy residence, was a black dog on a white ground, with the words "Cave canem." Beware of the dog.

Seeing all these things prepared us for a visit to the city itself. I supposed it would seem like a succession of cellars, as everything of value had been removed to different museums, but it far exceeded my expectations. We first passed into a narrow street with shops on each side; walls perfect, nothing gone but the roofs. The streets were paved with broad stone flagging, which showed the deep ruts worn by the chariot wheels. At intervals were large stepping stones from one side of the street to the other.

Then we came to the wider streets and public buildings. Near the middle of the city was the Forum, with Temples all around it. The Temple of Isis we visited among others. We saw still standing the secret staircase by which the Priest used to enter the statue of Isis, which was thought to utter oracular speeches to the people, which excited their awe and reverence. There were two theatres in the city, one of tragedy and the other of comedy. The seats were arranged in a semicircular form, like the Colosseum.

There were baths for rich and poor. The Roman baths were not merely baths in our acceptation of the term, but included rooms for reading, refreshment, games, and various pleasures. The baths of Caracalla in Rome were of this description, and those at Pompeii were of the same kind, on a smaller scale.

Some of the houses must have been sumptuous. The wall decorations, mosaic pavements and marble statues still remain in some. Very few of the houses were more than one story in height.—That of Diomides, in the cellar of which several bodies were found, was two stories high, and the best in the city.—It was interesting to see the bake houses with their large ovens and the stone mills for grinding the corn.

The street of tombs was well preserved, some of the statues and sarcophagi are still standing. This was the chief entrance to the city, it being the custom of the ancients to bury their dead in handsome tombs on the road to a city, in order that strangers approaching it might be favorably impressed.

* * *

We saw some houses with bright frescoed walls, which had been unearthed within the last six weeks.

Herculaneum is a number of miles distant from Pompeii. It is not nearly so satisfactory to visit we were told, as not so much has been excavated, and it is all subterranean, the town of Risina being built on top of it. We had our fill of ruins at Rome. Our guide was an well-known archæologist, so whatever else we missed at Rome, I feel sure we saw all the ruins of any account.

The Colosseum of course, stands first and foremost. The prints give you a good idea of it. It is composed of three series of arches supporting a sort of battlement and is in different styles of architecture, as several emperors had a hand in it. One side is nearly perfect. It is a shameful fact that the Romans themselves should have destroyed it, it having been for many years common plunder to the wealthy nobles, who found it easier to take the dressed stones and iron clamps of the Colosseum, than to prepare the new material for buildings they erected.

The wild beasts were kept in dens beneath the arena, and were raised by elevators, the grooves being yet visible in which they used to run. Verily there is nothing new under the sun. I had supposed that elevators were a recent invention.

The old Roman Forum was full of interest. It is thirty feet below the present street level. Around are the ruins of temples dedicated to the gods.—One to Julius Cæsar has not been fully excavated. Underneath it his ashes are buried, having been deposited in the temple after his body had been burned in the Forum. Near by was the rostra from which Mark Antony made his famous speech at Cæsar's funeral. Also the spot where Virginius stabbed his daughter. From one of the bridges we saw the point where Horatius swam the Tiber after the destruction of the bridge.

Almost every foot of soil in Rome has its history. On the Arch of Titus, built in the year 70, to commemorate the fall of Jerusalem, were reliefs of the triumphal procession bearing the spoils of the temple; among other things represented was the seven branched candlestick.

For the Patriot.

Public Libraries and the Common Schools.

Estes & Lauriat have recently published in pamphlet form three papers on educational matters by our townsman, Charles F. Adams, Jr. The first paper discusses the Public Library and the Public Schools and was orignally read to the teachers of Quincy schools on May 19th, 1876. The second treats of Fiction in Public Libraries and educational catalogues, and was read at the third general meeting of the American Library Association at Boston, July 1st, 1879. The third discusses the New Departure in the Quincy Common Schools, and was prepared for the spring meeting of 1879, of the Association of School Committees and Superintendents of Norfolk County. Judging from internal evidence these papers were not elaborately written out but delivered off hand, though of course after due preparation, for they manifest both the excellencies and defects incident to that method. They are somewhat colloquial in manner, yet withal crisp in style, graphic, simple and eminently readable. Occasional lapses, grammatical and rhetorical and inelegances of expression will be noted. They deal with important and practical matters to which the attention of all should be called. We purpose to confine our remarks to the matter presented in papers first and second. The third paper refers to matters now comparatively an old story in our town, though of large interest to people of other towns, hence a notice of it is not so much called for in the PATRIOT.

It is supposed in some vague way that the Public Libraries are educational. Because of this supposition towns willingly appropriate large sums of money to support them. The Town Library, as an institution in Massachusetts, is nearly thirty years old, for the law, permitting appropriations for their support, dates from the year 1851. After this length of time the question of success or failure ought easily to be answered. Many, like Mr. Adams, feel that the Public Library as an educational institution, is a failure. Some have come to the conclusion, as Mr. Adams has not, that the Public Library should be abolished. In other words some claim that Public Libraries must inevitably prove failures, and hence ought not be maintained. On the contrary the author of these papers sees clearly that the difficulty exists not so much in the Public Library as in its appliances and the mental condition of its patrons. He believes and can give excellent reasons for the faith that is this, that a Public Library, rightly used, is an educational institution of vast utility.

Why are our Town Libraries comparative failures in an educational point of view? Mr. Adams gives to this question two answers. To these answers no one familiar with the matter can take exception.

1st. The Public Library in furnishing a class of books fitted only to amuse is encroaching upon the functions of the circulating libraries. He declares emphatically and justly too, that the tax payer should not be called upon to furnish amusement for the public. He would then relegate to the circulating library all books not calculated to instruct. He is not, we suppose, to be understood as urging the taking from the shelves of our Public Libraries of all works of fiction, but simply of its lower grades. The circulation would by this, he admits, be reduced one-third, but the remaining two-thirds would work far more good. I apprehend a difficulty is here to be met. Who is competent to decide what books shall be placed in our Public Libraries? The authority must abide in the trustees. Will they always agree upon the quality of a book? What will Mr. Adams say to the claim that, since the public supports the library it has a right to have its taste gratified? It is on this ground that many trustees while deploring the tastes of the public as expressed in the popular demand, purchase such books as are called for. To this formidable question Mr. Adams gives answer as follows, and in this answer he reveals the second reason why our Public Libraries are not the factor in education they ought to be. He would adopt and carry out methods to elevate the taste and judgment of the reading public. It is just here that these papers take an eminently practical turn. The children of our public schools should be taught not only to read, but how to read, and hence what to read. The fact is, as the writer of this notice, has had frequent occasion to deplore, that in most towns (Quincy is in some sense an exception) teachers without competent knowledge or skill are trying to teach elocution, i. e. the art of reading aloud for the benefit or pleasure of others.

It may justly be questioned whether teaching elocution is a proper function of the common school. The most teachers can do is to teach reading, i. e. the art of reading understandingly to one's self. Mr. Adams sees this but urges the teachers to go a step further, and become the guides of their pupils in the choice of their reading. He urges them to assist those under their care in selecting books that fit in with their studies. This is entirely practicable, though one difficulty seems to bar the way. Teachers with some exceptions are not qualified to be the guide of their pupils in this matter. However this difficulty will grow less and less if Mr. Adams advice is followed.

I have written now at far greater length than I intended, and yet not exhausted the valuable points of these papers. I trust they will be widely read and if by these words of mine the attention of any is called to them and their value I shall be abundantly satisfied.

The Quincy Patriot.
With Supplement.
SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1879.

Short communications and items of news earnestly solicited from friends and patrons.

☞ Anonymous communications are not published.

Parade of the Fire Department.

Arrangements are being made to have a grand parade by the Quincy Fire Department on Saturday next, October 4th, if the weather is pleasant.

All the companies in the town have voted to turn out except the Chemical Engine Company of Wollaston Heights.

At a meeting of the Engineers and Committees of the several companies, held on Saturday evening last, the following arrangements were made:—

The several companies were to report promptly at 1 o'clock, P. M., to the Engineers in the Square, near the Stone Temple, where a line will be formed in the following order:

Police.
Engineer and Assistants.
Music.
Vulture Engine Company, No. 4.
Hook and Ladder Company.
Music.
W. M. French Hose Company, No. 1.
Music.
Granite Engine Company, No. 3.
Music.
Tiger Engine Company, No. 2.
Citizens.

The route of procession laid out by the Engineers, is as follows:—Down Hancock street to Adams Academy, countermarching up Hancock street to School, through School to Franklin, down Franklin to Water, through Water to Quincy Avenue, down the Avenue to Elm, through Elm to Washington, up Washington to the Square, where they will be reviewed by Chief Engineer, John W. Hall and his Assistants.

After the review the companies will have a chance to try their engines in the following order:—1st, Vulture; 2d, Granite; 3d, Tiger. Each engine to draft water from the reservoir near the Stone Temple, and play through 250 feet of hose, and the time allowed is twenty minutes. No one except the Engineers and Judges to be allowed inside the line.

TEMPLE OF HONOR. On Wednesday evening a number of members of Granite Temple of Honor, paid a visit to Bro. George W. Penniman at Wollaston. The evening was most pleasantly passed by those in attendance. Music, social converse and various games, with Prof. Bird and his famous tricks of legerdemain, served to pass away the early portion of the evening; at 9.30 o'clock Charles A. Follett, P. W. C. T. of the Temple, presented Mr. and Mrs. Penniman, in behalf of Granite Temple, with an elegant silver castor, engraved in the most artistic manner. The company were then invited to partake of an abundant collation, after grace had been said by Rev. Samuel Kelley. During the evening Mrs. C. F. P. Clifford, of Boston, was present and her presence and entertainments were no small feature of the evening's pleasures.

SOUTH QUINCY GOSSIP. With politics and the grocery business things are looking prosperous in the South District and the experience of last year has taught the followers of Gen. Butler a valuable lesson, and the records of the various meetings of this year will not be stolen as easy as they were last. Mr. Frederick Hardwick has this week purchased and placed in his store a large-sized safe to be used expressly for the storage of his various credentials to conventions and political books and papers in general. It is also rumored that he has purchased new curtains for his windows containing a life-sized portrait of the next Governor of Massachusetts.

CORRECTED. We learn that Mr. Thos. Doyle, who resides on Brackett street, deserves the credit of finding the body of Mr. Jas. McDonald, who was drowned last week in Blackscreek. He was in the vicinity of the creek when the boat upset, and hearing of the accident, went immediately to lend what assistance he could. Others had tried to find the body but were unable, and so he thought he would try his skill. Hopping into a boat near by, owned by Mr. Samuel Gregory, he soon was grappling in the mysteries of the deep. Fortunately his labors were soon rewarded by raising the body to the surface, and was about removing it to the shore, when the life boat and its noble crew arrived.

NEWPORT. The Old Colony Railroad carried a large excursion party to Newport on Saturday last. Among the visitors from this town were noticed the following persons: Dr. J. H. Gilbert, W. M. French, John W. Nash, Lewis W. Richardson, W. A. Moseley, Edmund Pope Harvey Whicher, G. Fred. Wilson, John Q. and Thomas H. McDonnell, A. R. Wixon, C. Kelcher, Jr., Henry L. Souther, Daniel K. Flint and daughter, G. W. Prescott, wife and daughter, Mrs. M. E. Green and Mrs. Geo. J. Jones.

One of the attactive sights in Newport is the elegant turnouts. The horses and carriages are splendid. The English traveling carriages were very attractive.

HOME AGAIN. After a few months of enjoyable traveling through different parts of Europe, Charles H. Hardwick and daughter arrived at their home on Tuesday morning last. Their trip has been a very pleasant one and they are looking quite well considering the large amount of traveling they have done during their absence.

LAND SALE. At the foreclosure sale of mortgaged real estate by the trustees under the will of Thomas Hollis, 18 1-2 acres of land in East Milton was sold to Nathaniel H. Beals for $10,000.

Local Items.

☞ Jack Frost was seen early yesterday morning.

☞ Only one death for the week ending yesterday morning.

☞ The National Granite Bank has declared a dividend of three per cent.

☞ There are a great many good things in the supplement to-day.

☞ Nine ladies and two gentlemen were confirmed at Christ Church on Thursday evening.

☞ Mrs. Thomas Moore, of Kansas City, formerly of this town, is visiting her friends in this place.

☞ A grand time is anticipated next Saturday afternoon. Four bands of music are expected.

☞ A synopsis of Rev. Mr. Wilson's lecture on amusements will be found in our columns.

☞ The Vultures have invited the Actives to accompany them in the parade next Saturday.

☞ A very interesting letter on Pompeii, written by a lady of this town can be found on the first page.

☞ The Hook and Ladder Company have a special meeting on Monday evening.

☞ The Tiger Engine Company have secured the service of the Weymouth Band for the parade.

☞ On the next page will be found Rev. Mr. Perry's lecture on paper money.

☞ Miss S. H. Hussey has just received a fresh stock of millinery goods of the latest styles.

☞ During the present week our schools have had visitors from Washington, Virginia, and New York.

☞ We are pleased to see Dr. Underwood out once more. He has been sick for about two months, and has suffered severely with rheumatism.

☞ The last lecture of the course on the money question will be given by Rev. Mr. Perry to-morrow evening. Topic "The Greenbacks." All are invited.

☞ Edwin B. Saville of St. Joseph, Missouri, brother of George Saville, made his friends in this town a flying visit on Friday of last week.

☞ The W. M. French Hose Company have a meeting this evening to decide what music they will employ on Saturday.

☞ The lawn and flowers in this vicinity are beautiful, but Jack Frost is coming and will soon, too soon, give them a nip.

☞ Mr. H—— wishes to be informed why Quincy coal dealers charge their customers fifty cents per ton more for coal than Boston and Neponset prices.

☞ The Torrent Engine Company of Hingham have accepted an invitation from the Tiger Company to parade with them on Saturday.

☞ What fruit is more tempting to the palate than the luscious grape? For a generous treat of this splendid fruit we return our thanks to Mr. Nathaniel Nightingale.

☞ Mrs. Ebenezer B. Hersey will please accept our thanks for a basket of fine Bartlett pears. They were the largest and handsomest that we have seen this season.

☞ Charles A. Foster and E. E. Williamson, Esqs., have been delegated by the Republican State Central committee, to speak in behalf of the Republican candidates for state offices.

☞ The Butcher Boys of Braintree have been invited by the Granite Engine Company to turn out with them at the parade on Saturday next. Sixty of them it is said, will be present.

☞ Geo. W. B. Taylor has been appointed a public weigher and he is having erected on his land just south of the Wollaston Hotel, a pair of large scales, which will be ready for use next week.

☞ Mr. John Ramsdell of Atlantic, was injured last week while riding, and has since been confined to the house.—His horse became frightened by the breaking of the whiffletree bolt.

☞ The Woman's C. T. Union held its first weekly session on Thursday, since July 24th. The meeting was a very pleasant one, and there was quite a large attendance.

☞ The Spaulding Bell Ringers gave a grand entertainment at the Town Hall on Tuesday evening last and had a full house to welcome them. The concert was superb.

☞ The steam pump is to be worked a little next Saturday. We learn that it will try and supply the three engines with all the water they can get away with.

☞ There will be evening services in the First Church throughout the present season. On the first and third Sunday evenings of the month there will be vespers, and on the other Sunday evenings practical lectures.

☞ Mrs. George Nightingale, a lady who has just entered her eighty-fourth year visited the schools this week. Having been a teacher in her younger days, she no doubt realized the great change made in the system.

☞ Owing to the ill health of Mr. Jesse Bunton, one of the members of the firm of the late O. T. Roger & Co., the granite quarry and complete establishment on Willard street is offered for sale. Some of the finest granite in the country has been quarried at this ledge.

☞ George H. Locke, our prompt and reliable Collector of taxes, has been very successful the past few weeks in gathering in the taxes. Of the $98,894 given him to collect, we learn he has reaped a harvest of $77,000. Nearly all of it was collected in about ten days.

☞ At the Probate court held at Hyde Park, on Wednesday, Edward Southworth, guardian of Fannie B. Southworth, was granted leave to sell real estate in Quincy. Edward J. Thomas was appointed administrator of estate of James Adlington of Quincy. Bond $700.

District Court.

The Court room was crowded last Monday morning with spectators. Seldom have we seen a larger assembly. The cause was partly owing to the shooting of Mr. George M. Harris in Quincy, on Saturday evening last, and the stabbing of Mr. James Welch at Randolph on the same evening. Intoxicating liquors was probably the cause of the assault in Randolph, but in Quincy it was accidental, and arose from a fracas between the union men and a "scab." The following is the court record for the week:—

William Duggin of Quincy, on complaint of N. B. Furnald for keeping a nuisance. For want of evidence was discharged.

James Smith of Randolph, was arraigned for an assault on James Welch. It appeared by the evidence that Smith was a peaceable colored inhabitant of Randolph, and was quietly passing along the street when he was attacked by Welch, who has one wooden leg, but by the evidence he is a very powerful man. To get clear of him Smith stabbed him in the leg, (not the wooden one,) and back of his head. Judge Bumpus after listening very carefully to the evidence felt it his duty to bind him over to appear before the Grand Jury in the sum of $1500.

Richard King, of Quincy, was arrested for an assault on George M. Harris, G. F. Wilson's clerk, with a loaded pistol. It appeared by the evidence that Mr. King had spent several hours in Mr. Costello's saloon and soon after eleven o'clock started for home. On leaving the saloon he was assailed by three or four persons who called him a scab, and hit him several times with a brick or something else, cutting a severe gash in the back of his head. Having been attacked a few weeks since by union men, he had recently provided a pistol for self-protection. On Saturday evening he drew the pistol from his pocket, and threatened to shoot his assailants if they did not keep away, and admits that he fired one shot before he was seized by Officer Garrity, but he fired at the ground simply to frighten his pursuers. When taken by the officer he did not know who the man was, nor was not told by the officer, and in attempting to free himself the pistol was twice accidently discharged. The second shot hit Mr. Harris, who was standing on the sidewalk, ten to twenty feet away, who had taken no part in the affray, but on hearing an outcry had come to see, and we are sorry to say he felt more than he saw. Dr. Sherman was immediately called, who dressed the wounds as well as he could, but did not attempt to remove the ball. He found that it had entered the leg just below the knee joint and was embedded one or more inches. Dr. Gilbert was called the next morning and on examining the wound advised him to be taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, which was accordingly done. We learn that the doctors at the hospital could not find the ball and have decided to let it remain. Mr. Harris is quite comfortable and will probably be out in a few days.

Judge Bumpus decided to hold King in the sum of $700 for his appearance before the Grand Jnry on the first Monday in December next.

Dennis Mahoney, of Braintree, was complained of by Constable Locke for being drunk and disturbing the peace. On the first complaint the Defendent was fined $3 and costs; and on the second $10 and costs.

Thomas W. Ford, of Braintree, for breaking and disturbing the peace at said Braintree. Plead guilty and was fined $3 and costs.

Timothy Sullivan, of Braintree, was arraigned for threatening to commit an assault on one Josie O'Brien after a partial examination by associate Justice Pratt the case was continued until this morning the defendent being required to recognize with surety for his appearance at that time. William F. Locke of Braintree was accepted as surety in the sum of two hundred dollars.

James Whalen, of Milton, for an assault on one Martin Gibbons. Plead not guilty and the case was continued to Monday next.

James Sullivan, of Braintree, for an assault on William F. Locke. Plead guilty and was fined $10 and costs, amounting to $16.80.

John Delorey, of Quincy, for larceny of a wagon belonging to John W. Bartlet of Weymouth. After hearing numerous witnesses the case was continued until this Saturday morning.

GLASS BALL SHOOT. The Merry Mount shooting club had a glass ball shoot in Quincy Woods, last Saturday. The shooting was at five balls, at each distance, with the following result:—

	Single 18 yds.	Rotary 18 yds.	Double 15 yds.	Total.
Thomas Curtis,	4	3	7	14
John Curtis, 2d,	3	4	7	14
W. Mitchell,	3	5	6	14
E. Hardwick,	4	4	5	13
Albert Keating,	3	4	5	12
S. H. Spear,	3	5	4	12
Chas. L. Prescott,	3	2	3	8
Perez Chubbuck,	2	5	1	8
H. O. Studley,	3	3	1	7
F. Curtis,	2	3	0	5

BEREAVEMENT. A young and bright-eyed little son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Ryan of the west part of the town, died on Wednesday morning last, after a few days sickness, and as he was the only child the loss will be keenly felt by his parents. His funeral occurred on Thursday and was largely attended by the relatives and friends, who sympathize with the parents in their hours of affliction.

MUSICAL INSTRUCTION. It will be seen by referring to another column that Mr. Henri Perabeau, organist of St. John's Church, is prepared to give lessons on the organ, and those receiving instructions under him will have the privilege of practicing on the large and beautiful organ at that church. To those desirous of securing a competent teacher, we take pleasure in introducing a gentleman who comes highly recommended.

CHRIST CHURCH. Bishop Paddock visited this church, Thursday evening, and confirmed eleven of its members. He delivered a very eloquent lecture, and the ceremony of confirmation was very beautiful and impressive.

The Strike.---Its Cause.

One who signs himself CONTRACTOR, makes the statement that the formation of the Stone Cutters International Union culminated in a strike last year, and that bitterness and hatred existing between union and non-union men caused present trouble. In your issue of the 20th inst., the Secretary of the G. C. I. Union says that the cause of the strike last year was the action of the contractors in reducing the prices so low that mechanics could not make one dollar per day. We have taken some pains to ascertain the truth of this statement, so as to be able to inform the public, as nearly as perhaps may be, of the real difference between the prices paid before the panic of 1873, and those on the present Bill of Prices.

It is generally admitted by the stonecutters that the prices on the present bill average no higher than did the prices paid by the contractors of Quincy just before the strike of last year, some firms paying higher and others lower wages, making about the average of the present bill. Admitting this to be true, we arrive at the following conclusions:—Allowing that the average good mechanic earned four dollars per day from 1862 to 1873—the highest prices paid as taken from the books of one of the firms, equals 100, the present bill equals 63 by comparison; or, in other words, if the mechanic earned four dollars per day at the higher scale, he would earn two dollars and fifty-two cents per day at the present bill of prices, and about the same amount before the strike of 1878.

We will have the charity to suppose that the Secretary made the one dollar statement from general rumor, and not from comparison of different scales of prices. It would be well for him to inform himself before making any more such statements.

"Contractor" was evidently in the wrong when he stated that bitterness and hatred between union and non-union men was the cause of the present trouble, for the Secretary emphatically denies it, and he ought to know. He says it was the scab. It would be well to employ some scientific man to analyze this subject called "scab," as the public generally fail to see the difference between the non-union man and the scab. Cannot the Secretary or Contractor give us some light on the subject? The Secretary informs us that he knows a number of non-union men that dislike scabs and he knows a number of contractors that dislike scab as much as he does, but yet he accuses them of having scabs—which seems bad for the contractors. Perhaps the Board of Health should be informed of the presence of these dangerous characters in town in order to avert some future calamity. If this dire disease should be allowed to spread it might cause the destruction of the union, or the election of General Butler.

We noticed an article in the Globe by "Union Cutter," in reply to "Contractor." The writer evidently labored under excitement and did not stop to consider that personal abuse and the printing of private correspondence added no weight to his arguments. He should also be a little more careful as to the identity of the subject of his abuse, as he might find out his mistake after making himself ridiculous, and there the laugh might come in.

We have no desire to enter into personal controversy with either party, but would be much pleased if we could do anything to promote harmony between the employer and the employed. We fully recognize the fact that capital is the product of labor, for labor is the primary agent in supplying human wants. Even the spontaneous productions of the earth cannot be made available without it. Indispensable, however, as labor is, it is comparatively powerless to supply the need of civilized life unaided by capital. We therefore consider it the duty of all good men who have the welfare of the community at heart, to do all in their power to promote harmony between capital and labor, between the employer and the employed. Let capital and labor co-operate and they will produce the greatest good to the greatest number.

Now let the little scab business be settled, and go to work like men, one party to make a good living by his labor, and the other a fair percentage by his business, and the good people of the town of Quincy will rejoice at the result.

Braintree.

Spaulding's Bell-ringers gave an entertainment at the Town Hall on Monday evening. A large audience were present and expressed their satisfaction by enthusiastic applause. The company well deserve the reputation they have as thorough musicians. The cornet solo by Georgie Dean Spaulding was superb, and alone worth the price of admission. All lovers of music, vocal or instrumental, should hear them.

On Monday night as the midnight train from Boston had nearly reached the Braintree depot, a man was discovered lying between the inward and outward track. The train was stopped as soon as possible and the unfortunate man was taken up in a dying condition. It is supposed that he was asleep and in raising himself from his position was struck by the engine or cars. He was identified as Robert Dee, a resident of Braintree. He leaves a wife and children.

MAGAZINE FOR CHILDREN. The Nursery for October is brim full of good things which will delight the little folks, and is very handsomely printed. Mr. Shorey's treasury seems to be inexhaustible, and the wonder is how he can give his young readers so many and so fine illustrations and such excellent reading month after month. It is no wonder that the Nursery is such a favorite with young and old alike. For sale at Souther's periodical store.

Pompey on the Political Question.

To the Publishers of the Patriot:

Having noticed in the PATRIOT last week, Sambo's idea of Gen. Butler, I should be pleased to have you give Pompey's sentiments on the question:—

"Well, well, Pompey I am surprised to hear that you are going to stand by the Republican party, and vote against General Butler. I always supposed you were a man of principle, and loved reform."

"Jist dat, Mr. Smith, de principle and fear of j'ining hands wid de wicked, keeps me away from dat old reprobate General Butler, and all his speckled crew, dat follow him, some I 'spec's because dey don't know any better, and some because dey are hungry for the spoils of office."

"Pompey, who has been filling your head with such nonsense? Don't you know that Ben. Butler is going to make a model reform Governer and that all evil-doing will be put a stop to, when we elect him?"

"Golly, Mr. Smith, what are you t'inking of? Why, when Gen. Butler sets out as a reformer, it is like de debbil setting out on a campaign against sin. De idea of it makes dis nigger laugh. If Ben. Butler hab got de spirit of reform in him, why didn't he show it, when he was in Congress? Was dere any kind of debblish scrape or disgraceful job, in de houses ob Congress, dat Ben. Butler wasn't ring-leader in? If dere was Mr. Smith, dis nigger neber heard of it. No sah, dis nigger declines to hab any Ben. Butler in his political coffee."

"Now, Pompey, you know I have always thought a good deal of you, in fact I have loved you like a brother, and I can't bear to see you stick to that old humbug, the Republican party, when you might join the grand Butler Combination Troupe. Don't you remember, that far-seeing statesman, broad-minded patriot, and classic orator, Denis Kearney, thought a great deal of Ben. Butler?"

"Why, Mr. Smith, you're crazy to talk so about de merits ob dat unprincipled leader of your's. But even if his character war as white as de driven snow, instead of being blacker dan de blackest charcoal, he would be no candidate ob mine. He represents no principle, but dat ob unscrupulous self-seeking, dat is to say, no steady and abiding principle, for he hab changed from democrat to 'publican, and then from 'publican to independent, all in de hope ob getting into the Governor's chair, and den into the Presidency. Jist now, he am de leader of de greenbackers, who want to set back de wheel ob progress, frow dis country into de sea of uncertainty and wild speculation. To elect Gen. Butler, would be to gib hope and encouragement to de Greenback element, throughout de country. Dey hab jist had a licking down in Maine, and we mean to repeat de punishment in Ohio, and in Massachusetts, for de greenbackers if dey had dere way, would hab prevented resumption, and any kind of financial reform. Plenty ob paper money, dey want, even if it ain't good for anyt'ing, and when dey see de country starting out on a career ob prosperity and happiness, by de aid ob a sound, gold-based currency, and plentiful crops, why dey feel mad, for it shows dat in de past, dey hab been all wrong, and dat if de nation am doing well, business picking up, and labor improving, it is in spite ob, and against de efforts ob de Greenbackers, instead ob being through dere aid or instrumentality."

"Why, Pompey, you are getting eloquent, you would have been a valuable aid to the honest money cause in Maine. But I see there is no hope of ringing you in to support Uncle Ben."

"No, sah, dis darkie hab got his eyes open, and will frow his ballot for Long and Weston."

The Drama.

BOSTON, Sept. 25, 1879.

Last Saturday evening the Stock Company of the Museum appeared for the first time in the melodrama of the "Two Orphans," and notwithstanding that it is some time since its last production here I shall assume that theatre goers remember the piece and its argument, it contains many of the ingredients of the old-timed melodrama, and is one of the most harrowing and repulsive of its kind,—powerful I admit and skilfully constructed,—that audiences should laugh at the brutal savageness of La Frouchard, or the wit at the expense of virtue in the 2d tableau, are subjects of reflection for the moralist, and exhibits a lack of sympathetic pity and an indifference to what is base in the social system.—The piece has lost none of its drawing power, as shown by the audience at the Museum on Saturday evening, filling every seat and all available standing room. To those who perchance saw it for the first time, its true character was not fully represented by the Museum company; their conception on the whole being a weak one when compared with that of the Union Square and Boston Theatre companies, as heretofore. This no doubt, was in a measure due to a first performance, and improvement will undoubtedly appear in subsequent representations, but I opine that this company will never achieve enviable success in this or any piece of a like character, for they are out of their line. The "Two Orphans" will be given Saturday night and during next week, when I will particularize as regards the cast.

The engagement of "Kit" at the Boston, terminates Saturday night. He has enjoyed his usual run of big business and will probably give an "Arkansas yell" and "take a drink" of satisfaction at the close. The question has been asked, "Is Pinafore dead?" Not being gifted with piercing the dim futurity and solving things impossible, I give it up. Doubtful things are always uncertain.—We have had Pinafore in all sorts and conditions of men, and women too, for that matter, as a British curiosity at the Museum, with rice (a big R) at the Globe, at the Parks, (several kinds), with and without Church Choirs, big, little, and middlin', comely and homely, with and without water, for they showed the black bottle at the Boston.

Next week we shall have it—Pinafore—at the Boston Theatre with the Home Opera Company. In the cast, Adalaide Phillips is to do the Buttercup; M. C. Whitney, Captain C.; H. C. Barnabee, Sir Joseph; W. H. Fessenden, Rack Straw; Geo. Frothingham, Dead-Eye; Misses Beebe and Cayvan, Josephine and Hebe.

"Palace of Truth" at the Park did not prove a draw, and it was wisely withdrawn for Gilbert's "Engaged," in which the company appear to the best advantage. Next week, "On Bail," still another of Gilbert's plays, will be performed for the first time in America, so read the bills.

"Zola, the Circus Rider," at the Gaiety, is a conglomeration of old time stage clap-trap, weak, inconsistent, incoherent, stupid in the extreme. Fortunate for the house, its stay is limited to this week. Next week, Gus Williams and "Our German Senator," a new play,—Manager Wentworth thinks he has a good thing in it,—"Sijamas," and the Lingard Folly Company, at the Dudley street Opera House.

"Fatinitza" follows Pinafore at the Boston.

"The Great Baby Crying Match between the Mac's and the O's," is the attraction at the Howard.

The Globe Theatre and land have been leased to John Stetson for a term of years and he is preparing for opening.

REGATTAS.

A regatta by the yachts of the third class belonging to the Quincy Yacht Club, took place last Monday afternoon, off Houghs Neck. Vice Commodore Nicholson of the club offered a beautiful silk pennant as a prize. The following is a summary of the races:—

Name and Owner,	Actual Time H. M. S.	Corrected Time H. M. S.
Nattie, W. H. Nicholson,	1 25 11	58 42
Imp, G. C. Adams,	1 26 04	59 53
Elmer, P. Chubbuck,	1 26 20	1 00 47
Dandelion, J. Q. Adams,	1 27 06	1 01 38
Dolly Varden, A. B. Cleverly,	1 28 20	1 01 58

The course was a six mile one, and the judges were Commodore H. A. Keith and Capt. Peter B. Turner.

The Nattie owned by Vice Commodore Nicholson, was the winner of the prize.

On Saturday last, the Dorchester Yacht Club sailed its fifty-third regatta. Thirty yachts were entered, and they were divided into four classes. Among the winners of prizes were the Rocket, B. F. Bass, and the Nattie, W. H. Nicholson, both of the Quincy Yacht Club. These boats took first and second prizes in the fourth class. The Wildfire, H. A. Keith, was also among the competitors.

The long talked of race between cat-rigged boats for a sweepstakes and championship of New England waters, took place Friday, Sept. 19th, at 11 A. M., off City Point, South Boston, over the course of the South Boston Yacht Club, 9 1-2 miles in length. It was not desired to make the stakes so large as to give the event the appearance of anything but a contest for the gratification of knowing which was the fastest craft, hence they were merely nominal. The race was for boats twenty feet and under on the water line, with working mainsail only, and no shifting of ballast. The following is the result:—

Name and Owner,	Length. ft. in.	Actual Time.	Corrected Time.
Rocket, B. F. Bass,	15 05	2 47 14	2 30 06
Fancy, P. Grant, Jr.,	19 01	2 43 20	2 31 54
Wave Crest, H. Hutchings	18 10	2 47 54	2 36 10
Herald, W. B. Smith,	19 04	2 50 07	2 37 02
Peri, Geo. Lee,	18 06	2 49 14	2 37 04
Rita, H. Rechor,	20 00	2 50 27	2 38 40
Sea Mew, G. Howe,	18 06	2 54 14	2 40 09

It will be seen by the above figures that the Rocket, owned by Mr. Benjamin F. Bass of this town, won the race.

SHIPPING. Schooner Hector, Capt. Daniel Higgins arrived at Quincy Point on the 18th inst., from Baltimore, loaded with coal for Cyrus Patch and the Citizen's Gas light Company.

Schooner Gussie Wilson, Capt. Floyd, sailed on the 25th inst., for Philadelphia, with granite from Messrs. Barker & Sons and others.

FIREMEN!

ATTENTION.

AT a meeting held Sept. 20th, of the Board of Engineers, and Committees of the several Companies hereinafter mentioned, it was voted that a parade of the Quincy Fire Department take place Oct. 4th, 1879, provided the same be a fair day; if stormy the parade to be postponed to the Saturday following, namely, Oct. 11th. The several companies to report in the Square, to the Board of Engineers at 1 P. M., sharp.

The Foreman or Representative of the several Companies having drawn for position in playing, the same to be the order of procession, and the line will be formed as follows:—Vulture Engine Company, No. 4; Hook and Ladder Company, No. 1; W. M. French Hose Company, No. 1; Granite Engine Company, No. 3; Tiger Engine Company, No. 2.

After the parade and review, Engines Nos. 4, 3 and 2, will play in the order mentioned.

The engines to play from the reservoir near the Unitarian Church; the stream to be played in the direction of the Congregational Church.

Each engine to play through 250 feet of hose the same hose to be used by all engines, unless rendered unfit through bursting; and to be allowed to use any nozzle they wish. The flood gates of the engines not to be opened while playing.

Each company to be allowed 20 minutes to haul in and play; no allowance to be made for breakage.

The nozzle of the pipe to be placed at a bar, and in no case to be allowed beyond it.

Two widths of sheathing paper will be placed under the direction of the Judges, and no water outside of the paper will be measured.

Each company to be allowed a Judge who may be present during the playing of their respective engine.

The Board of Engineers to appoint three Judges whose decision shall be final.

No persons except the Judges and Engineers shall be allowed within the enclosure during the playing of the engines.

The Chief Engineer will appoint a suitable person to fire the gun.

That the matter as regards the Hook and Ladder and Hose Companies, be left with the Board of Engineers.

The route of procession to be laid out by the Board of Engineers.

With Supplement.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1879.

Some Unthought-of Statistics.

The Boston Transcript thus groups together some statistics of the kind which almost everbody might know if one took time to think of them. Allowing two square feet to each person, the entire population of Boston could stand on the public garden, with a good deal of room to spare. The population of the United States could stand in Boston proper (not including Brighton, Dorchester, and West Roxbury). The entire population of the world (now estimated at 1,440,000,000) could stand on the island of Martha's Vineyard, or in the space occupied by the towns of Boston, Brookline, Newton Needham, Dedham, Hyde Park and Milton. The State of Massachusetts would in this way accommodate seventy times the present population of the world. The entire population of the world, placed side by side, and allowing two feet to each person, would encircle the earth twenty times. The States of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, taken together, are as large as England. Any one of the States of Georgia, Illinois, Iowa and North Carolina is as large as England. Kansas is as large as England and Scotland together. Ireland is about the size of Maine. France is more than twice as large as England, Wales and Scotland together. Texas is thirty-five times as large as Massachusetts, or as large as Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Ohio and Indiana combined. The entire population of the United States could be provided for in the State of Texas, allowing each man, woman and child four acres of land. The entire population of the world could be provided for in the United States, allowing each person one and a half acres of land.

An Electric Storm.

The United States Signal Station at Pike's Peak is the highest signal station in the world; it is also the highest inhabited portion of the globe. It was opened in the month of September, 1873. A correspondent says: "A government office at Pike's Peak is no sinecure, for the officer must buffet all storms and brave all weathers. Occasionally an electric storm visits the Peak. There is but little thunder accompanying these storms, but the mountain seems all on fire. Sergeant Choate informs me that when he was out observing one of these storms it appeared that the whole mountain-top wa: a sheet of electric flame. It came out of every rock and darted around him, and as he expressed it, shot down his back and darted out of each boot-toe, and so completely filled him with electricity that he could not retain his foothold, but bounded and rebounded from the rocks like a rubber ball; he felt as though a powerful electric battery was pouring fiery darts all through him, and deeming 'discretion the better part of valor,' he bounded into the signal station for preservation."

RAPID SETTLEMENT OF PUBLIC LANDS. The amount of public land entered for homestead settlement in the year ending June 30, 1879, was a trifle over 6,000,000 acres, or an area a little greater than that of the State of New Hampshire, and considerably larger than that of New Jersey. The average number of acres taken by each homestead settler, as shown by the entries of the last ten years, is 120; unsettled public lands in the United States, therefore, received a population of least 50,000 during the last ten months under the operation of the homestead law alone. The real accession probably far exceeded 100,000 persons.

NAILS. Many persons are puzzled to understand what the terms "fourpenny," "sixpenny," and "tenpenny" means as applied to nails. "Fourpenny" means four pounds to the thousand nails, or "sixpenny" means six pounds to the thousand, and so on. It is an old English term, and meant at first "ten pound" nails (the thousand being understood), but the old English clipped it to "tenpun," and from that it degenerated until "penny" was substituted for "pounds." When a thousand nails weigh less than one pound they are called tacks, brads, etc., and are reckoned by ounces.—Scientific American.

Budget of Fun.

☞ The latest case of a man sticking to his "colors" was that of a man who sat down on his own paint pot.

☞ There is one field of labor a woman can never enter—collecting bills;—for a woman's work is never dun."

☞ Why should we prefer renting a distillery to owing one? Of two evils choose the least (leased.)

☞ The great trouble with professional ball clubs is to find a pitcher that will hold water—only.—New Haven Register.

☞ A smart schoolboy says it takes thirteen letters to spell cow, and proves it thus: "See O! double you."

☞ Don't linger where "your love lies dreaming." Wake her up and tell her to get the breakfast.

☞ In the vegetable race, who ever saw the tomato ketchup.—Ex.

We've seen it, sur,-pass the fiery pepper, by a lap, in the first heat.—Brookline Chronicle.

☞ He has five girls, and he vows they shan't have no fellers around them; so he takes each one in turn every Sunday afternoon and rubs her teeth with an onion, and as he quietly remarks:—"None of 'em ever has a beau a second time."

☞ A man wearing wet clothes, and carrying a fishing-rod and basket, stopped a train on the Erie Railroad by giving a danger signal. "What's the matter?" the conductor asked. The man coolly replied that he had caught an enormous trout, and thought the passengers might like to take a look at it.

☞ "Edward," said Mr. Rice, "what do I hear?—that you have disobeyed your grandmother, who told you just now not to jump down these steps?"—"Grandma didn't tell us not to, papa; she only came to the door and said, 'I wouldn't jump down those steps, boys;' and I shouldn't think she would—an old lady like her!"

☞ "This, dear children, is the shoe of a Chinese lady; see how little it is; what a very narrow sole it has." "I'll bet it ain't as narrow as Deacon—'s. Father says his soul will fall through a crack in the floor some day and get lost," was the shrill comment of a boy given to sharp listening. The Superintendent put the Chinese shoe in his pocket and requested the school to sing. "Pull for the Shore."—New Haven Register.

☞ "Well my little boy," said a clergyman, patting a little boy on the head, "what do you expect to be when you grow up?"

"Dunno," answered the boy bashfully.

"What would you like to be then?" continued the pastor expecting the youngster to say he would like to be President of the United States.

But the boy's ambition soared higher than that, for he blurted out,

"I'd like to be a walker, an' wax Weston."

Keep the Dwellings Dry.

A warm and dry atmosphere is not unwholesome, but when cloudy or rainy weather brings a sultry air which dampens everything around us, the atmosphere may be loaded with the germs of disease, and the warmth from a fire is needed to destroy them. The walls, the ceiling, and floors of apartments should never be allowed to become damp.—Sometimes, when the warmth of the air is oppressive, fire is more necessary to preserve health than it is at another season to protect us from the warmth of winter; and the rooms of a dwelling should never be left without means of warming and drying.

Investigations have shown that some of the most fatal diseases are caused by the germs of vegetable and animal life, and that a humid atmosphere is most favorable to their propagation. It is, therefore, neglecting not to avail ourselves of the great discoveries of the age, and failing to protect ourselves from scourges which so fearfully afflict families, when we ignore the dangers around us. Apartments exposed to the full action of the sun may be less comfortable in hot weather than those from which the sun's ray's are excluded, but they are more wholesome; and when contagious diseases prevail in closely built cities, it is found that the inmates of houses on the side of the street exposed to the sun are less liable to be attacked; while the greatest number of sick are always found where there is the least exposure to the greatest disinfector—the sun.

SUPPLEMENT.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 27, 1879.

☞ Now that the season has passed, it may be noted that the travel to the Vineyard, and that region, has not only been greater the present year than ever before, but that travel thither has been more steady, and not so much in crowds as in other years. Getting home again, however, is another affair, and we have it on the best of authority that on the Monday after "illumination" seventy-five car loads of passengers were taken from the Vineyard by the Old Colony road. This is a great number and betokens a business growing and important. The established operations of the Old Colony road are taking on more and more of consequence every year.—Memorial.

SALARIES. H. J. Jewett, president of the Erie railway, has a salary of $40,000 a year; Tom Scott, president of seven railroads, draws $100,000 salary, $24,000 from the Pennsylvania road alone; J. W. Garrett, president of the Baltimore and Ohio, has a nominal salary of $4,000 a year. There are to-day 15 general managers of railways in the United States, whose salaries run from $10,000 to $15,000; nine general superintendents, with a salary of $7,000 to $10,000 yearly, and a number of officers in the same rank who receive over $8,000 apiece.

☞ The President receives about a bushel of letters every day, most of which are based on the assumption that the White House is an intelligence office. He is asked all manner of questions, and the stream of inquiries seem endless.—Letters from Europe inquire about relatives in this country. Others ask as to the financial standing of business men in Washington, for statistics about intemperance and immorality, and one writer lately had the assurance to ask the President to name the man he would prefer as his successor.

THE MARCH OF INTELLECT. A young lady at home from a boarding-school for the holidays, was asked if she would have some more roast beef, when she replied, "No, I thank you; gastronomical satiety admonishes me that I have arrived at the ultimate stage of deglutition consistent with dietetic integrity!" The young lady was never asked if she would have anything more again.

A. T. STEWART'S FORTUNE. The fortune of A. T. Stewart — of quicker growth than that of Astor—was accumulated in one lifetime. At Mr. Stewart's death in 1876, it was estimated at $80,000,000 or twice the amount of the highest estimate of John Jacob Astor's fortune when he died in 1848.

☞ There are between 11,000 and 12,000 retail grocers and country storekeepers in the six New England States. The most important wholesale distributing point is, of course, Boston, and some fifty wholesale grocery houses are located here, employing a capital of not far from $8,000,000.

☞ A prominent gentleman at New Bedford, who lost an important engagement at Newport, by the delay in starting a train on the Old Colony railroad, has entered a suit against the corporation, claiming damages to the amount of one thousand dollars.

☞ Alderman Sisson, of New Bedford, harvested two thousand four hundred bushels of potatoes this season, from five and a half acres of land. He used no Paris green, or other poison on the vines, but kept the bugs down solely by hand picking.

☞ There is a movement in Paris to do away with the wearing of gloves. It is argued that as a small hand, like a small foot, is generally the sign of aristocratic descent, there is no reason why it be concealed within a vulgar integument.

FASHION. A phase of fashionable life in Newport is shown by the following advertisement in a local paper:—"Miss Thompson, from New York, shapes and polishes ladies' finger nails at their residence. Rate per visit, $1, etc."

☞ Cleopatra's Needle, as a gift to New York, has received the confirmation of the new Khedive; the apparatus for removal and shipment have been sent over to Egypt, and by January the needle is expected in New York.

Teach Your Boys a Trade.

Some parents have an idea that when they have spent a sufficient amount of money in giving their boys an education, they have performed all that is required of them. Education alone will not make a living, and as a contemporary remarks, the hod-carrier is better off than the educated man without a trade who has to depend upon his labor for a living. Some clerks make a very good living, but the number of those depending on that class of employment out of work, is much greater than among the trades. A good mechanic can almost always command a situation. If a boy has talent he will rise in his trade, and instead of working by the day, will set up business for himself. If he has not talent enough for this he would cut a very poor figure in any of the learned professions. If he has not talent with a good trade, he is at any rate assured of a good living. If he has talent enough and his tastes lead him toward the professions, his trade will do him no harm; and he always has something upon which to fall back. First give the boy a good education and then a trade. He is then ready to meet the world and battle for life and for position.

The Church and Amusements.

A lecture on the above topic was delivered in the First Church last Sunday evening, before a large congregation, by the Rev. D. M. Wilson. After the introductory services, the singing of which was very fine, the lecturer began by saying that though his text was in the spirit of the Gospel and probably in Christ's own words, yet it is not to be found in the common version. It is taken from a manuscript of the new Testament written about the sixth century. In this manuscript it is said that Christ after uttering the familiar words, "The son of man is Lord also of the Sabbath," happens on a man who is working on that day; "Man," he said to him, "if thou knowest what thou art doing, thou art blessed, but if thou knowest not thou art cursed and a transgressor of the law."

These words admonish men to be altogether sincere, they require the integrity of the human soul. What they mean is that if a man while knowing the exact requirements of a law refuses obedience to it in homage to higher convictions, he is blessed. But, if while still acknowledging the authority of that law he transgresses it, then is he cursed. This is a teaching most applicable to the attitude which many take with regard to amusements. They feel that the church may be right in its condemnation of theatre-going, dancing, and card playing, and yet with that feeling rankling in their hearts they indulge in these amusements. They feel restrained, their conscience goes not with them, and what they do is done slily and as though they were ashamed. What course of action could be more certain to lessen the influence of the church, to blunt the keen edge of conscience, to encourage deceit!

The only sincere course is to renounce these thing, if you think the church is right in its condemnation. Do not let the kingdom of your nature be divided against itself. On the other hand if you know there is nothing essentially bad or vitiating about these amusements, enter into them openly and with free mind and conscience.

Probably the uncertain attitude with regard to amusements is caused by the unreasonableness of the church's requirement. There is no such uncertainty about honoring prohibitions of actual sins. "Do not gamble!" says the church;—all honor the prohibition.—"Do not go to the theatre!" says the church;—at once there is confusion of conscience and subterfuge. The prejudice of the church is inherited, and is directed against a state of things which has ceased to exist. Once the theatre was generally indecent; now it is generally pure and uplifting. Once dancing and card playing were in general associated with boisterousness and debauchery; now the one is generally a graceful accomplishment, and the other is generally a proper pastime; both are recreative and increase sociability. These amusements may really be very beneficial to those who indulge in them. It will generally be found that those great movements of human passion which may in some circumstances be directed toward what is low and defiling, may in other circumstances be directed toward what is in the highest degree ennobling. At the one end is hell, at the other end is Heaven. Too great to be suspended, these movements must be seized in the interest of humanity.

This is essentially true of the great love of representation. Humanity is dramatic. It must and will see the supreme passions of the human soul revealed in action. What power there is in the drama! It had its origin in religion, and has been invariably the result of, and gone on with, the highest developments of ancient and modern civilization. It would be ridiculous to resign such a force to prejudice. It cannot be done. It will inevitably fall into the control of the best minds, and become one of the chief forces in the development of mankind. Already we see the approach of this consummation in the interest which Richard Wagner, Matthew Arnold and others, take in the production of a drama, national in its sphere, which shall minister to man's appreciation of the sublime and heroic through poetry, music, painting, and the highest artistic arrangement. We are to further this result by patronizing only the best theatres and plays. In them we shall find stimulus for the noblest action, and food for the most serious reflection. What the great Goethe wrote is most true:—"The mere man is content if he only sees something represented, the educated man requires to feel, but the refined spectator derives the greatest pleasure from reflection." Let the people bring a moral choice to the drama and they shall receive the best. Let them do it, knowing what they are doing, and they shall be blessed.

TEMPERANCE UNION. The Norfolk County Temperance Union will hold its Quarterly Meeting in West Medway on Thursday next. Morning session in the Methodist Church, at 10 o'clock; afternoon in the Baptist Church, at 2 o'clock; and in the evening at the Congregational Church, at 7 o'clock. A collation will be provided by friends in West Medway.

Paper Money.

Rev. Mr. Perry delivered in his church on Sunday evening last, an able lecture on the advantages and disadvantages of paper money. He took his text from Mark, 14th chap. 11th verse. He said:

Very early representative money was used. The ancient Roman leather money was of representative and not real value. In the 13th and 14th centuries, paper money was found in use in China.

Paper money is of many different kinds. Individuals or firms may issue notes or tokens, which may pass current. These are vulgarly known as shin plasters.

Incorporated banks issue by law their notes. Previous to the days of Charles 1st, the merchants of London placed their coin in the Tower of London for safe keeping. This monarch borrowed without leave this money. The merchants thereafter deposited their spare money with the gold-smiths, taking receipts for the amounts. Soon these receipts were used among themselves instead of the money. Out of this grew the modern bank note.

Many governments have issued paper money. This has been of various kinds. Some has been non-redeemable. Others have been redeemable and the promise kept. Still others have been redeemable in name only.

Paper money may be classified in another way. It may by law be made legal tender, i. e. good to pay all debts, or partial legal tender, like our Greenbacks, which are not legal tender for certain dues to Government, or non-legal tender.

ADVANTAGES OF PAPER MONEY.

1. Paper is more easily and safely transported when the sum is large, than coin. Gold is thirteen times as heavy as water. Fifty thousand dollars in notes would not weigh over one-seventh of a pound. While the same sum in gold would weigh one hundred and eighty pounds. Paper can be more easily concealed about the person.

2. If lost or destroyed, paper not being of real value does not cause so large a loss, as would gold. The holder of the note may lose, but the maker gains. Of course if the note be identified the government or bank will make good the holder's loss. Much is also lost by the wear of coins. In this way paper money is cheaper for the Government.

3. It is a serious question whether there be gold enough, or even gold and silver enough, to supply the world's need of money. Paper money may be needed to supplement gold.

4. Paper money saves interest to the issuer. The governor of Guernsey desired to build a public market, but did not wish to borrow the money. So he issued a thousand pounds in notes and with them paid for labor and materials. As the rents came in he took up these notes. By this device he saved interest, but how? The people loaned him without interest their labor and materials.—The United States issued say $350,000,000 of greenbacks, on which the interest at five per cent, is $17,500,000. This sum represents the average annual saving of interest to the Government. Of course what the Government has gained the people have lost.

5. Paper money meets an emergency. An individual by issuing notes may tide over a crisis. So may a government. The American Colonies had no credit abroad, and very little at home, but by issuing continental notes, they were enabled to pay for service and material, and thus carry forward the war. This was true of the Confederate States, and in some degree of the United States in the war of the rebellion. Paper money has been the hope and frequently the salvation of rebelling states.

DISADVANTAGES.

1. Paper money is more readily counterfeited.

2. It is also more easily destroyed.

3. The danger of weakness of basis is great. The individual or bank may not retain sufficient reserve to redeem its notes and demand. Governments may go to wrecks in the storm of battle.

4. The tendency is to an over-issue, and is inevitably so. The danger of over issue is very great. An individual who puts out his notes has them discounted. If his troubles continue and he issue more notes the discount will increase. This will necessitate the issue of still larger sums, in order to take up those previously issued. This may go on till his paper is no longer accepted. Banks used to have men to carry their notes to as great a distance from home as possible, so that a long time should elapse before presentation for redemption.—This was the origin of the word "carpet-bagger." As banks do not keep in their vaults as much coin as the amount of their circulation, people are suspicious of them. Then result runs on banks, suspensions, failures, a crisis, and hard times.

The history of every issue of paper money by governments is something like this. To meet an emergency the government issues a certain sum solemnly promising to put out no more. The people accept this issue. Perhaps the increase of business may demand this amount. But the time comes when the need of the Government is great. It violates its promise, and issues more. This is not accepted so unwillingly, and it depreciates in its purchasing power. This compels Government to issue in increasing quantities. The depreciation keeps pace with the issues. Importation does not cease, indeed may be increased by the war demands of the Government. The paper money is not current in other countries, so gold and silver must be sent abroad. Also, they drop out of circulation at home. Let us see why these things are so.

It is a fact that a certain amount of money is needed to transact the business of a country, but just how much no man knows. It changes from year to year, depending upon the amount of business, the use of substitutes for money, &c. It varies with the time of year. In our country a much larger sum is needed in the autumn than other portions of the year, because the crops are then to be moved. The fact is that so long as the needed amount is not surpassed, money will hold its value. If however, $600,000,000 be in circulation when $500,000,000 is needed, the former sum will have no greater purchasing power than the latter. There is one exception to this. If the money is gold, since it is worth less for money than for jewelry it will be melted, or since it is worth more in other countries it will be exported.—Thus it would come back to its proper quantity. Inflation is practically impossible with a purely metalic currency.

Again it is a fact that people will use the least valuable of two currencies and hoard the better. They will pay out the clipped coin and keep the new. They will hoard the coin and pay out the paper. This fact is now known as Gersham's law. Thus gold is driven out of circulation. Thus the disadvantages of over-issue are increased.

Every nation has yielded to this tendency to over-issue. Over-issue means inflation of prices. This develops speculation. Speculation leads people to go deeply into debt. This continues till a crash comes and then good-bye to business prosperity for a season.

Each must for self decide on which side the preponderance is. Are the advantages or disadvantages of paper money the greater?

The problems now before the people are these How to overcome the disadvantages of paper money? How to find gold sufficient if these disadvantages are not overcome? How to find something else with the advantages, but without the disadvantages of either?

Our Boston Correspondent.

Journey to Worcester. A glance at its history and growth. Appearance of the city. The Independent Convention. General Butler the nominee for Governor; harmony of proceedings.

SEPTEMBER 25, 1879.

Early on Thursday, September 18th, we left Boston for Worcester in the delegation train bound to the Independent Convention. The weather was all that could be desired for comfort and loveliness,—increasing the pleasure of the route through Brookline, Brighton, Newton City, Needham, Natick, Framingham, Ashland, Westboro, Grafton, Millbury to Worcester, the heart of the Commonwealth, a distance of forty-one miles in one and a half hours. Brookline, Newton and Framingham were especially attractive for the neatness and comfort in appearance of the dwellings and their vicinage in horticultural tastes of the highest order. Passing through Massachusetts or many of the New England states, we see on every side the abodes of quiet comfortable homes and well cultivated farms, the sequence of good morality of their inhabitants, and as happy as any we shall find anywhere on this mundane sphere, the result of industry and a high degree of civilization, emanating from the influence of christian truth and the universal spread of education,—the boon of ancestral blessings; that we of the present generation as authors can claim but a small moiety of praise. We entered Worcester at 10 A. M., passing into one of the finest and most capacious depots of our country,—a solid structure of granite. All was bustle and animation as the great throng emerged from the cars, wending their way to various places, more particularly to Mechanics' Hall, a goodly mile's walk for the pedestrian. We wandered through this beautiful inland city, as much a stranger as if in a foreign land.

As far back as 1837 John Hayward in his New England Gazetteer, tells us Worcester was incorporated in 1684, the Quinsigamond of the Indians, he says, "the central situation of the town, both in regard to County and State, the fertility of its soil and that of the surrounding country, the salubrity of its climate and the industry, intelligence and wealth of its people have long since entitled it to the honor of being called the chief town in the Heart of the Commonwealth. The town is situated and surrounded by hills of gentle acclivity. It is well built and beautifully shaded, and the travellers from every direction are delighted with its beauty and neatness." We were in Worcester forty-two years ago, when the population was 7000. It is now 50,000. We were there when it was but a fair sized town of a million dollars in valuation. Then a rural locality, its good people enjoying the simplicity but rich blessing of a country or pastoral life. Now how changed. A city, the largest in Massachusetts except Boston and Lowell, with all the attractions, bustle and fashions of city life, and not exempt from the evil habits and vices incident to a large community. The main street through the city resembles in many features the Washington street of Boston. The dashing of constant travel by carriage, the horse cars and foot passage are as animated as are daily seen in the highways of our metropolis. Many of the public buildings for which Worcester is famous are costly and elegant.

Mechanics' Hall, in which the Convention was held, has almost the capacity of the "Cradle of Liberty," and like it the walls are decorated with large portraits of Washington and Lincoln and many of the former Governors of Massachusetts. Hon. Albert Palmer of Boston presided with marked ability as President, and his model speech is to be a campaign document. The delegates, some 1400 in number, were as intelligent a class of citizens as ever assembled in Worcester, earnest and harmonious in their action, and confident in their triumph of General B. F. Butler as the next Governor of the Old Bay State, whom they selected by acclamation as their standard bearer in the coming State campaign.

The True State of the Case.

To the Publishers of the Patriot:—

In looking over the Boston Globe of the 16th inst., I saw a piece signed "Union Cutter," which stated that a Contractor in this town, obliged his men to hold up their hands and swear that they would stand by him as long as they lived. I consider it only fair to the Contractor and his workmen, that the true state of the case should be given to the public, and the fact is, that a meeting of the men was called by the "Boss" and the question put to all "who will work or who will not" all that are in favor of working for me, hold up their hands. With one exception the men were unanimous in holding up their hands, the dissenting man asked for another day to consider, which was granted him. That evening he went to the "Boss" and agreed to work, and the next day he was given a stone. Being one of those men who bear a strong resemblance to "a reed shaken by the wind," after working two days he called on the Strike Committee and stated that all the men in the yard, except himself, had taken an oath to stand by the Boss. I presume he was not aware of the difference between an oath and a vote, or perhaps he had the oath fever after the visits he made to Judge Bumpus a few weeks previous. There is as much truth in this man's statement of the oath affairs, as there was in his account of the headstone he was cutting for his wife at the time of the last strike. I would ask Union Cutters how much reliance is to be placed on the statement of a man, who, believing he had taken an oath, tried to serve two masters and make his case good with both. Union Cutters also stated, that the bosses agreed to let the Union men take care of the "scabs," what boss would dare to agree to such a thing in a free country. Hoping that the next time Union Cutter makes a statement for the benefit of the public, he will deal only in facts. I remain yours,

INDEPENDENT.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

ASK the recovered dyspeptics, bilious sufferers, victims of fever and ague, the mercurial diseased patient how they recovered health, cheerful spirits, and good appetite; they will tell you by taking SIMMONS'

LIVER REGULATOR,
The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the World!

For DYSPEPSIA, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Attacks, SICK HEADACHE, Colic, Depression of Spirits, Sour Stomach, Heart Burn, &c., &c.

This unrivalled Southern Remedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is

Purely Vegetable,

containing those Southern Roots and Herbs, which an all-wise Providence has placed in countries where Liver Diseases most prevail. It will cure all Diseases caused by Derangement of the Liver and Bowels.

The SYMPTOMS of Liver Complaint are a bitter or bad taste in the mouth; Pain in the Back, Sides or Joints; often mistaken for Rheumatism; Sour Stomach, Loss of Appetite; Bowels alternately costive and lax; Headache, Loss of memory, with a painful sensation of having failed to do something which ought to have been done; Debility, Low Spirits, a thick yellow appearance of the Skin and Eyes, a dry Cough often mistaken for Consumption.

Sometimes many of these symptoms attend the disease, at others very few; but the Liver, the largest organ in the body, is generally the seat of the disease, and if not Regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness, and DEATH will ensue.

I can recommend as an efficacious remedy for disease of the Liver, Heartburn and Dyspepsia, Simmons' Liver Regulator. LEWIS G. WUNDER, 1625 Master Street, Assistant Post Master, Philadelphia.

"We have tested its virtues personally, and know that for Dyspepsia, Biliousness and throbbing Headache, it is the best medicine the world ever saw.—We have tried forty other remedies before Simmons' Liver Regulator, but none of them gave us more than temporary relief; but the Regulator not only relieved, but cured us." — ED. TELEGRAPH AND MESSENGER, Macon, Ga.

Poetry.

Thoughts by the Fireside.

Life is vast, our troubles many,
 One by one they come and go;
Right prevails, but falsehoods perish
 'Neath the weight of wrong and woe.

Custom often leads us wrong,
 Conscience, justice and truth, never;
Follow these and you will find,
 All is well when death shall sever.

The other life for which we seek,
 A place where time and distance blend,
Is filled from every age and clime,
 With every foe as well as friend.

Salt for Hens.

A writer having noticed in the Rural New Yorker, an article recommending the use of salt where hens had lost their feathers on their head from some unknown cause, tried it and gives the following as the result :—

"Mine were so and I said I would kill or cure ; so I mixed up a half pail of soft feed and put in a large handful of salt. I went out next morning to see what the result was, and all my hens were—what! Dead? No, but awful thirsty. So I gave them some water, and the next evening more salt. My hens all feathered out on their heads, and they stopped eating each other's feathers, a habit hard to break. Salt is a simple remedy for many things. It will cure sick headache, make cream freeze, make the butter come, take ink stains out of cloth of any kind, kill weeds, kill worms, makes the ground cool so it is more congenial to celery, cabbage, &c., ease the itching pain caused by irritable skin diseases like hives, itch, &c., produce vomiting or stop it, as you like ; and many other things too numerous to mention. Still, I once fed some potatoes to young chicks and turkeys that had been boiled with salt corned beef, and killed every one of them."

THE USE OF LIME. An application of lime will be found useful upon any kind of soil, at least once in five or six years. It is generally used at this season with a fall grain crop. But where lime is employed, it will be useless to apply superphosphate, as this combines with the lime, and becomes simple phosphate of lime which is insoluble. Many farmers who have applied superphosphate without effect, may find the explanation in the fact, that their soils were filled with lime, which rendered it inert.

Fuchsias after being exhausted with blooming, should have the terminal shoots of all their branches clipped off ; then set aside for two or three weeks, giving very little water ; then repot in a soil composed of well decomposed leaf mould, mixed with a sprinkling of good garden soil, a few rusty nails, and a layer of charcoal at the bottom of the pot to secure good drainage. In a few weeks new shoots full of flower buds will start all over, growing rapidly.

THE ADVANTAGE OF DRAINING. An English farmer had a water meadow which was overgrown with rushes. He caused it to be thoroughly drained and laid down to grass. Thereafter he was able to cut from it annually four crops of green fodder of the best quality.—Thousands of fields in this country are susceptible of similar improvement.

Moderately fat animals are the most profitable. Every excessively fat animal has been fed at a loss during the latter part of its feeding. When an animal is ready for market sell it ; if there is feed left buy some more lean animals and feed them. The "nimble sixpence" brings the profit.

The great secret of keeping verbenas and petunias through the winter is to have them struck early, and planted either in boxes or pots by the middle of September, so as to be established before winter.

Cayenne pepper and powdered charcoal, mixed with Indian meal and fed to stock, will cure many ailments with which, at this season of the year, cattle, swine, &c., are afflicted.

Anecdotes.

Customer to bookseller—"The book trade is affected, I suppose, by the general depression ?

"What kind of books feel it most ?"

"Pocket books," was the reply.

In giving geography lessons, a schoolmaster down east asked a boy, "What State do you live in ?"

To which the boy drawled out through his nose in reply, "A state of sin and misery !"

"This," said the dentist, "is my office."

"And that ?" inquired the visitor, pointing to the apartment where stood the tooth-pulling chair.

"Ah, that," replied the proprietor, "that is my drawing-room."

An inveterate old chicken thief in Alabama, who had a marvelous faculty of gliding out of a close corner, was at last caught in a close corner with a chicken in his hat. He denied the stealing of it, and on being asked how then it got into his hat, he solemnly said :—

"Dat, marser, is jes' what 'stonishes me ; but fo' de Lord, I spec's it mus' hab crawled up my breeches leg !"

A well-known Bostonian was trying a horse one day in company with the owner, a professional "jockey." Having driven him a mile or two, the gentleman, who noticed that he pulled pretty hard, and showed a good deal of spirit, requiring constant watching and a steady rein, said :—

"Do you think that is just the horse for a woman to drive ?"

"Well, sir," answered the jockey, "I must say that I shouldn't want to marry the woman that could drive that horse.

How to Make a Poultice.

Dr. Brunton, in Bran, the new London periodical, gives the following practical hints on this subject :—"The common practice in making poultices of mixing the linseed meal with hot water, and applying directly to the skin is quite wrong ; because if we do not wish to burn the patient, we must wait until a great portion of the heat has been lost. The proper method is to take a flannel bag (the size of the poultice required,) to fill this with the linseed poultice as hot as it can possibly be made, and to put between this and the skin a second piece of flannel, so that there shall be at least two thicknesses of flannel between the skin and the poultice itself. Above the poultice should be placed more flannel, or a piece of cotton wool, to prevent it from getting cold. By this method we are able to apply the linseed meal boiling hot, without burning the patient, and the heat, gradually diffusing through the flannel, affords a grateful sense of relief which cannot be obtained by other means. There are few ways in which such marked relief is given to abdominal pain as by the application of a poultice in this manner."
